Am Nachmittage des 16. März trat das Comite wieder zusammen, um die Entscheidung entgegenzunehmen. Dieselbe, in Maschinenschrift abgefaßt, wurde verlesen und jeder Seite eine Abschrift eingehändigt. Die Entscheidung lautet wörtlich wie folgt:

Vereinigte Bräderschaft der Bauschreiner und Zimmerleute von Amerika.

Indianapolis, Ind., 16. März 1903.

An die Herren (folgen die Namen der Vertreter beiderseits):

Mit der Annahme einer Resolution seitens der New Orleans Convention der A. F. of L. wurde die zwischen der Am. Woodworkers' Int. Union und der B. B. der Zimmerleute und Bauschreiner von Amerika herrschende Streitfrage an ein aus fünf Vertretern jeder der beiden Organisationen zu bestehendes Comite zur Schlichtung verwiesen, und im Falle sich dieses Comite nicht einigen könne, sollte es einen Schiedsrichter erwählen, welcher über die Streitpunkte eine Entscheidung fällen solle.

Von der Ueberzeugung ausgehend, daß die beiderseitigen Comites zu keiner zufriedenstellenden Entscheidung kommen würden, und vor der Entgegennahme von Beweismaterial in der Streitfrage, erwählten mich dieselben als Schiedsrichter, mit der Instruktion, alle Aussagen und Argumente beiderseits anzuhören und mein begründetes Urtheil über die Streitfragen abzugeben.

Gänzlich unbetheilt und unbekannt mit den den Streitigkeiten zu Grunde liegenden Thatsachen, bin ich nur bestrebt, die Einigkeit und das gute Einvernehmen zu fördern, und nachdem ich alle Argumente und eingegangenes Beweismaterial gewissenhaft in Erwägung gezogen habe, unterbreite ich hiermit folgende Entscheidung, wie mir sie nach meinem besten Wissen und Gewissen am geeignetsten, gerechtesten und unparteiischsten erscheint:

1. Unwiderlegliche Beweise wurden erbracht, daß die Int. Machine Woodworkers' Union in 1890 organisiert wurde. P. J. McGuire, der damalige G. E. der B. B., erhob Einwand gegen die Gewährung eines Charters seitens der A. F. of L. an die Machine Woodworkers, aber in 1891 widerrief P. J. McGuire diesen Protest und der Machine Woodworkers' Int. Union wurde ein Charter gewährt. Von 1891 bis 1894 betrieb die Machine Woodworkers' Union eine Agitation unter den Maschinenarbeitern dieses Landes, um dieselben zu organisiren, wogegen die B. B. keinerlei Einwand erhob. Die Machine Woodworkers sahen sich in der Beanspruchung der Controlle über die Shop-Arbeiter dadurch ermuthigt, daß die Convention der B. B., abgehalten in Indianapolis im September 1894, folgende Resolution annahm:

„Wir, Ihr Organisations-Comite, nachdem wir den Rath der Vertreter der Städte Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Brooklyn und Cincinnati betreffs des Gesuches der Machine Woodworkers' Union eingeholt haben, erlauben uns, Folgendes zu berichten:

Wir finden, daß unter den Vertretern oben erwähnter Städte die allgemeine Ansicht vorherrscht, und wir sind der Meinung, daß es den Interessen der B. B. und der organisierten Arbeiter im Allgemeinen am dienlichsten sei, wenn der Int. Machine Woodworkers' Union völlige Jurisdiktion über alle Sägemühlen-Arbeiter, Carpenter ausgenommen, gewährt würde, welche zeitweise an Trim-Arbeit, als Stellmacher oder Treppenhauer betheilig sind. Sollte ein Sägemühlen-Arbeiter (mill hand) wünschen, seine Mitgliedschaft auf die Machine Woodworkers' Union zu übertragen, so soll er alle seine Rückstände an seine Local-Union begleichen, und die Machine Woodworkers' Union soll ihn sofort als ein zu allen Benefits berechtigtes Mitglied anerkennen. Und sollte eine Maschinenarbeiter-Union ihre Zugehörigkeit auf die Machine Woodworkers' Union übertragen, so sollte diese ihre Rückstände an die B. B. entrichten und kostenfrei einen Charter und Zubehör erhalten, und jedes deren Mitglieder sollte in ersterer Organisation sofort zu allen Benefits berechtigt sein.

Wir empfehlen, daß die B. B. der Machine Woodworkers' Int. Union in der Organisirung ihres Gewerkes durch's ganze Land ihre Unterstützung gewähren möge.“

In der Carpenter-Convention in 1894 suchte eine Maschinenarbeiter-Union in Cincinnati um Indossirung ihres Labels nach. Es wurde eine Resolution angenommen, welche das Gesuch, in Anbetracht der Thatsache, daß die Convention der Machine Woodworkers' Union volle Controlle über Maschinenarbeiter zugestanden hatte, an jene Union verwies, und diese Resolution wurde von dem anwesenden Vertreter der Machine Woodworkers' Union gutgeheißen.

Während einer in 1894 in Cincinnati abgehaltenen Convention der Int. Möbelarbeiter-Union hielten Vertreter der B. B., Machine Woodworkers und Möbelarbeiter eine Konferenz ab, um eine Verschmelzung dieser drei Organisationen herbeizuführen. Dieser Versuch war erfolglos, indem die Carpenters erklärten, daß die Betheiligung der Carpenters an dieser Vereinigung unpraktisch sei.

Die Verschmelzung der Machine Woodworkers mit der Int. Möbelarbeiter-Union.

In 1895 fand die Verschmelzung der Int. Möbelarbeiter-Union (dieselbe wurde 1873 gegründet) mit der Int. Machine Woodworkers' Union statt. Beide dieser Organisationen hatten Jurisdiktion über Tischler, Möbelarbeiter und Holzarbeiter in Sägemühlen und Fabriken.

In 1895 erhob der Vertreter der Am. Woodworkers Protest bei dem General-Sekretär der B. B. gegen die Gewährung eines Charters an eine Maschinenarbeiter-Union in New York. McGuire gab zu, daß ein Charter gewährt wurde, behauptete aber, daß

Diese Union größtentheils aus Arbeitern zusammengefasst sei, welche in Sägemühlen, sowohl wie an Bauten, beschäftigt seien, und gab dem Vertreter der Am. Woodworkers die Versicherung, daß der Indianapoliser Vertrag eingehalten werden würde.

In den Jahren 1895 und 1897 entstanden einige Reibungen zwischen Local-Unions beider Organisationen, und die Beamten der B. B. erklärten, für lokale Differenzen nicht verantwortlich zu sein. Die General-Beamten beider Organisationen kamen schließlich dahin überein, daß etwas geschehen müsse, um Harmonie zu schaffen, und im Spätjahre 1897 wurde folgender Vertrag mit den General-Executiv-Boards beider Organisationen vereinbart:

Der Vertrag von 1897.

„Es ist hiermit zwischen der Amalgamated Woodworkers' International Union, welche hinfür als die A. W. B. J. U. bekannt sein soll, und der Vereinigten Bruderschaft der Carpenters und Joiners, welche hinfür als die B. B. bekannt sein soll, vereinbart, daß: Erstens, der A. W. B. J. U. über alle Sägemühlenarbeiter (mill hands), Carpenters, die zeitweise an Sägemühlenarbeit beschäftigt sein mögen, oder Stellmacher und Treppenhauer ausgenommen, volle Jurisdiktion gewährt werden soll. Zweitens: Die Bestimmungen dieses Vertrages sollen auf diejenigen, die jetzt Mitglieder der B. B. und in Hobelmühlen beschäftigt sind, keine Anwendung finden. Drittens: Die B. B. soll alleinige Kontrolle über alle Carpenter-Arbeit außerhalb der Shops (outside carpenter work) haben, sowie über Solche, die an der Aufstellung von Office- und Store-Einrichtungen beschäftigt sind.“

Die Behauptungen der Carpenter.

Die Vertreter der B. B. behaupten, daß ihnen ihre Constitution Jurisdiktion zuertheilt über alle in Hobelmühlen beschäftigten Banarbeiters (bench hands) und über alle Tischler (cabinetmakers), welche an Carpenter-Arbeit beschäftigt sind. Sie geben vor, daß die Handlungsweise ihrer Indianapoliser Convention ungesetzlich und ein Vorstoß gegen ihre Constitution war; daß ihre Organisation sich nie des Control-Rechtes über Maschinenarbeiter und Tischler entäußert hätte; daß, um eine erfolgreiche und fortschrittliche Organisation sein zu können, sie zur Jurisdiktion und Kontrolle über alle Holzarbeiter, welche an dem Aufbau und der Reparatur von Gebäuden betheilig sind, berechtigt sein müßte.

Während sie zugeben, daß die in 1894 und 1897 eingegangenen Verträge nicht weggeleugnet werden könnten, behaupten sie, daß der 1897er Vertrag, welchen ihr G. E. B. eingieng, unkonstitutionell war, indem derselbe weder von den District-Councils noch von den Local-Unions ratifiziert wurde.

Sie, die Carpenters, behaupten ferner, daß in Folge der in ihrem Gewerke stattgefundenen Arbeits-Verschleibungen die New Yorker Convention der B. B. volle Kontrolle über alle Stellmacher, Hobelmühlenarbeiter und Tischler, welche an Carpenter-Arbeit betheiligt sind, und über alle Holz-Maschinenarbeiter übernommen, und alle Verträge, welche zwischen der B. B. und irgend einer anderen anderen Organisation bestanden, aufgelöst und für außer Kraft erklärt habe.

Die in 1900 in Scranton, Pa., abgehaltene Convention der B. B. bestätigte und ratifizierte die Maßnahmen der Convention von 1898, Jurisdiktion über Holz-Maschinenarbeit und Tischlerarbeit (cabinetwork) beanspruchend. In dieser Convention weigerten sich die Carpenter absolut, irgend eine andere Holzarbeiter-Organisation anzuerkennen und beanspruchten unumschränkte Kontrolle über alle Leute, in Uebereinstimmung mit, und wie sie in Sect. 64 ihrer Constitution bezeichnet waren.

Entscheidungs-Gründe.

Das unterbreitete Beweismaterial läßt klar und offen erkennen, daß die B. B. willkürlich alle Bestimmungen des mit den Machine Woodworkers in 1894 in Indianapolis eingegangenen Vertrages, sowie des zwischen den General-Executiv-Boards der Am. Woodworkers und der B. B. in 1897 eingegangenen Vertrages, gebrochen hat, ohne die Beamten der Am. Woodworkers zu Rathe zu ziehen. Nach der Verschmelzung der Möbelerbeiter mit den Machine Woodworkers und deren Annahme des Namens A. W. B. J. U. übernahm diese Organisation Kontrolle und Jurisdiktion über alle Holzarbeiter in Hobelmühlen, Möbel-Fabriken und über an der Beendigung innerer Dekorationsarbeiten (interior finish) beschäftigten Tischler.

Die Carpenters machten keinen Versuch, die Am. Woodworkers an der Organisation oben erwähnter Geschäftszweige zu verhindern, und die Vertreter der B. B. erhoben keinen Einwand, welcher die Am. Woodworkers in der Ausübung ihres gesetzlichen Rechtes auf Kontrolle über Arbeiter in Hobelmühlen und Möbel-Fabriken hätte aufhalten können. Die Machine Woodworkers verwandten ihre Zeit und ihr Geld für die Organisation der Arbeiter in den Sägemühlen, Fabriken und Cabinet Shops in dem guten Glauben; daß die Carpenter diesen Vertrag halten würden.

Erfst in 1898, vier Jahre nachdem der Vertrag eingegangen war, machten die Carpenters offiziell Anspruch auf Kontrolle über der Jurisdiktion der Am. Woodworkers unterstehenden Gewerkszweige. Alle Verträge mit den Am. Woodworkers wurden außer Kraft gesetzt und ohne die interessierten Theile offiziell zu benachrichtigen. Alsdann begannen die Carpenters die Local-Unions der Am. Woodworkers zu zerstören und brachten sie durch Verlockungen zum Verlassen ihrer eigenen Organisation und zum Uebertritt zur B. B.

Nicht die Spur von Beweismaterial wurde erbracht für die Verletzung seitens der Am. Woodworkers irgend eines Paragraphen des Contractes oder Theiles des Contractes, den sie mit der B. B. abschloß.

Die Entscheidung.

Nach genauem Ueberblick der Situation und in Uebereinstimmung mit dem Beweismaterial und den gemachten Aussagen und in Anbetracht der Thatfache, daß die B. B. den Am. Woodworkers Kontrolle gab über die in deren Constitution angeführten Gewerkszweige, entscheide ich hiermit, daß alle in Hobelmühlen, Möbel- und Interior Finish-Fabriken beschäftigten Holzarbeiter rechtlich der Jurisdiktion der A. W. B. J. U. unterstehen. Jedoch besagter Organisation (der A. W. B. J. U.) soll nicht das Jurisdiktions-Recht über Stellmacher, Treppenhauer oder über Arbeit an Gebäuden oder Store- und Office-Einrichtungs-Arbeiten zugestanden sein.

Die B. B. soll absolute Jurisdiktion haben über alle Arbeit an neuen und alten Gebäuden und über die Aufstellung von Store- und Office-Einrichtungen. Es ist hier zu beachten, daß diese Entscheidung keinen Einfluß haben soll auf irgend einen Vertrag lokaler Natur, welcher jetzt in Kraft oder nachträglich eingegangen werden mag. Noch soll sie auf Verträge, welche die A. W. B. J. U. mit anderen Organisationen bezüglich der Jurisdiktion anderer Gewerke, welche an der Fertigstellung, dem Firnissen oder an Holzhäuser- oder Anstreich-Arbeiten an Holz- und Cabinet-Arbeit in Sägemühlen, Fabriken oder Gebäuden thätig sind, eingegangen ist, einen Einfluß haben oder dieselben außer Kraft setzen.

Achtungsvoll und brüderlichst unterbreitet.
P. J. Downey, Schiedsrichter.

Die Vertreter der B. B. erhoben sofort Einwand und legten Protest ein gegen diese Entscheidung, aus folgenden Gründen:

1. Die Entscheidung steht im Widerspruch mit den berichteten Thatfachen und dem unterbreiteten Beweismaterial.

2. Als das gemeinschaftliche Comité zusammentrat, wurde ausdrücklich vereinbart, daß die Entscheidung am Orte getroffen werden solle und ehe Verlegung eintreift.

3. Es war ausdrücklich vereinbart, daß eine Person, welche an früheren Entscheidungen in der Streitfrage Theil genommen, nicht als Schiedsrichter wählbar sein solle. P. J. Downey hat aber während der Comité-Verhandlungen zugegeben, daß er auf der Scranton Convention der A. W. B. J. U. als Sekretär des Beschwerde-Comites fungierte, welche eine theilweise Entscheidung in der Frage abgab, und war daher für die Funktion als Schiedsrichter nicht wählbar, obschon wir es ihm nicht verdenken, wenn er, um sich consequent zu bleiben, jetzt eine Entscheidung getroffen hat, die mit seiner Entscheidung in Scranton übereinstimmt.

Das Comité vertrat sich hierauf.
Zur Bekräftigung obiger Einwände macht das Comité der B. B. auf folgende Thatfachen aufmerksam:

In seiner Entscheidung auf Seite 932 des stenographischen Protokolls sagt P. J. Downey: „Gänzlich unbetheiligt und unbekannt mit den den Streitigkeiten zu Grunde liegenden Thatfachen.“

Diese Darstellung ist falsch, denn aus den Verhandlungen der Scranton Convention der A. W. B. J. U. geht hervor, daß P. J. Downey als Sekretär des Beschwerde-Comites über eine von den Am. Woodworkers eingebrachte und gegen die B. B. gerichtete Resolution berichte und entscheide, daß die B. B. den vorliegenden Indianapoliser Vertrag verlegt hätte.

Auf Seite 933 des Protokolls behauptet der Schiedsrichter, daß die in 1894 in Indianapolis abgehaltene Convention der B. B. eine Resolution annahm, welche den Machine Woodworkers gewisse Jurisdiktion gab. Aus den Verhandlungen der Indianapoliser Convention geht aber hervor, daß in der diesbezüglichen Frage keine Resolution Annahme fand, sondern nur ein Bericht des Organisations-Comites entgegengenommen wurde.

Der Schiedsrichter läßt das auf Seite 147 des Protokolls angeführte Beweismaterial vollständig außer Acht, in welchem die Thatfache konstatirt ist, daß die Indianapoliser Convention kurz nachdem sie obigem Berichte zustimmte, denselben durch den Beschluß, Tischler (cabinetmakers), Maschinenarbeiter und bench hands mit der Genehmigung der interessierten Local-Unions und District-Councils aufzunehmen, wirkungslos machte.

Ferner: In dem Zugeständniß, welches die Convention in der Entgegennahme des Berichtes des Organisations-Comites den Machine Woodworkers machte, waren Maschinenarbeiter und Tischler, welche in Shops und Fabriken mit der Herstellung von Trim-Arbeit beschäftigt sind, nicht eingeschlossen, wie es das auf Seiten 379 und 383 des Protokolls angeführte Beweismaterial und die Indianapoliser Conventions-Verhandlungen zur Genüge beweisen; sowie auch die Thatfache, daß auf dieser Convention keine Constitutions-Veränderung vorgenommen wurde, welche Personen, welche in diesen Gewerkszweigen betheiligt sind, von der Mitgliedschaft in der B. B. ausschließt.

Auf Seite 935 des Protokolls sagt der Schiedsrichter: „Während einer in 1894 in Cincinnati abgehaltenen Convention der Int. Möbelerbeiter-Union hielten Vertreter der B. B., Machine Woodworkers und Möbelerbeiter eine Konferenz ab.“ Auch dies ist falsch, wie das auf Seite 160 des Protokolls angeführte Beweismaterial zeigt. Eine solche Konferenz wurde nicht zu der oben erwähnten Zeit in Cincinnati, sondern am 13. Januar 1895 mit dem G. E. B. der B. B. in deren Hauptquartier in Philadelphia abgehalten.

Auch die Behauptung des Schiedsrichters auf Seite 935 des Protokolls, auf die Möbelerbeiter-Union und die Machine Woodworkers Bezug nehmend, daß beide dieser Organisationen Jurisdiktion über Tischler, Möbelerbeiter und Holzarbeiter in Sägemühlen und Fabriken gehabt hätten, ist nicht den Thatfachen entsprechend. Wie aus dem Protokoll, Seiten 292-294, hervorgeht, erstreckte sich die Jurisdiktion der Int. Möbelerbeiter-Union laut ihrer Constitution, welche als Beweismaterial vorlag, nur auf Tischler und Maschinenarbeiter, welche in der Möbelfabrikation betheiligt waren.

Der Schiedsrichter nimmt keinerlei Notiz von der Thatfache, daß nach der Verschmelzung der Int. Möbelerbeiter-Union und der Machine Woodworkers' Union und der Gründung einer neuen Organisation, der Am. W. B. J. U., alle mit der einen oder anderen und der B. B. vermeintlich eingegangenen Verträge hinfällig wurden. Ebensovienig nimmt er Notiz von der Thatfache, daß der damalige G. E. B. der B. B., P. J. McGuire, in einem Schreiben an die A. W. B. J. U., welches dem Comité vorlag, und auf Seite 386 des Protokolls angeführt ist, diese Union in obigem Sinne benachrichtigte, noch daß sich die A. W. B. J. U. des Nichtbestehens eines Vertrages bewußt war, indem sie von dieser Zeit an häufig versuchte, einen Vertrag mit der B. B. zustande zu bringen.

Auf Seite 938 des Protokolls sagt der Schiedsrichter: Die B. B. giebt zu, daß „das Eingehen eines Vertrages in 1894 und 1897 nicht weggeleugnet werden kann.“ Diese Behauptung ist durchaus falsch. In dem ganzen wörtlichen Protokoll ist keine Silbe enthalten, welche zeigt, daß die B. B. Derartiges zugegeben, sondern aus den Verhandlungen geht von Anfang bis zu Ende hervor, daß wir das Bestehen eines Vertrages nicht zugegeben, noch daß die Indianapoliser Convention einen solchen eingegangen ist.

Der Schiedsrichter sagt weiter auf Seite 938 des Protokolls: Die Carpenters behaupten, daß in Folge der Arbeitsverschleibungen im Carpenter-Gewerke die B. B. in ihrer Convention in New York in 1898 Kontrolle und Jurisdiktion über alle Stellmacher, Hobelmühlen-Arbeiter, Tischler und Maschinen-Arbeiter übernommen habe. Auch diese Darstellung der Thatfachen ist absolut falsch und ohne die leiseste Begründung. Nirgends im Protokoll findet sich eine derartige Behauptung; im Gegentheil, die Thatfachen, wie sie dem Schiedsrichter unterbreitet wurden (siehe Seiten 101-104 des Protokolls), zeigen, daß die B. B. schon seit 1886 Jurisdiktion über alle diese Gewerkszweige beanspruchte.

Auf Seite 939 des Protokolls sagt der Schiedsrichter: Die B. B. machte keinen Versuch, Maschinenarbeiter und Shoparbeiter unter ihrer Jurisdiktion zu organisieren. Dies steht wiederum nicht im Einklang mit dem Beweismaterial, welches wir unterbreitet haben, in welchem nachgewiesen ist, daß zur Zeit der Indianapoliser Convention zwölf ausschließlich aus Tischlern und Maschinenarbeitern zusammengesetzte Local-Unions der B. B. angehörten.

Der Schiedsrichter sagt ferner auf Seite 940 des Protokolls: Aus dem mir vorgelegten Beweismaterial ist nicht im Geringsten ersichtlich, daß die A. W. B. J. U. jemals irgend einen Theil ihres mit der B. B. eingegangenen Vertrages gebrochen hat. „Daß gar kein Vertrag mit der B. B. bestand, ist bereits nachgewiesen; wollten wir aber annehmen, daß die Entgegennahme des Berichtes des Organisations-Comites in Indianapolis ein solcher war, so hat Ihr Comité (siehe Seite 477 des Protokolls) nachgewiesen, daß die A. W. B. J. U. diesen Vertrag verletzten, indem sie in Chicago von den Fabrikanten die ausschließliche Beschäftigung von Maschinenarbeitern verlangte, welche mit einer Mitgliedschaft ihrer Union versehen waren, obschon Thos. J. Kibb auf der Convention in Indianapolis versprach, daß die Mitgliedschaften der B. B. in allen Shops und Fabriken anerkannt werden würden. (Siehe Seite 42 der Verhandlungen der Indianapoliser Convention.)“

Der deutsche Holzarbeiterverband veröffentlicht in der Nr. 47 der „Holzarb.-Ztg.“ seine Abrechnung für das zweite Quartal 1902. Der Verband zählte am Schlusse des zweiten Quartals 69,910 Mitglieder gegen 68,483 im vorigen Quartal. Aufgenommen wurden im zweiten Quartal rund 8750 Mitglieder, im vorigen Quartal waren es 6850. Die Summe der gezahlten Beiträge ist von 192,202 im ersten Quartal auf 194,239 im zweiten gestiegen. Die Extra-beiträge weisen diesmal die hohe Summe von 37,592 Mk., gegen nur 7661 im vorigen Quartal. Der Rassenbestand ist am Schlusse des zweiten Quartals auf 406,225 Mk. gestiegen, während er im gleichen Quartal des Vorjahres erst 201,278 Mk. betrug. Demnach hat der Rassenbestand sich im Zeitraum dieses Jahres mehr als verdoppelt.

Die Pariser Hutmacher, 1100 an der Zahl, haben kürzlich einen Ausstand siegreich durchgeführt. Es handelte sich darum, von den Arbeitgebern die Anerkennung eines von der Union ausgearbeiteten neuen Tariffs zu erzwingen. Die Arbeitgeber, die Anfangs gedroht hatten, ihre Werkstätten für mehrere Monate zu schließen, waren schließlich gerne bereit, mit den Vertretern der Union zu verhandeln und die geforderte Lohnerhöhung zu bewilligen.

Der Vorstand des Bergarbeiterverbandes giebt jetzt für seine sämtlichen Mitglieder ein Auf-sage von 47,000 Exemplaren erscheinendes polnischsprachiges Bergarbeiter-Organ „Gazeta Gornicza“ heraus, das die siebente Seite der „Deutschen Berg- und Hüttenarbeiter-Zeitung“ einnimmt. Als Redakteur der polnischen Abtheilung des Blattes zeichnet Victor Kalinowski in Herne.

Ein Congreß der Gasarbeiter Deutschlands soll am 18. April 1903 in Berlin abgehalten werden. Der hauptsächlichste Punkt der Tagesordnung des Congresses ist die Forderung des Achtstundentages für die Gasarbeiter. Heute wird in den meisten deutschen Gasanstalten noch 10-12 Stunden, beim Schichtwechsel sogar 18-24 Stunden gearbeitet.

Ein internationaler Stein-arbeiter-Congreß soll zu Pfingsten in Zürich stattfinden, wozu die einberufende schweizerische Organisation der Steinarbeiter, andere Organisationen des Gewerkes, nicht nur Europa's, sondern auch der überseeischen Länder einladet.

A Nos Membres de la Langue Francaise

Conformément d'une recommandation de notre dernière Convention tenu à Atlanta, Ga., et par décision du Comité Général Exécutive, commencent avec ce numero, une page de notre journal sera assignée à la langue française. Nous espérons que nos Unions Locales et membres de la langue française s'engageront à nous envoyer des communications, rapports ou articles et qu'ils feront tout leur possible de faire cette page française intéressante et efficace.

La Situation Économique des Ouvriers Travaillant le Bois

Nous divisons les ouvriers, travaillant le bois dans notre pays dans les différentes catégories tel que: Charpentiers, menuisiers, ébénistes et les hommes conduisant les machines à travailler le bois (mill-workers).

Les conditions de ses divers catégories varient presque autant que le genre de leur travail.

Les uns bâtissent les maisons, les autres préparent le matériel pour bâtiment dans les ateliers. Les ébénistes, en dehors de la fabrication du meuble font le genre d'ouvrage appelé "sur commande," suivant les dessins qui leurs sont fournie, et les machinistes, ou mill-hands, s'occupent des spécialités pour bâtiment, tel que portes, fenêtres, lambrequins, etc., ou alors, préparent les détails pour la fabrication du meuble en grand, système de fabrique.

Pour bien comprendre le principe qui a guidé l'union fraternelle des charpentiers et menuisiers jusqu'à aujourd'hui, il faut d'abord considéré la condition spéciale économique donné à chacune de ces divers branches, leur système de travail, leurs salaires, enfin les conditions générales aussi bien que les rapports qu'ils ont entre eux.

Notre but, en ce faisant, est de prouver non seulement l'activité de l'organisation en générale mais encore la nécessité d'unir sous un même drapeau tous ceux, qui de près ou de loin manient les outils nécessaires à l'exécution de notre métier.

Nous citons en première ligne le charpentier c'est l'ouvrier qui essentiellement construit le squelette du bâtiment. Il érige les poutres. Habille la maison à l'extérieure élève les partitions, monte les échafaudages pour maçons, travailleurs du fer, couvreurs, plombiers, peintres, etc. C'est la partie la plus dangereuse du métier. Les assurances sur la vie refusent souvent de prendre les risques de ce ouvrier, et mettent sur leurs listes les charpentiers comme des gens exerçant un métier trop dangereux pour profiter du bénéfice de leur assurance. Pour avoir le privilège de se casser le cou plus sûrement qu'un autre genre de travail l'exigerait le salaire du charpentier qui varie de $2.50 ce $4.50 par jour, avec une moyenne de 220 journées de travail dans l'année, ce qui réduit le salaire de 40 per cent. est absolument insuffisant à un père de famille pour nourrir les siens. Pourtant le grand entrepreneur aussi bien que le petit bourgeois crie au vol quand l'union fraternelle demande le maximum du salaire. Ces gens oublient que cette modeste somme est payé à un ouvrier, qui en partant le matin, n'est jamais certain de rentrer vivant le soir au sein de sa famille. Ils ne songent guère que le grand froid aussi bien que les grands chaleurs sont les ennemis naturels du charpentier. Si l'ouvrier, qui se cramponne à une salive couverte d'une épaisseur de glace en hiver lâche son soutien, il se trouvera bientôt écrasé dans une chute de plusieurs étages le crâne fracassé, ou les jambes ou bras cassés, les reins défoncés. Si dans les grandes chaleurs les statisticiens de nos grandes villes nous fait part, que le nombre de tués par un coup de soleil se monte à 100 et plus dans une journée, les journaux nous dirons le lendemain, que 20 ou 30 pour cent. de ces tués se composaient de travailleurs, qui par leur dure labeur sont exposés tout une journée aux rayons mortels du soleil d'été.

Est-ce donc trop de réclamer une augmentation de cette maigre pitance que le capitaliste ou le patron, l'entrepreneur ou le propriétaire nous cède à regret? N'est-ce pas notre devoir de laisser quelques moyens d'existence à la veuve, aux orphelins de ceux qui sont morts d'une mort prématurée, occasionnée par les dangers du métier?

Eh pourtant, camarades, quel est le sort de la grande majorité des ouvriers de ce métier. Les plus heureux sont, ou se croient ceux qui a force d'économie et de bonne fortune deviennent les possesseurs d'une méchante petite cabane, souvent bâtu soi même après les heures de travail, ou comme beaucoup d'autres, l'ont acquis en prenant une forte hypothèque qu'à grande peine ils arriveront à amortir lorsque la petite demeure n'est plus bonne que pour la démolition.

Le charpentier batie les palais des riches, les grands édifices du commerce, les monuments du gouvernement, et les immenses fabriques de l'industrie, et a sa mort souvent il ne reste pas assez pour les quatre planches qui suffisent à son enterrement.

Dans un prochain numéro nous parlerons du menuisier.

ALPHONSE H. KENROD.

Le XXII Congrès de la Fédération Américaine du Travail.

Extrait d'une revue par "Jean Longuet" dans "Le Mouvement Socialiste" un périodique, composé par des ouvriers syndiqués (membres des unions de métier) paraissant à Paris, France.

Nous avons déjà montrée l'importance, pour l'avenir du mouvement ouvrier américain, de la question des conflits de "juridiction" entre syndicats. Elle reproduit sous une forme légèrement modifiée par les conditions locales, la lutte entre partisans des fédérations de métier et fédérations d'industrie qui divisa fréquemment de récents Congrès syndicaux en France.

Les "autonomistes" défendent l'organisation des fédérations de métiers et s'opposent violemment aux "empiétements" des fédérations d'industrie qui prétendent réunir dans leur organisation non seulement les ouvriers d'une profession déterminée mais tous les ouvriers des métiers similaires.

Dans certains cas ces conflits semblent presque inextricables, comme par exemple dans cette lutte entre "l'Union Internationale des Machinistes" et "l'Union des Brasseurs" à laquelle nous avons déjà fait allusion et qui est motivée par la question de savoir à laquelle des deux organisations doivent adhérer les mécaniciens employés dans les brasseries.

En Amérique, ce sont surtout les éléments avancés de la Fédération, les socialistes qui défendent la tactique industrialiste, alors que les vieux unionistes sont partisans du principe de "l'autonomie."

La question soulevait tellement de passions dans le congrès que plusieurs journées furent occupées par les récriminations échangées entre les organisations des charpentiers et des travailleurs du bois, des brasseurs et des mécaniciens, des marins et des pêcheurs, des mouleurs et des polisseurs sur métaux, des plombiers et des électriciens, des travailleurs du bois et des facteurs en piano.

C'est lorsque le congrès fut absolument lassé par ces débats stériles que plusieurs délégués socialistes, notamment Hayes, Slayton et Barnes, proposèrent d'appliquer, dans ce conflit entre organisations ouvrières, la méthode d'arbitrage et de négociations savantes si chères aux dirigeants conservateurs de la Fédération dans les conflits entre les capitalistes et les salariés.

Pris à leur propre piège, les leaders syndicalistes conservateurs durent se rallier à cette sage tactique et tous les conflits entre unions furent renvoyés par le congrès à des commissions arbitrales composées par quantités égales de représentants des unions intéressées.

Quels que soient les résultats de cette procédure elle ne donnera certainement pas de plus mauvais résultats que celle qui avait été suivie précédemment et qui consistait à renvoyer les conflits devant le Comité exécutif de la Fédération dont l'impartialité était très douteuse, les "autonomistes" y ayant une majorité des trois quarts.

Ce fut au début de la séance du mercredi 19 novembre que vint, devant le Congrès de la Nouvelle-Orléans, la discussion sur le socialisme, et toute la journée, soit six heures de discussion, fut consacrée à cette question.

La commission des résolutions dans laquelle la majorité appartenait aux dirigeants conservateurs de la Fédération, avaient rejeté les sept propositions socialistes soumises au Congrès et proposait de s'en tenir à la résolution votée l'année précédente au Congrès de Scranton Celle-ci affirmait entre autres, que:

"Les buts poursuivis, les désirs et les aspirations des trade-unionistes comprennent tout ce que l'on peut désirer pour le bien-être de la famille humaine et pour cette raison, nous attendons et désirons l'entier concours des forces progressives qui luttent pour l'amélioration du sort de l'humanité."

Elle ajoutait "que la Fédération américaine du Travail était d'accord avec l'ensemble des socialistes dans leurs efforts pour obtenir de meilleurs conditions pour le travail." Elle invitait en outre les unions et leurs membres à discuter les questions politiques et économiques mais refusait de leur indiquer pour quel parti ils devaient manifester leurs sympathies.

Le citoyen Max Hayes de Cleveland, délégué de l'Union internationale des typographes, déposa alors la motion suivante:

"Considérant que le capital est le produit du travail accumulé de toutes les générations humaine et qu'il n'est pas possible de considérer que le salaire soit l'équivalent du travail fourni par l'ouv-rier, que la mission des syndicats est de protéger les salariés contre l'oppression, de les délivrer de toutes les formes de l'iniquité, par conséquent.

"Le vingt-deuxième congrès annuel de la Fédération Américaine du Travail invite la classe ouvrière à organiser son pouvoir économique et politique afin d'obtenir pour la classe productrice le produit intégral de son travail, la suppression du salariat et l'établissement de la république socialiste ("an industrial cooperative democracy.")

On passe ensuite au vote et une proposition demandant l'ordre du jour pur et simple fut écartée à une énorme majorité. Le vote par mandats eut ensuite lieu sur la proposition de Hayes. Elle obtint 4.203 contre 4.865. C'était le chiffre le plus considérable qui eût encore été obtenu par une proposition socialiste dans un congrès de la Fédération du Travail.

Elle avait été combattue par tous les leaders des organisations et notamment par quatre membres du bureau de la Fédération dont le président et deux vice-présidents. Encore avait-il fallu, pour obtenir son rejet, les manœuvres peu loyales de Gompers que nous venons exposer.

Les progrès du parti socialiste se manifestèrent encore dans le choix des délégués fraternels au Congrès des Trades-Unions britanniques. Pour la première fois à côté d'un délégué vieille-unioniste Martin Lawler, des chapeliers, un délégué socialiste fut choisi par la Fédération et ce délégué n'était autre que l'auteur même de la motion socialiste, le citoyen Max Hayes, de l'Union Internationale des Typographes.

Le congrès réélut ensuite tout le bureau fédéral, la "gauche" ayant décidé de faire montre de conciliation en ne combattant pas la réélection de Gompers.

En revanche les rivalités de métiers se manifestèrent à propos d'un des postes de vice-président.

La Fraternité des charpentiers présentait la candidature de son secrétaire général, Frank Duffy, contre le vice-président sortant, J. Kidd, des scieurs à la mécanique, mais ce dernier fut réélu à une forte majorité.

En revanche, un autre délégué des charpentiers, John Coleman, fut choisi, après une lutte mouvementée, comme représentant de la Fédération ou congrès des syndicats ouvriers du Canada.

Dans la nuit du samedi 22 au dimanche 23 Novembre, à 3 heures du matin, se termina le vingt-deuxième congrès de la Fédération américaine du Travail, le plus important qui eût encore été tenu par cette grande organisation prolétarienne.

La classe ouvrière doit démontrer non seulement la justice de sa cause, mais aussi le pouvoir de demander justice, et non seulement son pouvoir, mais aussi sa détermination irrévocable de mettre la justice en force. L'organisation est ce pouvoir.

LABOR UNIONS

As a Remedy to Overcome Creed, Race and National Prejudices

We find in the Old Testament the following passage: "Have we not all got one Father; has not one God created us all? Why then should men dwell in discord with his brethren to destroy the covenant which God has made?"

These words were spoken by the Hebrew Prophet thousands of years ago, and yet how little have we done towards the fulfillment of that lesson even to our present day.

Man against his fellow-man; nations against nations, measuring their strength by their warships and armies; and might makes right. In all cases of disputes and disagreement they call on the God of War instead of on the God of Peace and Humanity.

Let me briefly trace to the readers of the Journal the origin of those prejudices which created and fomented the hatred, the malice, and the revenge among men. We find that as far as we trace back in our researches, shortly after men evolved from the animal kingdom, they gathered together in tribes, and, probable, on account of better natural facilities for getting food, better hunting and fishing grounds, they began to make war on each other. In order to fire them up to deeds of valor and bravery—to make them fight better—their chiefs preached hatred and revenge against the men of other tribes.

After civilization set in, and reached a very high point we find the Egyptian, the Greek, and the Roman Empires all waging war against each other, laying a heavy tribute, and making slaves of the conquered nation. Even the children of Israel, who believed that by direct revelation to Moses God had given them the Ten Commandments, forgot the command which says "Thou shalt not murder" and went out to conquer and destroy.

During the feudal system each feudal lord told his subjects that they were superior to each other, and the more they hated the others, the better they would fight in battle. When the map of the world was rearranged and the reign of the nobility and aristocracy appeared we find the same conditions. We find Germans against French, French against English, Italians, Spanish, Russians, etc., sometimes combining together in order to fight what they proclaimed a common foe, but always for national honor, and the personal power and aggrandizement of their ruler, their King.

The religious element, not the true one, but a priestcraft, has taken no small part in the drama and has always tried to keep up prejudices between men. In fact, it is very difficult to trace if they were not a stronger factor to create and foment enmity among men, and have done far more toward it than the warriors or the statesmen. The greatest persecutions were inaugurated when paganism was in its downfall and monotheism came in power. The pagan warrior was more tolerant than the believer in Jehovah, the one God. Alexander the Great never interfered with the conquered race in their God worship, and even the Romans allowed the Jews to worship Jehovah, and never compelled them to worship the Gods of the Olympus. It is true that the Romans persecuted the early Christians, but not on account of religious belief, but solely that they were communist, denounced wealth and luxury, and therefore interfered with the order of their organized state. But look on the other side to the greatest horror—the slaughtering and banishing of the Jews by the Christians when they came in power, and the destruction of life and property during the Crusades, done solely to establish whether Christ or Mohammed were the true prophets. The wars during the Reformation, the religious wars in France and England, are all monuments of the period when men hated each other on account of religious belief. During the Crusades the Christian warriors came with the Bible in one hand and the sword in the other, and the Mohammedans with the Koran and the same weapon, and both forgetting that the two Bibles contained the passage: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

In our social structure we find three important features:

1. The religious, sometimes called at present the "ethical," appealing to the emotional or spiritual instinct in man, in order to inspire him with high and noble ideas, so as to lead a pure and good life.

2. The political, which deals principally with the construction and direction of State affairs.

3. The economic, relating only to the national welfare of the nation.

The political and economic features can, and should work jointly together, but never allow the religious one to enter their domain.

For ages mankind has struggled and tried to become free and independent, and while absolute individual liberty is an impossibility, existing only in the minds of the vicious and anarchistic, we have partly succeeded in destroying the one power in our religious and political system.

There is no longer the power in a civilized state for one man to command and compel the masses what they must believe or not; how to worship their God, or what religious ceremonies they must comply with; nor has the King or Emperor, with the exception of Russia, the power to make or unmake laws, without consulting the voice and vote of the people. But in our economic conditions we are drifting away every day from independence to dependence, from freedom to slavery. If our economic conditions were properly and scientifically conducted, we would always be independent, but never slaves. One hundred years ago the mechanic who had learned a trade was assured that he could have employment as long as he kept his health and strength. To-day even the most skillful worker who has spent years to learn and perfect himself in his trade is frozen out of employment by the machine which can be operated by an unskilled laborer, very often by a boy or a girl. So he finds himself in his declining years without a job.

Looking over the pages of our religious history we find a large number of men who, while preaching the kingdom of God, also proclaimed and worked for a brotherhood of humanity, and grand men like Moses, Isaiah, Jesus, and many others have made their names immortal. We find also eminent statesmen, from Plato down to Thomas Jefferson, who tried to get political freedom for men. But the economic question received very little attention. Political economy and social science were unknown, while crude in its infancy and Utopian in its ideas, it gives us to-day the only solution of that difficult problem of how the true State should be constructed, and that men can have only religious and political freedom if they are economically free, and the struggle for existence brought to that point that any man who desires to work can earn sufficient to support himself and family in ease and with comfort, and should he through age, sickness, or other infirmities not be able to work any longer, that the State should support him. Like the soldier who receives a pension because he has fought for his country, so should the worker be pensioned for the work he has done to build up the state and the wealth he has helped to accumulate.

The last century has given us great men working on the economic problem, none greater than Karl Marx, Ferdinand Lasalle, Frederick Engels and William Morris, and yet the best work was done by labor unions themselves. Labor organizations alone have helped to eliminate creed, race and national prejudices. Their motto is: "An injury to one is the concern of all." I know of no labor association to-day which will deny admittance to a man because he is a Jew, a Mohammedan, a Catholic, or a Protestant, and again of none which will accept him as a member because he is of French, German, or English birth, nor of any, with only a few exceptions, because he is white or colored.

Adolph Smith was the correspondent of several English papers at the International Workingmen's Convention in 1899, and hear what he says:

"I never met a set of delegates, men coming from French, German, and English Labor Unions, fraternizing so strongly together, and while they differed in their ideas as to the means of bettering their conditions, they worked in harmony together. There were no words from the French delegates that Alsace and Lorraine should be taken back from Germany, nor any glorification from the Germans because France had been conquered and those provinces added to their fatherland. To me this was a new revelation. I found these delegates not as the newspapers so often describe them, as labor fakirs and beer and whiskey drinkers, but an intelligent and educated class of men."

Several years ago, while on a visit to an assembly of Knights of Labor in Baltimore, a colored man got up and stated that while living in the South they called him a "nigger" and in the North a "coon" but in his union the members called him "brother."

Mr. McHugh, while in Philadelphia trying to organize the longshoremen, stated that in Liverpool before the men had a union the vessel owners would divide the men into gangs and put the Scotch in one place and the Irish in another part of the vessel. The boss would then tell the Irish that the Scotch were doing the best and quickest work, and the Scotchmen that the Irishmen were doing the best work, so that each would bend all their efforts to outstripping the others, and after work was over they had frequent fights. After they had formed a union the story would no longer work, as the men, coming together in their meetings, had "tumbled" to the game.

Before the miners in the coal regions had formed a union, there were frequent fights between the Italians and the Hungarians, the Polish and Lithuanians. The Italians called the Hungarians "Huns" and the Hungarians retaliated by calling the Italians "Hides." To-day fights are of rare occurrence. The men come together and adopt as their motto, "No more Huns, no more Hides, but union men."

The Anti-Semitic movement in Germany, brought on by the Protestant Church and encouraged by Bismarck, as well as the May laws aimed at the Catholics, have been defeated and pushed to the rear by the Socialist Party, and a short time ago Herr Bebel, the leader of that party, made the remark in the Reichstag that "anti-Semitism was the statesmanship of stupid and ignorant boys or knaves."

Against the anti-Semitic movement brought on in France and headed by royalists, the military men of the old regime and the Jesuits, the Socialist Party protested and were the first to demand justice for Dreyfus. I could go on and place before the readers of the Journal a great many more examples, but I think I have made out a strong case to prove that Labor Associations are the remedy to overcome race, creed and national prejudices.—J. R., in Journal of the Knights of Labor.

First Anniversary Celebration

The Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Local Union 999, Mt. Vernon, Ill., celebrated its first anniversary on the evening of March 3d, with a large crowd in attendance, including some invited guests, and all enjoyed themselves to their hearts content. We had a very good program—music, speeches and recitations—winding up with a splendid supper prepared by the members and their wives and daughters. We were much pleased with the success of the entertainment and feel greatly encouraged to press on with the good work in improving our condition and that of our fellow-men.

Our Local Union was organized on March 3d, 1902, with 17 charter members; at present we have a membership of 86 in good standing. There are very few non-union carpenters in town, but we hope ere long to add them to our fold.

We have had very little trouble with our contractors and anticipate none in the near future.

With best wishes for the success of our entire Brotherhood, I remain, Yours fraternally, R. S.

Mt. Vernon, Ill. Local Union 999.

The Improved Lane Hinged Hanger

The accompanying cuts illustrate the new Hinged Hanger Rail offered by Lane Brothers Co., of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and the adaptation of their hanger to it.

As the peculiar advantages of the hinged hangers have come to be more widely known the demand has grown apace, but the tracks necessary to use with these hangers have heretofore been so expensive as to no doubt operate seriously against their more universal adoption.

One of the chief characteristic features of this class of goods is the retaining guard that runs behind the lower edge of the rail to prevent derailment. To provide sufficient room for this guard, the wheel flange and also for properly securing a substantial bracket of any previous design has required the use of a very wide rail with much material in it not essential for strength, being both clumsy and expensive.

The rail here illustrated obviates these things by virtue of the brackets used which permit the adoption of standard size 1x1½ in. rail stock while retaining all the advantages of the older styles, and at the same time both the individual brackets and the track as a whole are much stronger than the other hinge hanger tracks referred to.

The cut illustrates how little vertical space the bracket occupies where attached to the rail. This horizontal part has a tenon formed at its outer end and is mortised through the rail and riveted down solid on the shoulders at the back end of the tenon.

Attention is called to the divergent bracing arms which are integrally connected to the horizontal portion just back of the rail. These arms act as tensile and compression members of a truss to support the double width horizontal portion that extends through the rail.

Another point of superiority claimed is that the screw holes are not vertically in line.

Stealing and Embezzling

It is interesting to note how splendidly our civilization advances backward. This is shown by the Washington Post in its arrangement of the gamut of theft in which Taking $1,000,000 is called genius.

Taking $100,000 is called shortage.
Taking $50,000 is called litigation.
Taking $25,000 is called insolvency.
Taking $10,000 is called irregularity.
Taking $5,000 is called defalcation.
Taking $1,000 is called corruption.
Taking $500 is called embezzlement.
Taking $100 is called dishonesty.
Taking $50 is called stealing.
Taking $25 is called total depravity.
Taking one ham is called war on society.

This series of Fred T. Hodgson's new works are to-day the approved and most helpful set of practical builders' "educators" published. They have been tried and found by architects, contractors, carpenters and builders to be efficient "aids" for advancement and thoroughly reliable for daily consultation as books of reference, covering as they do thousands of "self-help-points" necessary for all workers of wood.

The books are positively up-to-date and the "Carpenter" most heartily recommends them to everyone as the most valuable series of books for self instruction published in the world on the subjects treated.

THIS OFFER WILL EXPIRE WHEN THE 5,000 SETS ARE SOLD. AFTER THAT, THE BOOKS CAN ONLY BE HAD AT THE RETAIL PRICES.

OUR MAIL BAG

LOVELAND, COLO.—Our Union is in a flourishing condition, and we expect to keep it so.

NYACK, N. Y.—We have recently initiated a number of new members, and expect to have almost all of the non-union men here in our fold by May 1st next.

NEW ALBANY, IND.—Our Local Union is in a good condition, and our meetings are well attended. We have adopted new trade rules and think that we shall have smooth sailing this coming season.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.—The eight-hour work-day being in operation here since April, 1902, Northampton is an eight-hour city, deserving a place on the list. Please make the necessary addition.

MIAMI, Fla.—While we have had a very prosperous year, work here is very dull at present and we have quite a number of craftsmen walking the streets looking for a job. Please place our town on the dull list.

NEW LONDON, Conn.—Work in this city is quite dull at this time, but all indications point to an improvement of trade conditions for the coming season. We are contemplating the formation of a Trades Council.

SHAMOKIN, PA.—The meetings of Local Union 37 are well attended, many points of interest being brought up in the discussion which have a tendency of bringing the boys closer together. Work is very dull at this time.

JACKSON, MICH.—We have the building trades in this city well organized and work in harmony under the Building Trades Council. Since the starting of our Union we have raised our wages from $1.50 to $2.00 and $2.50 per day.

CHARLERDI, Mich.—Our local union is getting along nicely. We have almost all of the carpenter work done here under our control and a membership of 35 in good standing, including the best mechanics in town, and more than sufficient of them to do the work.

IRONTON, O.—For the benefit of carpenters throughout the country we wish to state that advertisements and reports in the daily papers, setting forth that men are needed in this section of the country, are false. While we admit that there will be plenty of work when the season opens, we have all the men necessary to do it.

LITTLE FALLS, MINN.—We have a hard lot to bang up against, and would be pleased to receive a number of copies of THE CARPENTER for distribution, so that the men of our craft here may learn what is being done in other cities. There are good prospects ahead for a summer season's trade, and we desire to be the first on the ground.

MARION, O.—A new organization has recently been started here under the name of The Employers' Association of Marion, Ohio, whose object, of course, is to frustrate the efforts of labor organizations to better their conditions. This action of the employers has created a great deal of excitement generally, and has been one of the greatest blessings to the unions here, for it has caused a great many people, who heretofore were very indifferent towards labor organizations, to decide in their favor.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—On January 29th we held an open meeting, which the public, and especially all carpenters, were invited to attend. The hall was well filled, and we had an excellent meeting, with splendid results following. Bros. Meyer and Wellman of the Executive Board were with us and gave us a real heart to heart talk. Many non-union men present, after listening to the addresses delivered, expressed a desire to join the union, and we are expecting a considerable increase in our membership at an early date.

Keep Away From These Places

SAGINAW, MICH.—We would request carpenters to stay away from this city after May 1, 1903, as we are making an effort to obtain better conditions.

LISBON, O.—The time for our new schedule to go into effect is drawing near, and, seeing the opposition of some of the contractors looming up, we would ask all carpenters to stay away from this city until the differences have been adjusted.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—As we have made a demand for shorter hours, and trouble may be anticipated in consequence of this move, we would advise all carpenters to keep aloof from this place for the present until our demand is granted, which we expect to occur April 6, 1903.

NEWTON, N. J.—Anticipating trouble on or after April 1st, when we expect our demands to take effect, we desire all carpenters to stay away from this place until the trouble is settled.

BINGHAMPTON, ALA.—Trade in this district continues exceedingly dull, and as a consequence our city is full of idle men. Please keep our city on the dull list, and advise carpenters to stay away.

EAST LAS VEGAS, N. M.—Because of our demand for an advance in wages, and our efforts to adjust other trade matters, we would ask all carpenters to stay away from East Las Vegas until further notice.

MARION, O.—Having made a demand upon the contractors and planing mill owners, to take effect on April 1st, all carpenters are urged to remain away from this locality until our demands are granted.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—Please place this city under the head of dull localities. There is very little work here, and there are about five men to every job. Carpenters are advised to stay away from Albuquerque, N. M.

RIVERSIDE, CAL.—Some of the contractors here are refusing to pay the $3.50 scale inaugurated January 1st; we would therefore call on all carpenters to stay away from this place until the present trouble is settled.

DUNKIRK, N. Y.—Being as yet unable to come to an understanding with our contractors as to our demand for shorter hours, Local Union 466 would request all carpenters to stay away from this locality until an agreement has been reached.

PORTLAND, ORE.—To all appearances there will be a tie-up in the building trades, as a consequence of our demands to take effect on April 1, 1903. Carpenters can greatly assist us by staying away. There are any number of idle men walking the streets, and work is limited, notwithstanding the glowing reports to the contrary.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky.—The year past has been a very busy one for our little local union, and as a result of our labors we have doubled our membership. Work is rather dull here at present, and as we are still negotiating with our employers with a view of getting our demands acceded to, and as there is a likelihood of trouble arising, carpenters would greatly assist us in our move by remaining away from this city until further notice.

PALESTINE, TEX.—Expecting some trouble over our trade demands, and as work here is very scarce at the present time, we would advise carpenters to give this city a wide berth until the trouble is settled.

AUGUSTA, GA.—Owing to the movement of the Building Trades Council for better conditions, and the uncertainty as to the outcome, we would ask all carpenters to keep away from Augusta for the time being. We are progressing nicely.

TUXEDO, N. Y.—Work is very dull here at present, and many mechanics are on the street. The Local Union is in a fine condition, with a membership of 100 in good standing, and more are coming in. Please place our town on the dull list, and advise carpenters to remain away from Tuxedo, N. Y.

KOKOMO, IND.—We have plenty of men here to do the work on hand, and a good many idle. We are also having some difficulty with the contractors in regard to this year's agreement; they are holding off for reasons unknown to us. We would therefore ask carpenters to stay away for a while at least, or until further notice.

HARRISON, PA.—Our Local Union is doing nicely, and we are initiating new members almost every meeting night. Work is flat here at present, and there are more than sufficient resident carpenters to do the work in the market. To obtain employment at present is a difficult task, and carpenters would do well by staying away.

MT. CARMEL, ILL.—Our Union is in a thriving condition; all carpenters and mill men are within our fold. While work was plentiful last season, building operations are now at a standstill. We have many men idle here, and the outlook is gloomy; therefore we say to all outside carpenters, Live and let live, and stay away.

TACOMA, WASH.—This Local Union is making a movement for better conditions, and, being uncertain as to its outcome, we ask all carpenters to assist us by staying away from this city until trade conditions are settled. Don't pay any attention to advertisements offering wages greatly in excess of the existing rates, and use your influence to keep carpenters away from Tacoma.

Overcrowded.

The season being exceedingly dull in San Francisco, and there being plenty of resident carpenters for the work in the market, all carpenters are advised to stay away from that city.

Localities Where Work Is Dull

Carpenters are requested to stay away from the following places. Owing to trade movements, building depression and other causes, work is dull:

New York City.	Pittsburg, Pa.
St. Louis, Mo.	Winsted, Conn.
Nashville, Tenn.	Jasper, Ala.
Galveston, Tex.	Williamsport, Pa.
Jonesboro, Ark.	Chester, Ill.
Canon City, Okla.	Jacksonville, Fla.
Columbia, S. C.	New Orleans, La.
Greenville, Tex.	Waynesville, N. C.
Sharon, Pa.	Ardmore, Ind. Ter.
Norfolk, Va.	Terrell, Tex.
Brantford, Ont.	Tampa, Fla.
Haywood, Cal.	Binghamton, N. Y.
Jamestown, N. Y.	Lampasas, Tex.
Helena, Mont.	Memphis, Tenn.
Sheffield, Ala.	Grand Junction, Colo.
Richmond, Va.	Divernon, Ill.
San Antonio, Tex.	Kewance, Ill.
Corsicana, Tex.	Salt Lake City, Utah.
Los Angeles, Cal.	Cheyenne, Wyo.
Birmingham, Ala.	East Chicago, Ind.
Durant, I. T.	Newton, N. J.
Miami, Fla.	Newark, N. J.
Mason City, Ia.	Mt. Carmel, Ill.
Tuxedo, N. Y.	Portland, Ore.
Buffalo, N. Y.	Albuquerque, N. Mex.

Give Newark, N. J., a Wide Berth.

All carpenters are warned against coming to Newark, N. J., as work is very dull at present and our brothers in that locality are making a demand for better conditions. Carpenters coming here expecting to obtain work are apt to find themselves stranded without work or money. Pay no attention to the "ads." of A. R. Wyatte, the business agent of the Amalgamated Carpenters of Newark, who promises newcomers jobs with the assurance that such would last six months, while after the elapse of four or five days they are again thrown on the street. Keep away from Newark.

Work is Flat in Schenectady, N. Y.

Work is very flat in Schenectady at present. About 100 men of the craft are idle, and there is no relief in sight for some time to come. The situation is the more precarious, as we have made a demand on our contractors for an advance in wages. We would request all carpenters to stay away for the next three months, when we trust that trade conditions will have improved and a settlement of the wage question be reached.

Complication in Muscatine, Ia. Stay Away!

All carpenters are requested to stay away from Muscatine, Ia., until the differences with the contractors of that city are adjusted, due notice of which will be given in THE CARPENTER. We have more carpenters than we need here to do the work on hand at present.

A Warning

Local Union 1313 of Pendleton, Ore., desires to warn all members of the U. B. against a carpenter by the name of Thomas Norman, who claims to be a union man from Astoria, Ore., but did not belong to Local Union 1313 of Pendleton. By his conduct here he proved himself unworthy of membership. He disappeared from this city on February 17th, after having borrowed all the money and tools he could obtain and selling them for what he could get. Thomas Norman is about 45 years of age, about 5 feet 9 inches in height, and weighs about 155 pounds; he has reddish-brown hair and moustache, light blue eyes, prominent cheek-bones, large freckles on his face and hands. He has little to say.

False Statements Cause Trouble.

The Los Angeles, Cal., Council of Labor recently passed the following resolution, which speaks for itself:

WHEREAS, In our city there is an epidemic of hold-ups and robberies, making it hazardous for unarmed or unprotected citizens to appear on the streets after sunset; and

WHEREAS, It appears that the perpetrators of these outrages are men without legitimate employment, and many of them being unable to obtain employment by reason of the surplus of labor in our city; and

WHEREAS, A so-called "Independent Labor Bureau" is flooding the Eastern States with false and misleading statements in regard to the conditions of the labor market here, and further, that the said labor bureau is backed by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, who wish to flood our city with a surplus of labor; and

WHEREAS, The Los Angeles Times is also with its usual vindictiveness aiding and abetting these scoundrels in bringing men here when there is no employment for them, and as a consequence these unemployed men seek to obtain a living by unlawful methods, such as robbing our citizens; therefore be it

RESOLVED by the Council of Labor, That we protest against the Los Angeles Times in its efforts to flood the local labor market to the detriment of our own working people; and be it further

RESOLVED, That the Council of Labor, being in favor of good government, hereby offers its services to form a vigilance committee to assist the local guardians in preserving order.

Carpenters Hold a Jubilee

Local Union 142, Pittsburg, Pa., the parent organization of carpenters in that city, with a membership of nearly one thousand, held its seventh anniversary in Auditorium Hall, on February 16th. Among the speakers of the evening was our General Secretary, Frank Duffy, who delivered the principal address. In his remarks he asserted that the building trades were doing more for this country than our national authorities or our law makers in Washington. He stated that the U. B. now numbers 150,000 members, and their work on buildings was of far more importance than that of any other class of mechanics. Mr. Duffy expressed the hope that by next year the U. B. would aggregate 230,000 men in its fold. A program was rendered, consisting of musical selections, songs and humorous recitations. At midnight tables loaded with viands and other good things awaited the guests and participants of the occasion. The festivities ended at a late hour.

Smoker Follows Installation.

Local Union 247 of Brooklyn, N. Y., gave its annual smoker after the installation of officers at its last quarterly meeting, which was well attended, 220 members answering the roll-call. The various local unions of the city and the District Council were also largely represented by visiting brothers. The entertainment and music were furnished by high-class vaudeville artists, and considerable local talent was on hand to help out at the occasion. Addresses were delivered by Brothers Phil. J. Heaney and Wm. Farrell, who spoke on the growth and prosperity of the U. B. The entertainment lasted until the wee hours of morning, and nothing but good-fellowship prevailed throughout the night.

Movements for Better Conditions

LOCAL UNION 797, CHARLEROI, MICH.—On the first day of March we expect to have our wages advanced from 25 cents to 30 cents per hour for journeymen carpenters. Nine hours to constitute a day's work in this city.

LOCAL UNION 1016, ROME, N. Y.—$2.25 per day is the minimum scale of wages which this Union contemplates to enforce on April 1, 1903, as well as a reduction of one hour on Saturday, when eight hours shall constitute a day's work, with pay for nine hours.

LOCAL UNION 765, MASCUTAH, ILL.—We are demanding an increase in wages from 22 cents to 25 cents per hour for nine hours work. Having previously worked nine hours, we expect no difficulty in getting our demand for an advance in wages granted by our employers.

LOCAL UNION 750, ASBURY PARK, N. J.—As early as October 4, 1902, we have notified our contractors that on and after April 1, this year, we would demand $3.00 per day. This demand being very reasonable, we anticipate no trouble, although the contractors have thus far been very reluctant in voicing their sentiments relative to this advance in wages demanded.

LOCAL UNIONS 970 AND 1047, VICKSBURG, MISS.—Through our presidents and secretaries we have submitted an agreement to our contractors and builders, whereby nine hours are to constitute a day's work, and the employment of union men exclusively shall henceforth be the rule to be strictly observed by the employers. The agreement shall take force on May 1st.

LOCAL UNION 825, WILLIMANTIC, CONN.—This Local Union believing that the time is opportune to do business, we are making an effort to inaugurate a wage scale of 28 cents minimum per hour. As the scale in all other cities of the State calls for eight hours, while we are working nine hours, we trust that the contractors will show little or no opposition to our reasonable demand.

LOCAL UNIONS 726 AND 273, YONKERS, N. Y.—In accordance with a resolution passed by a joint meeting of Local Unions 726 and 273, we have notified our contractors that we demand a minimum wage of 48 cents an hour, to take effect on April 1, 1903. It would be rather premature at this time of writing to say what the outcome of this move might be; we are hopeful of success, however.

LOCAL UNION 926, BELOIT, WIS.—We have adopted a series of articles of agreement covering all phases in the relations between journeymen, and even apprentices, and the employers, for submission to the contractors and builders of this town. The agreement, containing thirteen different sections, provides for a workday of nine hours and a minimum wage scale of 30 cents per hour, double pay for all overtime, and the full recognition of the union. The agreement is to take effect on May 1st next.

DISTRICT COUNCIL, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—In accordance with a resolution passed by this District Council, we are submitting a new set of trade rules to the mastercarpenters for their approval. One section of these rules provides for a minimum rate of wages of $4.00 per day.

LOCAL UNION 442, HOPKINSVILLE, KY.—We have served written notice on our contractors that we demand an advance in wages of 5 cents per hour and the recognition of our Union, and met with a point blank refusal by the largest firm of this city. The smaller firms are less obstinate, declaring that if the above firm would grant our demands they would not hesitate to follow suit. Our boys are determined to bring the obnoxious firm to time, and a bitter contest may be confronting us.

LOCAL UNION 1021, PARSONS, KANS.—We shall make a united effort to secure the eight-hour workday on April 1st. Thanks to our being well organized, we expect our demand to be conceded without any trouble, though an organization called the Amalgamated Association of Mechanics and Laborers has just sprung up here, which is boasting that it will do us up in short order. We do not worry much over the threats of this sort of organization, however.

NEWARK, N. J., DISTRICT COUNCIL.—On behalf of the local unions located within the territory under the jurisdiction of the Newark District Council we are demanding the embodiment of the following articles in the agreement entered into with the Master Carpenters and Builders last year:

Section 1. (a) The minimum wage shall be 41 cents an hour, payable on or before 12 M. Eight hours shall constitute a day's work, excepting Saturdays, when work shall cease at 12 M. All overtime, including work at night, on holidays and Sundays, shall be paid at the rate of double time.

Section 1. (b) From November 1st to March 1st the working hours may be from 8 A. M. to 12 M., and from 12:30 P. M. to 4:30 P. M., excepting Saturdays, when the half holiday shall be observed, as provided in Section 1 (a).

Sec. 2. Master carpenters may employ one apprentice to each ten journeymen or major fraction thereof. An apprentice shall enter into and sign an agreement with his employer to serve for the period of four years.

Sec. 3. Either party to this agreement desiring any change in its provisions shall give proper notice in writing on or before the first day of February, 1904.

The demands of Local Union 1209, machine woodworkers, are, as regards hours, practically the same as those stated in Sections 1 (a) and 1 (b) in the above agreement. The minimum rate of wages shall be 28 cents per hour. Men receiving 25 cents or less than 30 cents per hour shall receive an increase of 12 per cent., and those now receiving 30 cents or more shall receive an increase of ten per cent. Men taking the places of discharged or disabled members shall be paid at the same rate as their predecessors.

These agreements to remain in force for one year, viz.: from April 1, 1903, to April 1, 1904.

LOCAL UNION 1111, IRONTON, O.—The minimum wage scale adopted by our Local Union, which is to take force on May 1, 1903, and to continue for one year, is $2.25 per day of nine hours.

LOCAL UNION 352, ANDERSON, IND.—We have submitted several articles of agreement to our contractors, calling for a workday of eight hours and the employment of union carpenters exclusively.

LOCAL UNIONS 176 AND 1245, NEWPORT, R. I.—At a mass meeting held by the two Local Unions here it was decided by secret ballot that we demand $3.00 per day on and after May 1, 1903; also weekly payments in cash.

LOCAL UNION 269, DANVILLE, ILL.—In accordance with a decision reached by this Union, we shall demand nine hours work on and after May 1, 1903, and a minimum wage of 30 cents per hour. Work on Sundays and all overtime shall be paid at the rate of time and a half.

LOCAL UNION 297, KALAMAZOO, MICH.—Our By-Laws have been amended to the effect that on and after May 1, 1903, eight hours shall constitute a day's work and our minimum wage scale shall be 35 an hour. Apprentices and infirm members carrying a permit from this Union are exempted from this latter rule.

LOCAL UNION 835, SENECA FALLS, N. Y.—We have notified our contractors that on and after April 1st of this year we shall demand ten hours pay for nine hours work. As we have as yet received no reply from the contractors, we can not say at this time whether we shall meet with any difficulty in getting our demands granted.

DISTRICT COUNCIL, CLEVELAND, O.—The membership of this District has decided to make a demand on the Employing Carpenters' Association for an advance in wages of 5 cents per hour, or 50 cents per hour, for eight hours work. We are furthermore demanding the employment of none but union men, and also the establishment of an apprenticeship system.

LOCAL UNION 79, NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Our demands for this spring are $3.00 per day of eight hours as a minimum rate and $3.50 for foremen, to go into effect on April 1st. There are several large jobs under course of construction here, and as there is considerable work in the market, we can see no reason why the outcome of our movement should not be in our favor.

LOCAL UNION 83, HALIFAX, N. S.—In accordance with a motion passed by our Union, we shall demand that on and after June 1, 1903, our wages be increased three cents per hour for a day of nine hours. As we are now receiving 22 cents per hour, the advance would bring up our minimum scale to 25 cents per hour, or $2.25 per day. Prospects of gaining our demand are good.

LOCAL UNION 287, HARRISBURG, PA.—We have served a notification on our bosses, to the effect that on and after May 1st we demand a minimum wage of $2.50 per day of nine hours, and eight hours on Saturday with nine hours pay. Although it would be rather premature at this time to say what the result of our action will be, we are looking forward to a favorable reply from our employers.

LOCAL UNION 453, AUBURN, N. Y.—The prevailing rate of wages in this city is 25 cents an hour, and, feeling that we are entitled to an advance, we shall demand 30 cents an hour and 36½ cents for foremen, the new scale to take effect on May 1, 1903. We have notified all contractors of this action taken by our Union.

LOCAL UNION 561, PITTSBURG, KANS.—Our demands for the coming season are as follows: On and after April 1st journeymen carpenters shall receive $3.00 per day. Apprentices shall receive $1.75 per day for the first year, $2.00 for the second and $2.50 per day for the third year. All foremen shall belong to the Union.

LOCAL UNION 184, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—The new trade rules adopted by our Local Union for the year ending May 1, 1904, provide that eight hours shall constitute a day's work on the first five days in the week and seven hours on Saturday. The minimum scale shall be 45c. per hour, overtime to be paid at the rate of time and a half. Work on holidays, piece work or working with non-union men shall not be permitted.

DISTRICT COUNCIL, EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL.—Local Unions 169 and 903 of this city recently held a joint meeting which resulted in the adoption of an agreement to be submitted to the contractors, to take effect on April 1, 1903, and remain in force until April, 1904. The agreement, as adopted by the Local Unions, calls for a minimum scale of wages of 47½ cents per hour for eight hours work. All future grievances from either side shall be settled by arbitration.

LOCAL UNION 1074, EAU CLAIRE, WIS.—Our Local Union, by a unanimous vote, passed a resolution to the effect that, beginning with April 1st, nine hours shall constitute a day's work; that 30 cents per hour shall be the minimum rate of wages; that overtime shall be paid at the rate of time and a half, and holidays double time. We further resolved that one apprentice for each four journeymen shall be the rule. Our contractors will be duly notified of our union's action.

LOCAL UNION 135, ALLENTOWN, Pa.—We have decided to make the following demands upon the master carpenters: That we shall not do any sub-contracting, piece work, or jobbing (except contractors working under Sec. 70 (b) of the Constitution), but shall do all work by the day, and that nine hours shall constitute a day's work. The wages shall be 25 cents for journeymen carpenters. All overtime shall be paid at the rate of time and a half and double time for work on Sundays.

LOCAL UNION 570, GARDNER, MASS.—In the middle of December last the contractors of this locality issued a notice through the city papers, stating that after January 1, 1903, they would cease employing union carpenters, and when that day arrived all union men were discharged. This action on the part of the bosses was the result of our making a demand on them for a minimum rate of wages of $2.25 for nine hours work. Since our lockout is in progress we have made numerous attempts to get the contractors to meet us in a joint meeting and discuss the differences, but failed in every instance. Two of our men have deserted us, the rest are holding out, being confident that we shall gain our point as soon as the spring trade opens up.

LOCAL UNION 695, STERLING, ILL.—We have adopted a resolution demanding that the scale of wages for the ensuing year, beginning May 1, 1903, and ending May 1, 1904, be 30 cents an hour, that eight hours constitute a day's work, and that an additional remuneration of 50 per cent. for all overtime and work on Sundays and holidays be paid. We also demand that only two apprentices be allowed for each ten journeymen. In all probability we will have a hard fight on hand this spring, but we are determined to win out.

LOCAL UNION 534, BURLINGTON, IA.—This Local Union is about to make a demand for eight hours and an advance in wages. In ascertaining the sentiment of the contractors on this matter, we found them to be opposed to any increase in wages, as well as to any rule compelling them to hire union men only. There may be a hard struggle in store for us, and traveling brothers would do well to remain away from this city until further notice. We have all the carpenters here but seven in our Union, which we are keeping in good shape.

LOCAL UNION 1058, MADISON, N. J.—Early in February we called a meeting to consider the advisability of making a demand for an increase in pay, and voted that $3.00 should be the minimum rate of wages for eight hours work, being an advance of 50 cents a day. Every other Local Union within a radius of five miles, namely Morristown, Summit, Gladstone, Bernardsville and Dover, is making the same demands, which shows that this movement is widespread. Trade here is fair, our Union in excellent condition, and we don't anticipate much trouble in getting our demands conceded.

LOCAL UNION 1373, MORRISTOWN, N. J.—This Local Union, composed of machine woodworkers, at a recent meeting unanimously adopted the following resolution:

In consideration of the high prices of rent, coal and other necessities of living, and in consideration of the extra hazardous work imposed on machine woodworkers, be it

RESOLVED, That on and after April 1, 1903, we demand an increase of 25 cents per day for a day of nine hours for all machine men, and that eight hours shall constitute a day's work on Saturdays.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., DISTRICT COUNCIL.—By unanimous decision this body has submitted the following scale of wages and hours to the contractors and builders for approval. The new scale is to take effect on the first day of April, 1903, and to continue until the first day of April, 1904. Journeymen carpenters shall work eight hours a day on the first five working days of the week; on Saturday, the sixth day, they shall work only four hours. No work to be done between the hours of 12 o'clock noon and 5 P. M. Saturday. Journeymen carpenters shall receive 45 cents per hour, and shall be paid on the job on or before quitting time. In the woodworking mills in this district the same scale of hours shall prevail, the minimum wage scale to be $17.00 per week. The eight-hour system has been in operation here for some time, and our present rate of wages is $3.00 a day; hence the object of this movement is to secure the Saturday half-holiday and an advance in wages of 3¼ cents per hour for journeymen carpenters. As far as we have ascertained, the contractors are favorably inclined toward our demands.

LOCAL UNION 921, PORTSMOUTH, N. H.—In accordance with a resolution passed by this Local Union, and the present contract with our employers expiring on May 1st, we are proposing a new schedule providing for eight hours work and a minimum scale of $2.25 per day. The contractors are not organized. Last spring they signed our agreement individually, which they are likely to do again on this occasion. We, on our part, are thoroughly organized, and do not anticipate any trouble.

LOCAL UNION 84, AKRON, O.—There is a very strong desire among our membership to make an attempt to obtain the eight-hour workday this spring, although it will apparently be a stubborn fight, as we have the Builders' Exchange, which we have not had before, and the Amalgamated Woodworkers to contend with. We shall do our utmost to build up our organization and become more strongly entrenched before we enter into this contemplated movement for shorter hours, and we hope that the newly organized Building Trades Council here will render us all assistance in their power.

LOCAL UNION 474, NYACK, N. Y.—The masons and painters of this locality are making a demand on their employers for better conditions, and they are looking forward to March 1st as the day when their new set of trade rules should be enforced. We deemed it our duty to enter into an agreement with these organizations not to work with any non-union men of either trade. We also thought it advisable to take advantage of the situation in making a demand on our own employers and on our behalf, viz.: Eight hours and an advance in wages of 25c. per day. At present we are working 53 hours per week, and our pay is $2.50 per day. No strike is anticipated, and we don't ask for any financial aid from headquarters.

LOCAL UNION 532, ELMIRA, N. Y.—We have prepared a new agreement to be submitted to the well-known firm of Kertcher & Co. of this city, to go into effect on April 1, 1903, and to continue until April 1, 1904, without change, unless agreed upon by both parties to the agreement. Our demands are: That after the above first named date none but union men be employed; all employees now receiving less than $2.25 per day shall receive an increase of twenty per cent., and all those now receiving $2.25 and upwards shall receive an increase of ten per cent.; time and a half for overtime and work on holidays; enforcement of the working-card system, and the Business Agent to have the privilege of examining cards in the shop.

LOCAL UNION 851, HENDERSON, KY.—We recently held one of the grandest open meetings in the history of our Union. All contractors and non-union men were in attendance, and we availed ourselves of the opportunity to formally make a demand on the contractors for an advance in wages from 22½ cents to 30 cents per hour, to take effect on April 1st. Bro. Hollinberger of Evansville was the speaker of the occasion. He expounded the aims and objects of unionism in an able manner, and his remarks were enthusiastically received. We need no financial assistance, being in a position to fight our own battle, but we would not like to be hampered by newcomers. If the brothers assist us in this fight by staying away, we are sure to win out.

LOCAL UNION 576, PINE BLUFF, ARK.—Our contractors not being disposed to grant our demand for nine hours per day with ten hours' pay, a strike is very likely to ensue should we be formally apprised of their refusal to sign the new scale. Under prevailing conditions we would request all carpenters to remain away from this place until the difficulty is adjusted.

LOCAL UNION 396, NEWPORT NEWS, VA.—Wages being very small here compared with living expenses, we have come to the conclusion that we are entitled to an advance, and shall demand an increase of pay of 25 cents per day, to take effect on May 1, 1903. We can not as yet say how many of our contractors favor the increase, but from current reports we anticipate but little opposition.

LOCAL UNION 196, GREENWICH, CONN.—Through the Building Trades Council of Portchester and vicinity, including our town, we are demanding eight hours a day with a minimum wage of $3.28 for carpenters, and eight hours and $17 per week for millmen, to take effect on April 1st. A committee has been appointed to confer with the employers, but no agreement has been reached up to date.

LOCAL UNION 183, PEORIA, ILL.—Pursuant to action taken by this Local Union in January, we have given notice to our contractors that on May 4, 1903, our wage scale will be 40 cents per hour. Other towns near by are taking action on similar lines. Bloomington has made a demand for 40 cents minimum. Peking, which was organized in July, 1900, now has every carpenter in the city in their union; they are also considering a demand for an advance. Chillicothe, organized about the same time, is in a condition to take a similar step, and will probably do so.

LOCAL UNION 38, ST. CATHERINES, ONT., CAN.—On January 1, 1903, the eight-hour workday system took effect here and is universal with all the carpenters; the machine hands, however, who are very few in number, are still working nine hours. At present we are negotiating with the master carpenters with a view of obtaining an increase in our wages which are, and have been for some years back, as low as 22½ cents per hour. We are demanding an advance of forty cents per day, to take effect on March 1, 1903. The employers are averse to granting this increase which they declare to be unreasonably high, but feel inclined to accept a wage scale of 25 cents per hour minimum.

LOCAL UNION 198, DALLAS, TEX.—The Building Trades Council and of course our Local Unions represented in this body are engaged in a bitter contest with the Builders' Exchange of Dallas. The trouble originated from a demand made by the plumbers on their bosses for an advance in wages, as early as December 1, 1902, and at a time when the constitutions of many of the building trades and that of our own U. B. prohibit trade movements. However, the Building Trades Council, which is affiliated with the National Building Trades Council with headquarters in St. Louis, indorsed the action of the plumbers, with the result that on January 19th the members of the Builders' Exchange locked out their men, with a view to disrupting the Council, and declared that they would henceforth not recognize the Building Trades Council card. At this time of writing it is impossible to predict what the outcome of this controversy will be; yet, with the men standing as firm as they have up to this time, it can be but favorable.

LOCAL UNION 569, BARBERTON, O.—At an early date we gave the contractors notice that after April 1, 1903, our minimum scale of wages will be 28 cents an hour, time and a half for all overtime and double time for work on Sundays and holidays. The greater number of contractors have decided to agree to the scale, but some of them are still on the stubborn list. Through the untiring efforts of our members we are increasing in membership, taking in from two to eight candidates every meeting night, and by April 1st we hope to be strong enough to stand by our demands and carry the day.

LOCAL UNION 599, HAMMOND, IND.—The agreement with our employers expiring on April 1st next, we have adopted a new schedule providing for an eight-hour work day and 35 cents per hour minimum. We hear very little complaint because of our action. The few contractors who favor the nine hours will have to fall in line with the rest.

LOCAL UNION 873, PALESTINE, TEX.—This Union has agreed that on and after May 1, 1903, eight hours shall constitute a day's work at the present rate of pay. We may anticipate some trouble as some of the employers are apparently displeased with this innovation.

LOCAL UNION 77, PORTCHESTER, N. Y.—The prevailing wage scale here is $3.00 per day; now we are demanding an advance of 28 cents per day for all outside and inside men. All other trades are with us in this move and will, undoubtedly, back us up.

Successful Trade Movements

ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEX.—We have obtained the eight-hour-day on the 1st of January without a hitch, and are delighted over our success. Everything works well so far. Of course work is slack, as it always is this time of year. There is a great influx of men here from the East, but we are glad to state most of them are equipped with union cards.

HAMILTON, CAN.—The Board of Works has granted our demand for a minimum rate of wages of 30 cents per hour, and the maximum number of hours to be 50 per week, with pay at the rate of time and a half for all overtime. Wages have been too low here in Hamilton, and we hope the days of low wages are past.

Assist Them By Keeping Away

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

It has been a long time since there has been anything in THE CARPENTER from this neck of the woods, and a few words showing the brothers how we are getting along in our struggle for better conditions may be of interest to them.

Work here is dull at present; there is scarcely enough to keep home carpenters employed. The outlook for the spring season is fairly good, however.

We have demanded a raise of five cents per hour over our last year's scale, to go into effect on April 1st next, and as we have a number of non-union men here, and one of the contractors declares that in case of a strike he will import non-union men, you may readily see that our demand may lead to some complications.

Every year at the opening of the spring season our home papers are booming up this place, stating that there is plenty of work and help wanted. They will undoubtedly do so again this year. We would therefore warn all carpenters to pay no attention to statements of that kind, as they are not based on facts. We hope that outside brothers will stand by us and keep away from Vincennes until we have gained our point and the trouble is settled. Wishing all Sister Local Unions success in their efforts for better conditions, I remain

Yours fraternally,
GEO. J. BENEDICT, R. S.,
Vincennes, Ind. Local Union 812.

Work Very Scarce in Clarksville, Tenn.

Clarksville, Tenn.—We are negotiating with our employers with a view of obtaining better conditions, and work is exceptionally scarce at the present time, there being two men here for every job. Carpenters would do well to give this place a wide berth.

Bad State of Affairs and Trade Dull in San Antonio, Tex.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

You can readily understand that, in view of the fact that our organization in San Antonio, Tex., has hardly 40 per cent. of the craft within its ranks, we are not in a position to enter into a movement for the betterment of our condition at the present time. Our organization requires building up, and, with that end in view, we have put a Business Agent in the field. We trust that through his efforts we will be able to report an increase in our membership in the near future. Trade is very dull here; please insert a statement to that effect in THE CARPENTER.

L. BEVERSDORFF, Sec.,
San Antonio, Tex. District Council.

On the Unfair List.

The firm of Lorenzo Wood of Port Jervis, N. Y., has been placed on the unfair list by Local Union 1145 of that city, said firm refusing to recognize union-labor on the library now under construction. Carpenters are requested to stay away from Port Jervis until the difficulty is adjusted.

EXPULSIONS

Oil Hatsel, the former treasurer of Local Union 445, New Casele, Ind., has been expelled by that local union for embezzlement of funds.

J. Paulk, formerly president of Local Union 865, Brunswick, Ga., has been expelled by that local union for embezzling part of its funds.

O. J. Rittinger, of Local Union 669, Harrisburg, Ill., has been expelled by that local union for stealing the tools of his fellow workers.

Lewis D. Townsend was expelled from Local Union 1124, Newton, N. J., for the embezzlement of local funds.

A Struggle of Nearly Four Years Ended

The most protracted strike and bitterest fight in the history of our United Brotherhood was brought to a successful termination early in February in the city of Scranton, Pa. As long as three years, and nine months ago our brothers in that city entered into, and were ever since engaged in, an intense struggle the result of a demand made at that time on their employers for an eight-hour workday and better conditions generally. The Builders' Exchange of Scranton had been working all kinds of underhanded games and tried its utmost to crush our organization in that city out of existence. While they succeeded in coercing a number of our members to leaving the folds of the Union, which was so gallantly fighting their battle, the faithful members, imbued with the true spirit of unionism, feeling that their cause was a just one, and encouraged by the moral and financial assistance rendered the Union by headquarters, bravely endured all hardships brought upon them by this prolonged controversy.

Our G. E. B. in the January session deputized their Secretary, Bro. Post of Wilkesbarre, to the scene of trouble and he, assisted by the Business Agent and others, succeeded in getting the Builders' Exchange to accede to the original demands, and they signed an agreement calling for the eight-hour workday and a minimum rate of wages of 30 cents per hour, to take effect on March 1, 1903.

Now that peaceful conditions are again prevailing between our Local Unions and the master carpenters of Scranton, we trust that our brothers in that city will pay serious attention to those who, during this prolonged controversy, have abandoned our cause, and see that their Local Unions regain their former position and strength, numerically and otherwise.

Holding Its Own Under Adverse Circumstances

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Notwithstanding the fact that work is very dull here at present, Local Union 1247 is holding its own. We organized on August 30, 1902, and on February 1st last we had a membership of 114 in good standing. Still I regret to say that we have about twenty non-union men in this city, but we shall endeavor to win them over as soon as business has revived somewhat. The present outlook for the spring season is not at all encouraging, there being no indications of the erection of any new buildings so far. Nevertheless, the local press is endeavoring to make the outside world believe that the building business is booming in Mason City. This is contrary to facts, and we would advise all brothers of the craft to remain away, so they may not meet with sad disappointment.

Fraternally,
TOM HOBGES, F. S.,
Mason City, Ia. Local Union 1247.

One Year's Accomplishments

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

A little over a year ago we had not a union here in the city of Kalispell, while to-day all crafts are organized and working harmoniously together under the guidance of our Trades Council. This body is up and doing, and has proved a great success. It has put a business agent into the field, who has done some very good work, and we feel assured that in the coming spring all work here will be done by union men.

The nine-hour day which we gained last spring is firmly established, and our Local Union is in a prosperous condition, having initiated eight new members this month. We are delighted over the accomplishments of the past year and hope that they may be an encouragement to our less fortunate sister locals. We would say to them: Cheer up, boys; rest assured that what we have done here can be accomplished elsewhere as well.

W. F. LUDWIG, F. S.,
Kalispell, Mont. Local Union 911.

An Obnoxious Mill Owner

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

The following communication was received at our last regular meeting from one of the mill owners of the city of Lafayette, and to show the brothers of our U. B. what we are up against here, we desire to have it published in our monthly journal.

To the Carpenters' and Joiners' Union of the City of Lafayette:

You are hereby notified that on and after the 30th day of April, 1903, the shop of the Henry Taylor Lumber Co. will be run as a non-union shop. All contracts between the Henry Taylor Lumber Co. and your Union are hereby canceled. This action is taken in view of the fact that you have notified us that you desire a new contract, which contract is hereby rejected.

By order of the stockholders and board of directors of the Henry Taylor Lumber Co.
W. F. STILLWELL, President.

From the foregoing you may see that we are anticipating a clash this coming spring. The communication from the Henry Taylor Lumber Co. does not seem to worry the boys very much, however; they are working along as if everything were all right. At all events, it would be advisable for carpenters to stay away from Lafayette this coming spring.

Yours fraternally,

W. J. S., R. S.,
Lafayette, Ind. Local Union 815.

A Prosperous Little Union

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Feeling it our duty to let you know how we are progressing, and to show you that we are taking an interest in our Journal, we send you these few lines with the request to publish them in an early issue.

Jasonville is a town of about 1,000 inhabitants, located about 25 miles south of Terre Haute, in Greene County, near the Clay County line, in one of the richest coal fields in the State of Indiana. It is practically a new town, having grown within the last two years from a small village of 200 souls, all told, to its present size and population.

Our Local Union 909 has a membership of about 50. Work has been very satisfactory for some time; at present, however, it is rather slack, and all signs of the boom we have had here have vanished. Nevertheless we consider ourselves very lucky, as we are very little bothered by scabs. Of course, were we to depend on our own little Union alone, things would not be running so smoothly, and we could not accomplish a great deal; but we have every craft here organized, work in harmony together and assist one another in case of need.

In conclusion we send our best wishes for success to all the brothers in our U. B. You will from now on hear from us every month.

Yours fraternally,

O. C. MCGUIRE, Corr.,
Jasonville, Ind. Local Union 909.

From Our Annapolis (Md.) Local Union

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Being a regular reader of our Journal and very much interested in our grand Brotherhood in whose interest it is published, and failing to find our city on the list of eight-hour cities, I would ask you to add the name of Annapolis to that list. We are working eight hours per day, and have been doing so since October 14, 1902, and we had but little opposition in obtaining the reduction of hours. Our members have nearly all been at work throughout the winter, and prospects for the coming spring are bright and encouraging. All the principal employers are in sympathy with us, hiring none but union men. The government work under way here is done by men from Baltimore and Washington, the carpenters all being members of the U. B. We have sent a copy of our By-Laws to each Local Union and District Council in these two cities, with the expectation that next spring their members employed here will join hands with us in the strict enforcement of our trade rules.

Considering the short time our Local Union 1126 has been organized, we can safely say that, as far as the carpenters are concerned, Annapolis is one of the best organized cities. Our minimum rate of wages is $2.50 per day of eight hours.

Fraternally yours,

MARK I. SMITH, R. S.,
Annapolis, Md. Local Union 1126.

"The Survival of the Fittest"

The organizing of another local union is the forging of another link in the chain of human brotherhood, which shall, in time, break the fetters that bind them to their capitalist masters, and procure for them their economic freedom.

On Thursday evening, February 5th, there was organized, in Boston, under the jurisdiction of the U. B. of C. and J., a local union of shop and mill hands, an organization that should have been formed years ago, but which, like many other important details, was overlooked, either through the egotism or selfishness of individuality. How often certain sayings reveal to us, in our present conditions, the true significance they embody. In this particular instance "The Survival of the Fittest" seems to embrace the whole situation, and to express more in a few words than our classical political economists have demonstrated in whole volumes. In our economic struggle, and through industrial evolution, we are brought more and more into competition with our fellow-workers for "the right to labor," and for mutual protection are obliged to form ourselves into labor organizations, confined at first to the locality, but as the demand increases we become a national body, with locals in every city and town. But as these movements do not start simultaneously in the same particular trade, or branch of trade, it often happens that there are two national bodies claiming jurisdiction over the workers in all parts of a trade or calling, without specifying any particular part.

In organizing the mill men of Boston under the Brotherhood, we have, so we are informed by our friends, the woodworkers, encroached upon their domain, and they protest vigorously by saying that if we persist in our work, they will carry their protest into the councils of the "Great Moguls," and so we are to desist, because they say so, and leave the most productive branch of the whole wood-working industry unorganized. Well, I guess not, having for years been connected with this part of the trade, and fully realizing the demoralized condition of our mills in Boston, I am not one who would calmly withdraw from the scene of battle without first striking a blow for my rights or the rights of my fellow-man. But a battle is imminent, and while I abhor the thoughts of strife between bodies of organized labor, yet the old saying that self-preservation is the first law of nature stands out strongly before us, and unless the woodworkers unite with us, the inevitable must happen.

The competitive system of capitalism does not guarantee all men a living, neither does it furnish jobs for all who wish to work, at a living wage, and if the trades union is to be of any benefit to its members, then it must protect them. And so we are brought face to face with this question: Which shall control? And in case of war, which shall survive? As I have previously stated, we are living under a competitive system of labor, and as five-sixths of the product of our toil remains in the hands of the employing class, to be used in further exploitation, it can be readily seen at this date that the tendency of labor bodies in the future will be towards conservatism for mutual protection. If we could only read the future as we read the past, we might forestall many events which are sure to happen; but the general apathy of the great majority of workers, coupled with their profound ignorance on economic questions, compels us to fight for present conditions and allow the future to take care of itself. But I believe that a day of awakening will come, and while not content to remain dormant myself, I can only drift with the tide and wait for that day.

I. E. WORCESTER,

Boston. Local Union 33.

Keep Your Lips Closed After Leaving the Meeting Hall

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

I desire to say a few words on a subject which, in my opinion, is of vital importance to labor organizations, one that our Local Unions would be wise in paying a little more attention to.

I have reference to the eagerness of some weakminded persons, as you may find them in every union, to give information to outsiders, and especially to newspapers, on the course to be pursued and the steps to be taken on entering into any movement for better conditions.

I find that this divulging of a union's business has done us more injury than the most foolish talk inside of any labor hall, because, as a rule, persons who are so eager to let outsiders or the press know what we are going to do, and how we are going to proceed in any movement, in giving the information tell more than they know, or ever will know.

As an illustration to substantiate my assertions I will say that on April 7, 1900, the carpenters of this city (Elmira) organized Local Union 532, and, up to that time, we were working ten hours per day at a rate of from $1.25 to $2.00.

In the spring of 1901 we demanded nine hours; we proceeded quietly in making our preparations, kept the matter out of the newspapers, and not only had our demand acceded to without the slightest objection, but many of us received an advance in wages, and everything passed off smoothly.

In the spring of 1902 we demanded an increase in wages of 25 cents per day. This time the newspapers got wind of our contemplated movement in an undue manner, and, as a result, published statements which were entirely incorrect, misleading and detrimental to us, as well as to our employers, and which caused us a great deal of trouble.

The outcome of this last movement was also a success, however; but as spring is again approaching, and the desire for better conditions is again manifesting itself all over this broad land, I am anxious to see errors of the past avoided, and in that endeavor I would urge upon every one of our Local Unions the necessity of observing caution and discretion in all matters pertaining to their demands on the employers; as soon as any meeting is closed, the lips of the members should be closed in this respect.

Hoping that my advice will be received in the spirit in which it is given, I remain

Yours fraternally,

M. V. MARGESON, Bus. Agt.,
Elmira, N. Y. Local Union 532.

Take Care of Your Due Cards.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

You will confer a favor on the undersigned by calling the attention of our members to the necessity and importance of being very careful of their due cards. I can readily recall many instances where members have lost or destroyed their due cards, and as a result we had great difficulty in ascertaining their financial standing on our books, our ex-Secretary having left the latter in a bad condition. This trouble would not occur, of course, if our Secretaries would keep a correct account of all payments made by members; but you can not always depend on that, and furthermore it sometimes occurs that the regular Secretary is absent and the Secretary pro tem. puts down payments received on a sheet of paper. The only safeguard for a member in these emergencies lies in the care which he takes of his due card and in seeing to it that proper credit is given him on his card for all payments. At present we have a case before us where a member was killed in an accident, and now his card can not be found. This has caused our present Secretary much trouble, not to speak of the annoyance and even hardship an incident of this kind may bring on the family, if there be any. While I claim that every member should look out for himself and take good care of his due card, I deem it our duty, collectively and individually, to protect the interests of our members, and with this object in view I send you these few lines for insertion in an early issue of our Journal.

'Tis Easy To Be Good

MARGARET SCOTT HALL

When others toil that we may rest
And walk that we may ride,
And humbly bow to fate's behest
Whilst we in wealth abide;
When those we hire do not repine
But all our laws obey,
And grant to wealth a right divine
Nor dare dispute its sway—
'Tis easy to be good.

When anxious cares do not oppress,
But each day brings us gain
From those who toil, we must confess
Our road to wealth is plain;
Though others know life's keen distress,
Our conscience feels no stain,
True Christian love we still profess Regardless of their pain.
'Tis easy to be good.

Though other lives are wrapped in gloom
Our own warm hearts are bright,
Our children's rosy faces bloom
Whilst theirs are touched with blight;
Though homeless men may roam the town
In want and penury,
When we repose on beds of down Secure in luxury—
'Tis easy to be good.

"The fittest must survive" we know,
Legitimate the plan
For one to drink the dregs of woe
Brewed by his fellowman;
To toil without a just reward
Is labor's own estate;
We'll tell the men whose fate is hard We've nought to arbitrate.—
'Tis easy to be good.

When others build a beautiful home
And we possess the deed,
They may as homeless renters roam,
Harrassed by debt and need;
We go to a church self-satisfied,
In feathers fine arrayed,
To Jearn of Christ the Crucified
On whom our trust is stayed.
'Tis easy to be good.

Circular Letter.

To the Officers and Members of the United Brotherhood:

Recently many complaints have been received at this office against the careless manner in which clearance cards are issued by our local officers to members desiring the same.

It is a common occurrence to be told that these cards are granted in violation of our General Laws; that in many cases they are not filled out correctly; that they do not contain the information they should; that the officers forget to sign them, and that they are not official, as the impress of the seal of the local union issuing same is not affixed thereto.

Is it any wonder, then, that members carrying such cards experience much difficulty in gaining admission to membership in the local union in which they present them? If rejected, complaint is lodged at this office demanding the reasons why, etc. If our members would only study the General Constitution of the U. B., they would find that Section 115 reads as follows:

"In entering a local union, a member with a Clearance Card shall hand in his card to the President, who shall appoint a committee of three, who shall retire and examine the applicant and report at once, when a vote shall be taken, and if a majority of the votes are favorable, he shall be admitted."

If not deposited in some local union on or before the date of its expiration, a clearance card becomes forfeited, or if not deposited the first meeting night after the holder goes to work, it becomes void.

These points are worthy of careful consideration and may avoid much trouble and inconvenience in the future.

Fraternally,

FRANK DUFFY,
General Secretary.

Official Report.

Of committee appointed by the General President of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, to carry out the instructions as embodied in the resolutions, and mutually agreed upon by the accredited representatives of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, and acquiesced in by the delegates to the Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in the City of New Orleans, in November, 1902, which said agreement is as follows:

"The Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the Amalgamated Association of Carpenters and Joiners request that the committee consist of five from each organization, they to select an umpire or arbitrator to meet on or before the first day of March, 1903, for the purpose of amalgamating the two organizations."

In pursuance of the above resolution, the following committee was appointed to represent the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America: William D. Huber, William B. Macfarlane, Thomas Forestall, E. G. Johnson and A. M. Swartz, and the following committee representing the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners: Thomas Atkinson, Thomas Barrows, John Ballentine, George Cavanaugh and Nicholas Mahan.

The Joint Committee met at the Ashland House, New York City, on February 16, 1903.

The committee of the A. S. of C. and J. appeared with a stenographer. The committee from the U. B. objected to the use of a stenographer, particularly the General President, not having been consulted. After considerable discussion the stenographer retired, and the matter relative to the need of a stenographer was discussed at length. It was mutually agreed that we would proceed without the assistance of a stenographer until such time as we found it necessary to call one in.

Nominations for Chairman were then in order. Mr. Thomas Atkinson was nominated, and he declined. Mr. W. D. Huber was nominated, and he also declined, requesting Mr. Atkinson to accept the nomination. Mr. Atkinson again declined. Mr. Thomas Barrows was nominated, and he declined. Mr. W. B. Macfarlane was nominated, and he declined. In order to facilitate matters and proceed with the work of the committee, Mr. W. D. Huber finally consented to act as Chairman of the Joint Committee. He was duly nominated and elected unanimously as Chairman of the meeting.

Nominations for Secretary were next in order. Mr. Atkinson was nominated for Secretary, and again declined, stating that he thought we ought to have a stenographer. After considerable discussion it was mutually agreed that Mr. Thomas Atkinson act as Secretary for the A. S. and W. B. Macfarlane act as Secretary for the U. B. Committee from the A. S. asked if the committee from the U.

B. had any proposition to make relative to the amalgamation of the two aforesaid organizations.

Committee from the U. B. asked if the A. S. had any propositions to make.

After some discussion the committee from the U. B. submitted the following proposition:

To the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, Greeting:

In accordance with the action taken by the A. F. of L. Convention, held in New Orleans, calling for a committee composed of representatives of your organization and representatives of the U. B. of C. and J. of A., to meet for the purpose of devising ways and means whereby your Society could become part and parcel of the U. B., we would submit the following proposition for your consideration:

First. All the members of the A. S. in the United States and Canada, in good standing, shall, upon initiation as members of the U. B., be entitled to all such benefits as are prescribed in the General Constitution, provided they have been free members for one year, as per Sections 89 and 90 of the U. B. Constitution.

Second. All members of the A. S. who are entitled to superannuation benefit in that Society shall, when becoming affiliated with the U. B., and when becoming incapacitated from following their occupation as journeymen carpenters, be entitled to this benefit, to be paid out of the funds of the U. B., provided that these members continue paying the extra amount of dues previously paid towards this superannuation benefit, and produce the necessary evidence to substantiate their claim. No member of the Amalgamated Society coming to this country after the affiliation of that Society with the U. B. has taken effect can claim any superannuation benefit, but must become a member of the U. B., so long as he follows the occupation of carpenter, or any of its branches, as specified in Section 64 of the General Constitution of the U. B.

Third. All apprentices shall be classed as semi-beneficial members after the expiration of their apprenticeship. They shall, upon payment of the dues of a full beneficial member, as provided in the laws of the respective Local Unions or District Councils, be classed as journeymen, and be entitled to all rights and privileges, as per General Constitution of the U. B. See Sec. 66.

After the reading of the above proposition the committee at this time adjourned at 12:30 o'clock.

The Joint Committee reconvened at 1:30 P. M., W. D. Huber presiding.

The proposition of the U. B. was discussed, and the A. S. Committee desired time to consider same. The Chair granted time, and we adjourned to meet as a Joint Committee on Tuesday, February 17th, at 9:00 A. M.

February 17, 1903.

The Joint Committee convened at 9:00 A. M., W. D. Huber presiding.

The A. S. Committee read a reply to the Joint Committee of the U. B. proposition of amalgamation under date of February 16th, as follows:

February 17, 1903.

To the Committee of the U. B. of C. and J. of A., Greeting:

We desire to state that our committee, after most careful consideration of your proposition as submitted yesterday, call your attention to the preamble which refers to the object of this joint conference as being for the purpose of devising ways and means whereby the A. S. could become part and parcel of the U. B., and would state it was with surprise and regret that our committee note that instead of submitting a plan whereby the two organizations might amalgamate, or become so blended as to become one, for all trade purposes, that you proceed to lay down, three (3) separate conditions, not for amalgamation, but for the admission and initiation of members of the A. S. into the U. B., thus depriving our members of many benefits and privileges they have been paying for for years, and abolish at one stroke those salient features of the A. S. which made it strong. Therefore we are unable to recommend to our members your proposition as a basis for amalgamation, for the reason that it does not offer an equitable means of the A. S. becoming part and parcel of the U. B., and we would further state that we refuse to believe that the great body of the members of the U. B. desires to destroy the rights and privileges of our members. Rather, we believe they desire to protect and safeguard those rights and privileges, and we further believe there is a strong desire for peace and harmony in the carpenter trade. Therefore, we desire to know if your committee is willing to consider a proposition from our side, one which, if adopted, will, we believe, ultimately and at a much earlier period than if no action is taken, reach the desired end, one which will so amalgamate our local bodies that we will become part and parcel of your District Councils in the different localities.

After the reading of the A. S. proposition the same was discussed at great length. A motion prevailed in the joint session that the U. B. Committee would consider any proposition at this time that the A. S. Committee desires to submit in conjunction with the previous propositions submitted by the U. B. Committee. The A. S. Committee retired and submitted a further proposition, as follows:

CONDITIONS OF AMALGAMATING.

First. The representation of all the branches of the A. S. of C. and J. in all District Councils of the U. B. under the same conditions as Locals of the U. B., except that no payments shall be made from the funds of the said District Councils to members of the A. S. of C. and J.

Second. All branches of the A. S. of C. and J. and members thereof to be subject to and under the control of the District Council in the same manner as members of the U. B., in accordance with their General Constitution, but no act or decision of a District Council shall deprive a member of the A. S. of C. and J. of any benefit he would have otherwise received from his own organization.

Third. Any member or branch of the A. S. of C. and J. having violated their own Constitution shall be considered under the jurisdiction of the A. S. of C. and J., and shall be considered suspended from all recognition and protection of the District Council of the U. B. until full satisfaction has been given.

Fourth. Each branch of the A. S. of C. and J. shall pay a per capita tax of one cent (1c.) per member per month to the District Council of the U. B. to which they are affiliated for every member in good standing on their books.

Fifth. In places where no branches of the A. S. of C. and J. exist, every member of said organization working in such District shall pay into the nearest Local of the U. B. five cents (5c.) per month for a working card, and obey all trade rules of the District.

Sixth. A. S. of C. and J. cards shall be fully recognized everywhere when the foregoing conditions have been complied with.

Seventh. Members of District Councils representing the A. S. of C. and J. shall be eligible for election on all delegations to meet employers and any other office, except secretary and treasurer.

Eighth. No discrimination shall be made against members of the A. S. of C. and J. on account of their membership in that organization.

Ninth. All fines for violation of trade rules imposed by the District Council where a branch of the A. S. of C. and J. is represented shall be the property of the society to which the member belongs.

Tenth. Any branch or members of the A. S. of C. and J. violating the trade rules of a District in which there is a District Council of the U. B. shall be tried by that body, and, if found guilty, shall be punished or disciplined in accordance with the Constitution of the organization to which they belong.

Eleventh. When it is necessary to take a referendum vote on a trade question, the branches of the A. S. of C. and J. shall be considered as Locals of the U. B. for the purpose of such vote.

Twelfth. Any branch or member, with the approval of his branch, feeling aggrieved that a decision of an A. D., may appeal against the decision of a District Council, providing the member or branch complies with such decision and gives notice of appeal within thirty (30) days from date of such decision to the District Council.

Thirteenth. There shall be a Court of Appeals, composed of the G. P. of the U. B., the D. S. of the A. S. of C. and J. and one member of the G. E. B. of the U. B. and one member of the D. C. of the A. S. Their decision shall be final.

A copy was given to the committee of the U. B., and same was discussed in Joint Committee. The U. B. Committee took the same under consideration and submitted the following reply:

To the Committee of the A. S. of C. and J., Greeting:

We, the committee of the U. B. of C. and J. of A., being appointed to confer with you on the terms as specified by the resolution of the A. F. of L., after having submitted a proposition as a basis for the proper amalgamation of the A. S. with the U. B., and the same being refused or rejected by your committee for the reasons as set forth in your reply, dated February 17, 1903, said reply requesting our consideration of the counter-proposition from your committee, designated as your conditions of amalgamation, would respectfully desire to state that as per resolution adopted by the A. F. of L., said committees of the A. S. and the U. B. were instructed to try and bring about an amalgamation, and not an agreement of trade rules, between said organizations, and on the basis that the A. S. should become part and parcel of the U. B. of C. and J. of A., and we do not consider your letter of said date, together with the entire proposition as submitted, to be in keeping or in harmony with the resolutions which were finally adopted by the A. F. of L., and would therefore respectfully refuse to accept the proposition or conditions for amalgamation, as so specified to date, for the foregoing as well as following reasons, viz.: That in the matter, as contained in your entire proposition, the same does not provide for a proper amalgamation, as expressed in aforesaid resolution of the A. F. of L., but is simply a form for an agreement between said organizations, and by the action of the former conventions of the U. B. all agreements with dual organizations have been abrogated and instructions given that no future agreements shall be made along the lines as set forth in your propositions, and we, as a committee from said organization, would not be justified in again entering into any agreement with the A. S., or any other organization of carpenters, which would simply be the means of again perpetuating the past experiences of our respective organizations; also, that your proposition would secure to members of the A. S. many of the rights and benefits that should inure and properly belong to the members of the U. B.; also, that in order to be properly represented in the District Council of the U. B., it is absolutely necessary that all representatives to said Council shall be members of the U. B., as per Section 47a of the General Constitution, and any representative from any dual organization would be a violation of the expressed will of the highest tribunal of said organization, as legally ratified by a referendum vote of the entire membership of the same.

In submitting our reply to your proposition of the 17th inst., as above stated, we feel that our action herein set forth will be commended by our organization, and that if at this time your committee desires to present any matter for consideration bearing upon the direct amalgamation of your Society with the U. B., as set forth in the aforesaid resolutions, they will further justify our position in continuing our effort for the accomplishment of one of the highest aims of organized labor: a perfect unity and co-operation through but one organization of each craft into one grand organization.

Respectfully submitted,

The above reply was read by W. B. Macfarlane of the U. B. Committee, and a copy of same was given to Mr. T. Atkinson of the A. S. Committee. After a lengthy discussion in Joint Committee, the A. S. Committee desired to retire and discuss the U. B. proposition. The Chair granted the same.

February 18, 1903, 9:30 A. M.

Third day's session of the Joint Committee of the A. S. and the U. B., W. D. Huber presiding.

The A. S. Committee read a reply to the U. B. proposition of February 17, 1903, as follows:

New York, February 18, 1903.

To the Committee of the U. B. of C. and J., Greeting:

We desire to state that our committee, after a careful consideration of your reply under date of February 17th, is fully aware of the action of the A. F. of L. upon this question, and would have it clearly understood that we are desirous to comply with their reasonable demands, and we regret the apparent misconception of our proposition. It is not a proposition for any agreement, national or otherwise, other than a proposed agreement to amalgamate all our local bodies in such a manner as will give the United Brotherhood complete control of all trade rules by all our branches becoming part and parcel of the United Brotherhood, relative to trades jurisdiction, thereby removing the present dual organization in our trade, because the Amalgamated Society would then become a component part of the United Brotherhood. We note with regret that you give as a reason for your refusal to accept our proposition that it would violate a section of your Constitution. This could be said of almost any form of amalgamation, as we believe any proposition of amalgamation would require the alteration of some portion of our Constitutions. If it did not, it could hardly be called amalgamation, and we regret to note your refusal to make any minor concessions respecting representation of your District Council, which only has trade jurisdiction. We also sincerely regret to note the absence of any expression whereby the Amalgamated Society could become a component part of the United Brotherhood without disregarding the vested interests of our members, which we believe all should unite to protect, and especially when these interests are not regarded as affecting the present controversy between the two organizations. Therefore, as a further evidence of our desire to comply with the requisition of the A. F. of L., as expressed at the New Orleans Convention, and in accordance with your desire for a fuller and more complete form of amalgamation, we respectfully submit the following addition to our former proposition, viz.: That the American District Committee of the Amalgamated Society report monthly their membership in good standing to the General Office of the U. B., and pay a per capita tax to the aforesaid General Office equivalent to the amount as paid to the A. F. of L. as their contribution for the general organization of the trades.

Respectfully submitted,

After discussing the same at unusual length in joint session, it was agreed that the committees retire and endeavor to submit something further along the lines of amalgamation. The committees retired.

The Joint Committee reconvened, and the following was submitted by the committee of the A. S.:

New York, February 19, 1903.

To the Committee of the U. B. of C. and J., Greeting:

Our committee have carefully considered the sentiments as expressed at this morning's session, and at this time we are unable to make further suggestions, as we believe the interests of all will be better conserved by awaiting your reply to our supplementary proposition under date of February 18th.

A short discussion took place, and the committee adjourned to meet on February 20th, at 9 A. M.

New York, February 20, 1903.

The committee of the A. S. and the U. B. convened at 9:00 A. M., W. D. Huber presiding.

The committee from the U. B. submitted the following:

New York, February 19, 1903.

To the Committee of the A. S. of C. and J.:

Gentlemen—We, the committee of the U. B. of C. and J., appointed to confer with your committee, after a careful and earnest consideration of yours of the 18th inst., would state that in addition to the previous proposition on a basis of amalgamation of the A. S. with that of the U. B., we would further submit the following conditions of amalgamation of the above named organizations:

First. That all those classed as ordinary members in your Society in the United States and Canada shall, upon producing a card showing them to be such, at the consummation of the amalgamation of the A. S. and the U. B., become members of the U. B. without the payment of any initiation fee and immediately thereafter be entitled to all benefits and privileges of the U. B.

Second. All those classed as trades section members in your Society in the United States and Canada shall, upon producing a card showing them to be such, at the consummation of the amalgamation of the A. S. with the U. B., be admitted free of initiation fee and shall become beneficial members as prescribed in the Constitution of the U. B.

Third. All those classed as juniors in your Society in the United States and Canada shall be governed according to Section 3 of the proposition submitted February 16, 1903, and be admitted free of initiation fee.

In submitting the above, we desire that they be considered in conjunction with our former propositions as a proper basis of amalgamation of the above named organizations.

Respectfully submitted,

The above proposition was discussed at great length, and the committee of the A. S. requested time to deliberate on same. The Chairman, W. D. Huber, granted the request of the A. S. Committee. The Joint Committee then adjourned to meet at 1:00 P. M.

At 1:30 P. M. the committee reconvened, W. D. Huber presiding.

The committee from the A. S. read the following to the Joint Committee:

New York, February 20, 1903.

To the Committee of the U. B. of C. and J. of A., Greeting:

We, the committee of the A. S., after careful consideration of your reply under date of February 19th, regret to find no further proposition for amalgamation on the lines as laid down by the resolution adopted by the late convention of the A. F. of L. at New Orleans, and we deplore the unyielding position assumed by you, one which we believe is unfair and unforgotten. We believe our endeavor to so amalgamate our organizations as to give complete trade jurisdiction to the United Brotherhood and pay an equitable share of the expenses of organization of the trade, whilst at the same time safeguarding and protecting the financial interests of our members, will be commended, not only by our own members, but by the great body of trades unionists of our country. Therefore we would most respectfully inform your committee that it devolves upon you to make further and more liberal propositions whereby the A. S. of C. and J. and the U. B. of C. and J. may amalgamate on lines which will give to the U. B. complete trade jurisdiction, and at the same time not deprive our members of benefits and privileges peculiar to and guaranteed by our organization.

Respectfully submitted,

After the reading of the same by the A. S. Committee there was a lengthy discussion, and it was apparent that the committee of the A. S. did not desire to unite with the United Brotherhood, but rather to enter into an agreement along trade rule lines. The Chair asked if there were any further business to come before the committee.

The committee from the U. B. made reference relative to the resolution that was mutually agreed upon by the accredited representatives of the A. S. and the U. B., and acquiesced in by the delegates of the late convention of the A. F. of L., and we, the committee of the U. B., expressed our desire to carry out the resolutions in their entirety, and the committee from the A. S. stated that they had defined their position in the replies to the U. B. propositions.

There being no further business before the Joint Committee, it was moved by Mr. T. Barrows of the Amalgamated Committee, and seconded by Mr. T. Atkinson, that a vote of thanks be tendered to Mr. W. D. Huber for the fair and impartial manner in which he had conducted the meetings.

The committee then adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,

To the Officers and Members of the U. B. of C. and J. of A.:

Brothers—In submitting the foregoing report of the committee of the U. B. of C. and J. of A. appointed by the G. P. to confer with the committee of the A. S. relative to the amalgamation of the A. S. with the U. B., we would say that we labored earnestly and assiduously to carry into effect the resolutions that were finally adopted and mutually agreed to at the late convention of the A. F. of L. held at New Orleans, December 13 to 22, 1902. Your committee was fair, open and aboveboard at all times during the sessions of the Joint Committee, and we feel that the more than fair propositions submitted by your committee will not only be commended by the rank and file of the U. B., but by the great majority of organized labor within the jurisdiction of the A. F. of L.

Trusting that the labors of your committee will meet with your approval, we are,

Yours,

W. D. HUBER,
W. B. MACFARLANE,
A. M. SCHWARTZ,
E. G. JOHNSON,
THOS. FORRESTALL,

The Origin of the Present Eight-Hour Work-Day in America

BY GABRIEL EDMONSTON

First General President U. B. of C. & J. of A.

IF I had to choose a single act of mine to stand before the "Judgment Bar" as a plea for mercy instead of Divine justice, I would unhesitatingly point to the introduction of the eight-hour resolution in the Chicago convention of the Federation of organized Trades and Labor Unions of America October 7, 1884. I think I have good reasons to be specially proud of an act that led to so large a benefit to my fellow craftsmen as well as to those of other trades, also to jealously guard my sole claim to that high honor. This claim is also a heritage of the trade that cannot be bartered or stolen.

At the Atlanta convention of the U. B. C. & J. of A. in September last a delegate while speaking in behalf of our late General Secretary attributed to him the credit of being "also the father of the present eight-hour work-day." This I then denied on the floor of the convention, and, in obedience to a promise there made, now lay the facts before the Brotherhood and all others who have worked for the betterment of the working classes. This is done in order that an impartial judgment may be rendered, as well as to establish the historical truth of the inauguration of a movement that is so far-reaching in its results. Brother McGuire told me at Atlanta that he had never claimed that honor; also, that if an opportunity was offered, he would straighten the matter. This was not done, owing, however, to no default on the part of Brother McGuire.

I am well aware that the agitation of the eight-hour work-day is older than trades unionism in America, or even the discovery of this continent. The credit for it properly belongs to the Masonic fraternity. It was in the latter body that I received my first inspiration as to its justice and value, and governed myself accordingly. Probably the first instance of the inauguration of the eight-hour work-day in America was by the Granite Cutters of Columbia, South Carolina, prior to 1861. The Baltimore Carpenters established it in 1865. Both of these were local affairs, and the want of a national union was fatal to their longevity.

I was not a delegate to the Fourth Annual Convention of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, which met in Cincinnati, August 5-9, 1884; however, they saw fit to reelect me for the third time to represent them in "The Federation of Organized Trades and Labor Unions of America." The General Secretary at once notified me of my selection, and I promptly proposed the following through the columns of the official journal, THE CARPENTER, for September, 1884, page 6, third column (written in August):

A PRACTICAL PROPOSITION.

The next Congress of the Federation of Trades should take steps toward a national movement to adopt eight hours as a day's work simultaneously by all trades throughout the United States. Probably a date far ahead might be fixed, say May 1, 1886, as the time. This would give ample time for preparation. I do not look for shorter hours to be fixed in any other manner. To depend on the legislative power to adopt this reform is to delay, if not defeat it altogether. If one State were to enact such a movement in advance of others, it might handicap the industries of that State to such an extent as to allow an adjoining State to control a larger share of trade by reason of it, and furnish a strong argument against shorter hours. I am opposed on general principles to depending on the ruling class to establish reforms, when we can do it ourselves. To concede them a right to pass a law to shorten the hours is also to concede the right to lengthen them when the interests of wealth demand. If the hours of labor could be sufficiently shortened to absorb the surplus labor and furnish continuous employment, steady wages and a comparatively equal show in competing with cast-iron laborers run by a belt, I would be a protectionist. I would like to know the views of the Local Unions of the Brotherhood on my proposition to take decided action for eight hours.

G. EDMONSTON.

I was authorized by the Local Unions throughout the Brotherhood to proceed with my proposition. In the same issue of the CARPENTER (page 4) an editorial by our late General Secretary, Brother McGuire, under the caption, "The Federation of Trades and Its Annual Congress," says: "From the very inception of this congress our Brotherhood has been foremost in its advocacy and support. We have been represented in each Trade Congress and will be in the next. We believe a Federation of Trades and Labor Unions is the only practical way in which to identify the interests of one class of labor with the other, and yet preserve the distinctive organization of each without consolidation or centralization, or doing violence to each other's special trade desires. To influence legislation in Congress and the States, regardless of party, to extend the influence of trade and labor societies, to federate them in one chain of fraternal interests, to financially assist each other in trade troubles, and to boycott adverse employers and business men, are some of the objects for which the Federation was founded. And in this it has done a vast amount of good. Never was it the thought that the Federation should be the head center from which should emanate all power and authority, nor can any other organization ever fulfill that mission. The very moment the labor movement attempts to reach any such pitch of centralization, it will fail of success by that means. The general movement of all trades must be organically federative and voluntary, and not centralized and autocratic. The Federation can be simply representative and reflect the sentiments of its constituencies—nothing more. It can not go very far in advance of them, but it can at least offer suggestions. One of these suggestions, upon which it might very appropriately act, is proposed by Brother Edmonston and printed this month in our columns. It is worthy of profound consideration, and we favor its adoption.

The movement was also ably seconded by Frank K. Foster, Secretary of the Federation of Trades, in his annual report, dated October 2, 1884, which reads as follows:

It appears to be the generally expressed desire of the societies represented in this Federation that it assume the initiative in a national movement for the reduction of the hours of labor. Sporadic attempts of individual trades in certain localities have met with varying degrees of success, but there is little doubt that a universal, centrally directed advance will prove both practical and triumphant. To formulate the machinery for this attempt requires your deepest thought. This much has been determined by the history of the national eight-hour law—it is useless to wait for legislation in this matter. In the world of economic reform the working classes must depend upon themselves for the enforcement of measures, as well as for their conception. A united demand for a shorter working day, backed by thorough organization, will prove vastly more effective than the enactment of a thousand laws depending for enforcement upon the pleasure of aspiring politicians or sycophantic department officials.

I recommend that all possible means be used to arouse public opinion on this question, and that a vote be taken in all labor organizations, prior to the next Congress, as to the feasibility of a universal strike for a working day of eight (or nine) hours, to take effect not later than May 1, 1886. There can be no doubt but that the question of the reduction of the hours of labor is one of the most practical that will attract your attention, and it should receive the notice it merits.

I also had the enthusiastic support of my colleague, Brother Thomas P. Doran, of Chicago, and Brother J. P. McGinley, third President of the Brotherhood, who was representing the Illinois State Federation. I am also indebted to the following delegates for their encouragement and assistance: August Donath, International Typographical Union; Fred Blend, Cigar Makers' International Union; A. C. Cameron, Chicago Trade and Labor Assembly; Richard Powers, Lake Seamen Union, and E. W. Oyster, Federation of Labor of Washington, D. C.

At the first day's session I offered the resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the Federation of Organized Trade and Labor Unions of the United States and Canada, That eight hours shall constitute a legal day's labor from and after May 1, 1886, and that we recommend to labor organizations throughout this jurisdiction that they so direct their laws as to conform to this resolution by the time named.

This was adopted by the convention with but two dissenting votes. At that time the Knights of Labor were numerically the strongest labor organization, though not a trade union in the accepted meaning of that term. I was anxious to anticipate the probable position they might take toward so important a measure that had its initiative in a rival body. I had no doubt but that the individual Knights would be in hearty sympathy with the movement, and that any exhibition of jealousy or any effort to defeat the aims of the Trades Union for the sake of factional advantage, by ambitious leaders, on so vital a measure, would be resented by the rank and file and inure to the benefit of the Federation of Trades. It would have been poor strategy on the part of the Federation to have entered into a struggle of such magnitude by openly snubbing a possible ally in the Knights of Labor, apparently superior at that time in numbers and resources. I thereupon wrote the following:

Resolved, That the incoming legislative committee be instructed to extend an invitation to the Knights of Labor to cooperate in the general movement to establish the eight-hour reform.

I persuaded Richard Powers, who was an influential member of the Knights of Labor, to offer it, which he did, and it was adopted without opposition. At this session I was elected Secretary of the Federation of Trades by acclamation at the usual salary of my predecessors, namely, thanks and abuse (mostly abuse).

On June 8, following, I officially sent to Fred Turner, General Secretary of the Knights of Labor, a copy of the eight-hour resolution and requested the cooperation of that body in establishing the same on May 1, 1886, with the request that he present them to the next General Assembly for its action. This was sent by registered letter. I neither received any acknowledgment of its receipt, other than the Post Office Department card, or any information of the action of the General Assembly. I now look upon the failure of the Knights to endorse the action taken by the Federation of Trades as a lost opportunity for them and one of the important factors that presented the Federation of Trades and its successor, the American Federation of Labor, as the ultima Thule for the many thousands of organized workmen who were patiently waiting for something more practical and solid than the mere petitioning of legislatures to do for them what they should do for themselves. It is only just to say that in the final struggle the individual Knights of Labor were found standing by the side of the trades-unionist and did their duty.

In the interval between the adoption of the eight-hour resolution and the date of its proposed enforcement, May 1, 1886, the Trades Union made a new departure by taking the public into its confidence.

By means of public meetings they undertook to show the necessity for, and the good expected by, shortening the hours of labor. On July 7, 1885, I issued an official letter, that was given to the labor press, as follows:

FEDERATION OF ORGANIZED TRADES AND LABOR UNIONS OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

Washington, July 7, 1885.

To all Trades and Labor Unions Throughout the United States and Canada, and to All Workingmen who Hope for Future Betterment:

We deem it important to call your attention to the resolution adopted by the Fourth Annual Session of the "International Federation of Trades," fixing May 1, 1886, for the general adoption of eight hours as a day's work. The multiplication and use of labor-saving machines make it our first duty to shorten the hours of labor, if we would share in the benefits of their introduction; otherwise they must result in driving out of existence free labor, the boast of an enlightened age and civilization. We hold that this is the only practical solution of a much-needed reform, on the importance of which we all agree. The objections of waiting for a law affecting all workmen alike are serious, involving an invaluable right, tedious delay, and a loss of faith in our own powers.

Your right to put into practical operation such a law is superior and undisputed, and it only remains for you to say if the eight-hour law passed by your representatives shall become a fixed rule of action from May 1, 1886.

The ratification of this measure by every local Trade and Labor Union or Assembly of Knights of Labor on this continent, publicly announced, would add to the impetus now gained, and give it a prestige of success.

No fair-minded, intelligent employer will oppose it, because it is an undisputed fact that every measure which improves the condition of employees carries with it equal advantages to employers and the community as well. In support of this statement, we refer to the fact that it was the high price and scarcity of labor in this country, due to the independence of American labor, that stimulated the inventive genius of America to supply an obedient substitute, and made us a nation of inventors and manufacturers.

It is not difficult to follow this first cause to its logical effect, the accumulated wealth of our country, and to it we confidently look for still further developments in this direction.

If this wealth is now unequally distributed, a large part of the blame must rest on our own shoulders, because of our failure to shorten the hours of labor.

In conclusion, we ask you to remember that this is our eight-hour law, and upon us depends its failure or success.

Fraternally yours,

[SEAL.] G. EDMONSTON,
Secretary.

The anarchists also took advantage of this opportunity for their propaganda. Snubbed by the trades unions of Chicago they persisted in their intermeddling with the eight-hour agitation. The trades unions of that city insisted that this interference was unwarranted and uninvited and was doing incalculable harm to the movement. I was appealed to as Secretary in the fall of 1885 by the trades unions of Chicago to make some public announcement of our disapproval of the attempt by the anarchists to identify themselves with the Trades unions, while the former were openly declaring on the platform and in their paper that "the eight-hour work day was merely a palliative remedy and that the only permanent cure was through anarchy." I wrote a letter for publication as requested. I regret that I have no copy preserved. In substance I said that Trades Unionism and Anarchy were diametrically opposed. Skilled labor under the wage system was entirely dependent on an orderly state of society for employment. In a state of anarchy no prudent capitalist would want to build or manufacture when his title to his goods would rest alone in his ability to retain possession by force.

Socialism with its orderly state of society, though possibly impracticable, was far preferable to chaos. The anarchists, however, persisted and the Haymarket riot of May 4, 1886, resulted. Public approval, largely in favor of the trades unions, shocked at the outrage and failing to distinguish at a glance the wide difference between the propagandas, became indifferent if not entirely reversed. The Bricklayers National Union seemed all at once to lose their nerve and compromised on a nine-hour work day, followed by the Carpenters and other trades.

In spite of the doings of the anarchists the movement was a success. The Granite Cutters of Washington City, Albany, Chicago, and Denver put the suggestion of the Federation of Trades permanently in effect May 1, 1886.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, in his pamphlet, entitled "The Eight-Hour Workday," says:

Before 1884, the members of the Cigar-makers' Union and non-unionists in the United States worked as many hours as their inclinations or forced circumstances compelled; in 1884 they were set at a maximum of ten hours per day; in 1886, within four months after the resolution to that effect was approved by the journeymen, the eight-hour day was the universal rule, and has been so to this day, to the advantage of all concerned.

As the result of the general movement of May 1, 1886, more than 250,000 workers secured the eight-hour day, and a million of others gained a shorter work-day, yet business easily adjusted itself to the new conditions; in fact, a period of general business prosperity ensued.

In 1889 a movement was started looking to the enforcement of the eight-hour work-day on May 1, 1890, among the carpenters of the country, the net result of which was among the carpenters, among whom ten hours was the rule and nine the exception. After the date named 46,197 had secured the eight-hour work-day and nearly the entire remainder of the craft gained the nine-hour day, and since then the eight-hour day is the general rule in all of the building trades of large cities, and nine hours elsewhere. Does any master builder decry the new rule now? Does that interest now claim that business has not adjusted itself to the shorter work-day? Certain it is that the "Master Builders' Association" is on record as testifying to the mutual benefit of the measure and urging its general adoption.

In a foot-note Mr. Gompers adds:

As a result of the movement of May 1, 1886, street and steam, railway employes, bakers, tailors, garment workers and other workers (generally unskilled), too numerous to mention, who before worked fourteen, sixteen, and, in many instances, eighteen hours a day, had their hours generally reduced to twelve, and are now ten or less.

The Federation of Trades prior to 1884 had no practical plan outlined that could command the enthusiastic support of the entire labor field. When they committed themselves to the task of legislating the eight-hour workday into existence it was in effect a new declaration of independence. Laws in the interest of labor were already on the statute books, placed there by politicians from all professions and callings, but there never had been prior to that time a law for the working class that did not have a mouldy spot in it or soon after its passage developed one.

In concluding allow me to say that I was in hopes I would not be forced to write such an account and in the first person. The rapid growth of the American Federation of Labor and its practical value to the trades unions has been often told by abler writers, but the story of the inception of the Eight-Hour Movement by that body has, so far as I know, remained unwritten until the present moment.

Sam. Leffingwell Passed Away

[Omitted from February issue through an oversight as a result of the removal of the General Office.]

Scarcely a year has gone by since we recorded the death of one of nature's noblemen, John Swinton, when we are again called upon to announce to our readers the departure from this life of another friend of the working man, and for many years a contributor to THE CARPENTER, Sam. L. Leffingwell.

Mr. Leffingwell was a staunch advocate of the cause of labor. He passed away at his home in this city on January 16th, at the age of 74 years. Printer by trade, he was one of the pioneers of the trade movement in this country, having been one of the most farseeing and active members of the International Typographical Union for fifty-two years. He was also the organizer of several State and local central bodies in Indiana, and during the time of prosperity of the Knights of Labor he was one of their organizers, as well as Master Workman of Alpha Assembly 1712 of that order.

He served in the civil and the Mexican wars. He was the author of "Leffingwell's Rules of Order," by which many of our Local Unions are guided in their debates and transactions of business. He wrote the history of the International Typographical Union, at the occasion of its golden jubilee, held in Cincinnati last August.

Sam. L. Leffingwell was also a contributor to many labor papers and magazines; he was a clever and able writer, and the master efforts of his brain were highly appreciated by organized labor and its friends. His death is keenly felt by us and our entire Brotherhood.

Neither Shirk Nor Set a Pace

To his employer the workingman owes nothing. To his fellows he owes it that he shall not "set a pace" to curry favor with the boss. To his own self-respect and to society he owes it that he shall be an efficient workman—that he shall neither shirk nor scamp his job. Some day we will have a state of society in which no one will be driven to work beyond his strength, and in which no man's exceptional swiftness or endurance will take bread from his brother's mouth. Meanwhile, we have to bear in mind the double duty indicated above, and steer a middle course.

The person who understands the multiplication table should have little difficulty in understanding the power of trade unionism.

An infliction of boycott is very like a case of "la grippe;" it most always leaves traces of its ravages after its subsidence.

Wohin führen die gewerkschaftlichen Bestrebungen?

Es wird als allgemein feststehend betrachtet, daß die gewerkschaftlichen Bestrebungen über Fragen der Gegenwart nicht hinausgehen und nur solche Forderungen in sich schließen, die die jeweilig vorherrschenden Arbeits-Verhältnisse und die momentane Lage ihrer Angehörigen nötig machen. Diese Auffassung ist im Allgemeinen zutreffend. — Die Gewerkschaften, als solche, haben sich kein zu erreichendes Endziel gesetzt; sie suchen ziellos ihre Zwecke zu erfüllen, und lassen alle Fragen, die nur erst in der Zukunft ihre Lösung finden können, außer Acht.

So sagt Sektion 3 der General-Constitution unserer Vereinigten Bruderschaft:

Die Zwecke der Vereinigten Bruderschaft sind: Der Stückarbeit entgegenzuwirken, das Bezahlungsweisen zu fördern, einen höheren Grad von Handfertigkeit in unserem Handwerk herbeizuführen, das Gefühl der Freundschaft unter unseren Fachgenossen zu nähren, zur Erlangung von Arbeit einander zu helfen, die tägliche Arbeitszeit zu reduzieren, hinreichende Bezahlung für unsere Arbeit zu sichern, bei Todesfällen oder dauernder Arbeitsunfähigkeit Unterstützung zu geben und durch gesetzliche und passende Mittel die moralische, intellektuelle und soziale Lage unserer Mitglieder zu heben und unser Handwerk zu verbessern.

Wir können nun ohne Ueberhebung behaupten, daß da, wo sich die Arbeiter unseres oder anderer Gewerke zu gemeinschaftlichem Handeln vereinigt, also eine Gewerkschaft-Organisation vorhanden war, welche sich die Erfüllung dieser Zwecke zur Aufgabe machte, Viel erreicht worden ist, selbst in Punkte Hebung der moralischen, sozialen und intellektuellen Lage der Mitglieder. Und doch müssen wir uns fragen: Wie kommt es, daß wir trotzdem und trotz der zahllosen Kämpfe, die wir in der Verfolgung unserer Zwecke zu bestehen hatten, alle Ursache haben, mit unserer Lage unzufrieden zu sein; und wie kommt es, daß wir immer von Neuem wieder den Kampf zur Verbesserung unserer Lage aufnehmen müssen?

Wenn wir einen Rückblick werfen auf die Ereignisse des letzten Vierteljahrhunderts, auf die Anstrengungen der organisierten Arbeiter, menschenwürdige Arbeits-Bedingungen zu erringen; alle Opfer in Anschlag bringen, die die Gewerkschafts-Bewegung während dieses Zeitraumes gefordert hat, und über unsere heutige ökonomische und politische Lage eine Betrachtung anstellen, so müssen wir zugeben, daß der gewerkschaftliche Kampf nicht nur ein solcher der Gegenwart, sondern ein unaufhörlicher, auch ein Kampf der Zukunft ist.

Den Gewerkschafts-Organisationen ist weder Ruhe noch Rast beschieden. Jede Lohn-erhöhung in irgendwelchem Berufszweige bedeutet heute nicht mehr und nicht weniger, als daß, wenn es gut ging, der gegebenen Lohnsumme die Kaufkraft wieder verleiht wurde, welche sie vor einer, schon vorher eingetretenen, Preiserhöhung aller Lebensbedürfnisse gehabt hat. Aber nicht allein das; wir haben auch täglich Gelegenheit zu beobachten, daß die Unternehmer auf Grund stattgehabter Lohnerhöhungen nicht nur den erhöhten Lohnbetrag auf den Waarenpreis schlagen, sondern auch noch die Lohnerhöhung benötigen, um einen Extra-Profit bei dem Waaren-Abatz herauszuschlagen. Ferner bieten alle Steuererhöhungen, seien diese inländische oder ausländische, wie bei Einfuhrzöllen, und die Erhebung neuer Steuern, wie bei Gelegenheit des spanisch-amerikanischen Krieges, den Unternehmern einen Vorwand zur Heraufschraubung der Waarenpreise. Daher kommt es, daß, nachdem wir der Meinung waren, durch eine Lohnerhöhung materielle Vorteile erlangt zu haben, die Kaufkraft unserer Löhne auf das frühere Niveau zurückgegangen ist, und wir letztere wiederum zur Befriedigung unserer so bescheidenen Lebensansprüche als ungenügend finden.

Sehen wir nun, wie es sich mit der Verkürzung der Arbeitszeit verhält. — Deren Vorteile bestehen bekanntlich in erster Linie darin, daß sie uns mehr Zeit zur Ruhe und Erholung gewährt. In zweiter Linie, daß die Verminderung der Arbeitsstunden den Arbeitslosen und allen Arbeitern mehr Arbeitsgelegenheit verschafft, die Nachfrage nach Arbeit und somit die Gefahr der Herabdrückung der Arbeitslöhne verringert.

Der Unternehmer aber, dessen Lösung ist, so viel als möglich und so billig als möglich zu produzieren, um im Konkurrenzkampf das Feld, das heißt den Waarenmarkt, behaupten zu können, wendet alle Mittel an, um aus seinen Arbeitern ein größeres, womöglich das vor der Zeitverkürzung gelieferte Arbeits-Quantum herauszupressen. Weitere Verbesserungen der Maschinerie werden erfunden, eine größere und ergiebigere Arbeitsteilung wird eingeführt, und dadurch wird die Absicht der organisierten Arbeiter, durch Verkürzung der Arbeitszeit das Heer der Arbeitslosen zu vermindern, schmählich vereitelt. Wir sehen also, daß auch die durch verkürzte Arbeitszeit errungenen Vorteile nur vorübergehende sind.

Wenn wir nun diese Sachlage in's Auge fassen, so müssen wir als intelligente Arbeiter, als die wir doch gelten wollen, von unserem bisherigen engbegrenzten Standpunkte abweichen, und können logischer Weise nicht umhin, uns der Zukunft zuzuwenden.

Wir müssen uns fragen: Wohin führen unsere gewerkschaftlichen Bestrebungen? Soll der gegenwärtige Kriegszustand immer fort dauern, oder giebt es einen Ausweg, der uns zu dauerndem Frieden und zu Verhältnissen führt, die dem Arbeiter die Rechte garantieren, die ihm als Wertherzeuger und als nützlichstes Glied der menschlichen Gesellschaft zukommen? Wir sagen ja! — der Ausweg liegt, wie es bei allen Uebelständen ohne Unterschied der Fall ist, in der Beseitigung ihrer Ursachen.

Die Ursachen, die uns zu stetigem Kampfe zwingen, die den Interessenstreit zwischen der produzierenden und nichtproduzierenden, der Lohnarbeiter- und der Kapitalisten-Klasse, hervorgerufen, und denen alle Mißstände, unter welchen wir Arbeiter leiden müssen, zuzuschreiben sind, diese Ursachen liegen in der Unfreiheit der Arbeiter, in der heutigen, der kapitalistischen Produktions-Weise. Und folglich liegt der Ausweg, oder die Lösung, in der Beseitigung der letzteren und der Einführung einer Produktions-Weise, in welcher Jedem das Seinige gewährt wird, und nicht Interessenstreit, sondern Interessengleichheit, herrscht. Dies kann aber nur in einer Gesellschafts-Einrichtung möglich sein, in der alle Arbeitsmittel, sowohl wie alle Arbeitsprodukte, Gemeingut und Produktion wie Konsumation streng gemeinschaftliche sind.

In der heutigen, der kapitalistischen Einrichtung, ist der Arbeiter gezwungen, seine Arbeitskraft an den Kapitalisten zu verkaufen, weil letzterer der Besitzer der Arbeitsmittel ist. Der Preis, den der Kapitalist dem Arbeiter in Form von Lohn zukommen läßt, ist im günstigsten Falle gerade hinreichend, um die zur Erhaltung seiner Arbeitskraft notwendigen Bedürfnisse befriedigen zu können. Der Besitzer der Arbeitsmittel behält den größeren Antheil unseres Arbeitsertrages für sich, und vor seinem so erworbenen Reichtum beugen sich die Gesetgeber, die Richter, die Staats-, Stadt- und Gemeinde-Beamten und sind ihm unterthänig. Er ist nicht nur in ökonomischer Beziehung Herr der Situation; er gebietet auch, Dank dieser ökonomischen Machtstellung und, nicht zu vergessen, Dank der Interessenlosigkeit der sich ihrer Macht unbewußten Arbeiter, über die politische Macht, von der er in ausgiebigster Weise Gebrauch macht, um seine eigenen Interessen zu fördern und den Arbeiter auch in seiner politischen Abhängigkeit zu erhalten, ihn politisch zu entrechteten.

Die Gewerkschafts-Bewegung dieses Landes ist verhältnismäßig noch jung an Jahren und Erfahrung; sie hat sich, einzelne Gewerke ausgenommen, erst innerhalb der letzten 25 Jahre entwickelt. Die meisten Gewerkschafts-Organisationen, wie ja auch unsere Bruderschaft, sind entweder noch im Auf- oder doch im Aufbau begriffen; folglich kann man unter gebenen Umständen nicht erwarten, daß ihre Mitglieder, deren viele erst angefangen haben, die Nothwendigkeit der Organisation einzusehen, ihre Bestrebungen vollständig begreifen, deren Konsequenzen verfolgen oder voraussehen können. Doch, man mag sich auch dagegen sträuben, wie man will, es steht fest, daß die gewerkschaftlichen Bestrebungen, wenn sie auch jeden Ideals oder Zukunftszieles bar sind, die gewerkschaftlich organisierten Arbeiter zu der Erkenntnis führen werden, daß weder Lohnerhöhung noch Arbeitszeit-Verkürzung, so unvermeidlich und nothwendig auch diese Maßregeln sind, ihre soziale Lage nicht dauernd verbessern können. Gerade ihre unaufhörlichen Kämpfe werden ihnen diese Erkenntnis beibringen und sie in die Bahnen der sozialistischen Bewegung drängen. Wir haben schon in einem früheren Artikel nachgewiesen, daß innerhalb der Gewerkschafts-Organisationen ein merklicher Gesinnungs-Umschwung stattgefunden und sozialistische Anschauungen immer mehr Boden gewinnen. Es ist nur eine Frage der Zeit, und vielleicht sehr kurzer Zeit, wann die gewerkschaftlich organisierten Arbeiter gemeinschaftlich mit ihren sozialistisch gesinnten Brüdern für die vollständige Befreiung der Arbeiterklasse aus den Fesseln der Lohnsklaverei, die Beseitigung der kapitalistischen Produktionsweise in die Schranken treten werden.

Adjournment. A. D. POST, Sec. G. E. B.

Attest: FRANK DUFFY, G. S.

Who Can Locate Him?

Edward Galt, a member of Local Union 473, Manhattan, N. Y., disappeared from home on February 17th, and his family can find no trace of him. He is about 27 years of age, 5 ft. 8 in. in height, smooth shaved, of dark complexion, and weighs about 140 pounds. Members or readers cognizant of the present whereabouts of Edward Galt will please be kind enough to communicate with the General Office.

Rejection of Candidate

Howard Esterly has been rejected as a candidate by Local Union 492, Reading, Pa., three times in succession.

The Difference

Tennyson could take a worthless sheet of paper, write a poem on it and make it worth $65,000—that's genius.

Vanderbilt can write a few words on a sheet of paper and make it worth $5,000,000—that's capital.

The United States can take an ounce and a quarter of gold and stamp upon it an "Eagle Bird" and make it worth $20—that's money.

A mechanic can take material worth $5 and make it into watch springs worth $1,000—that's skill.

A merchant can take an article worth 75 cents and sell it for $1—that's business.

A lady can purchase a 75 cent hat, but she prefers one for $27—that's foolishness. A ditch digger works ten hours a day and handles several tons of earth for $3—that's labor.

The writer of this could put his name to a check for $50,000,000, but it would not be worth a continental—that's rough.

Leffingwellisms

The workingman who lets his boss know that he fears him is just the man whom the boss will bully and tyrannize over.

The man in the dark follows the cry of "Progress" without really knowing whether it comes from ahead or from behind.

It is easy enough to arouse enthusiasm with a new idea, but not so easy to compel thought by the expression of an old truth.

Don't let your wives forget the label broom. It makes the house of some other fellow brighter when you give it the preference.

Some men are so mean that, if they should accidentally slip into the livery of heaven, they would be miserable because they could find no mud to throw at the angels.

When a body of men agree to divide work, they are right on general principles. It shows a willingness to live and let live—the very essence of trade-union principles.

A Wonderful Instructor!

It is of metal, 3 in. in diameter, with revolving disks. One side giving the lengths and cuts of rafters—common, octagon, hips and valleys, from 1 to 24-in. rise; on the other side is given the same as above, from 1° to 90°.

Much other information is contained in the Key. Hopper cuts, polygon miters, etc. Illustrated book of instructions and morocco case, suitable for carrying in the pocket. Liberal terms to agents. Price, $1.50.

Carpenter Becomes Contractor

I consider the International Correspondence Schools the greatest institution for the working people. The simplicity of their Instruction and Question Papers makes it possible for any man to obtain an education. I studied textbooks and building papers for ten years; but learned more in two months from my Course in the I. C. S., than I did in the whole ten years. When I enrolled I was a carpenter, and as a result of the knowledge gained from my Course, I am contracting for myself, and have two crews of men at work all the while. My income has been enormously increased.

SYDNEY F. WILLIAMS, Leroy, Pa.

This is but one of many hundred indorsements proving that our students succeed. Our new free booklet, "1001 Stories of Success," gives the names, addresses, and progress of over a thousand other students whom we have placed on the road to progress and prosperity. Every student of the I. C. S. is entitled to the assistance of the Students' Aid Department in securing advancement or a new position. Are you content to remain a carpenter when we can train you to become a contractor or an architect? Start TODAY to Rise!

MATHEMATICAL and GRAPHICAL

Roof Framing

By
G. D. Inskip

This Work is specially prepared and written for the Mechanic. By the use of tables he can compute any length of Rafter, Hip or Valley, with ease and accuracy, from $\frac{1}{8}$ of an inch to 150 feet. It is in two volumes. Vol. I is handsomely illustrated with diagrams, conveying to the mind of the reader the practical way of cutting Roof Members. It takes in all manner of Pitches, Degrees and Minutes, or any possible Plan of Roof, and gives all measurements full size. Scale measurements are dispensed with, and the steel square is used only as a bevel and is of no moment in acquiring lengths and intersections.

EVERY CARPENTER

Should be a reader of

The National Builder

FRED T. HODGSON, EDITOR

Mr. Hodgson's books are good, as you know. So is the National Builder, of which he is editor. The National Builder is a large sized paper of fifty-two pages which is equivalent to a one hundred and four page book the size of THE STEEL SQUARE. It is published on the 15th of every month.

Matters of every day interest to the carpenter are taken up in each issue, and discussed in the same clear easily understood manner that is so characteristic of Mr. Hodgson. Each number contains a supplement with the complete plans of a low priced residence at scale with full details and complete bill of materials.

Among the articles that are running now are the following:

“SOME BUILDERS' TOOLS, THEIR USES AND ABUSES.” In this series Mr. Hodgson takes up the various different tools, the ways that they can be used most effectively and even the most expert carpenter can learn something that will be useful to him.

“USES OF THE STEEL SQUARE,” in a series by A. W. Woods, fully illustrated, is a subject that is exceedingly interesting to the readers of the National Builder.

“HOLLOW CONCRETE BUILDING BLOCKS” are touched on by Fred W. Haglock, the well known authority on this subject. These blocks are coming into use more and more, and all engaged in the building industries should become familiar with their use and limitations.

THE CORRESPONDENCE COLUMN is open to all readers of The National Builder, and in this column all sorts of practical experiences are discussed by readers of the paper.

“EASY LESSONS ON ARCHITECTURE AND STYLES” is a series that is valuable to every carpenter.

“DETAILS OF BUILDING CONSTRUCTION,” by J. A. F. Cardiff, is a series of articles accompanied by a full page plate each month, taking up various details.

There are many other features, but a copy of the paper itself is the best description.

Fifty Cents Per Year
Five Cents a Copy

Pensacola, Fla.—A joint meeting held by Local Unions 74 and 107 on November 1st decided that our contractors be notified that on and after May 1st, 1905, we would work but eight hours per day at the same rate of wages as now prevailing.

* * *

Owosso, Mich. Trade in this locality is in a deplorable condition; business is at a standstill and most of our members are walking the streets. All traveling carpenters are advised to give Owosso and vicinity a wide berth for some months to come.

* * *

Astoria, Ore.—Learning of the Eastern papers being full of advertisements stating that men, especially carpenters, are wanted on this coast, we deem it our duty to warn all brothers to remain away and not allow themselves to become the victims of unscrupulous employers or railroad agents. There is no scarcity of men here whatever, but numbers of them idle and vainly searching for employment.

* * *

Brookhaven, Miss.—We would like to inform the brothers of the U. B. that Local Union 1348 is still in the land of the living. Our boys turn out in good order when duty calls. Trade has been satisfactory this year and prospects are fair for this winter. Still, we have plenty of men here to do all the work and, having a host of unfair men to contend with, we would advise traveling brothers to keep shy of this place.

* * *

Montclair, N. J.—The Master Builders' Association of Montclair and vicinity has imposed a fine of $200 upon the firm of Carlson Bros., one of our contractors, for violating the open shop policy of the association in discharging their non-union hands, numbering fifteen, and substituting union men. The firm, it is said, will refuse to pay the fine, and in the event of the association refusing to recognize them as members, will make a test case in the courts to determine the validity of the association's action.

* * *

Norfolk, Va.—Feeling the necessity of doing something for the promotion of their interests, our District Council, composed of Local Unions 1774 and 331, recently held a public mass-meeting and smoker. We thoroughly advertised the meeting through the press and through hand-bills, and we are happy to state that we almost had a full house and fifteen applicants for membership, with a promise from many more to join at an early date. Brother Wm. Biggins, our General Organizer, was the speaker at the occasion, and created a great deal of enthusiasm among those present. The remarks of other local speakers were also enthusiastically received.

* * *

Los Angeles, Cal.—We are informed that advertisements appear in Eastern papers to the effect that mill men are in demand in this city. We would earnestly advise all planing-mill men to remain away from Los Angeles unless they are provided with the necessary funds to live all winter without work. There is no opening for mill men here, but a good number of them are idle, failing to secure employment. Mill men should pay no heed to these decoy advertisements. too many poor brothers have been lured here already by them, and now are stranded. These advertisements emanate from the employers' associations; their design is to swell the number of unemployed and destroy labor organization. Keep away!

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Work in this city has been very good all through the season, and yet all the boys are kept busy. All our contractors, we are glad to say, are fair to the union. We have some very interesting meetings, although the attendance sometimes doesn't seem very large. We owe an apology to Bro. Cunningham, our General Organizer, for not reporting his presence in our midst at our regular meeting held on September 12. He being the first organizer that has ever been with us, we were very glad to meet him. We found him an able speaker, thoroughly posted on all matters pertaining to our trade and all questions of rules. We hope that the next two years will bring continued prosperity and success to all our sister local unions.

* * *

Portland, Ore.—Owing to the great influx of mechanics for the past six months and owing to a depression of business, deplorable conditions exist in this city at the present time. Many U. B. brothers are coming here, depositing their cards and failing to secure employment, drop out of the union, causing our treasury a loss of 60 cents in each case. Work is so scarce that we would advise all carpenters to give Portland, Ore., a wide berth. It is a sheer impossibility for mechanics to support themselves. One poor fellow just died in the hospital, leaving his family to starve or depend on what neighbors bring in for their relief.

* * *

Beaumont, Texas.—Local Union 392 of this city is up against a hard proposition at this time. There is a determined effort on the part of the Citizens' Alliance and their sympathizers to disrupt the unions of this locality. They are backing up the unfair contractors, the principle one of them being W. C. Whitney. These non-union contractors take contracts on such figures that union contractors cannot compete with them, and they are securing nearly all the work. We would warn all carpenters to pay no attention to W. C. Whitney's and his pal's advertisements for men appearing in the press all over the country. The contractors who have been and are still standing by the union, under existing circumstances, not having work enough to employ all union men in town, about one-half of our members are idle. It is only a matter of time when organized labor of this city will have to take up the fight for the maintenance of the closed shop, and we would earnestly request all union men to keep away from Beaumont, Tex., until conditions have taken a more favorable turn.

San Francisco, Cal.—We cannot in terms strong enough denounce the efforts of the employers' associations to flood the Pacific coast with unemployed mechanics. We must likewise warn the working people, and especially building trades men, not to pay attention to advertisements appearing in the daily press for 25-

000 men for California and the Pacific coast cities. Both are part of a conspiracy of the employers' associations, promotion committees and transportation companies to disrupt the labor movement of this coast, to compel American mechanics and laborers to compete for employment on a level with the Chinamen and Japanese, and to bunco working people out of their money. Stay away from the Pacific coast States; thousands of men here are out of employment. The advertisements are misleading and untrue.

Keep Away From Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—It appears that reports relative to building projects to be pursued in the near future, as published in the daily press from time to time, have had a tendency of tempting a great many carpenters to flock to this city, expecting to obtain employment. As a result hundreds of idle brothers are daily gathering at our headquarters, though it is an utter impossibility to procure work for them.

For the benefit of migrating or unemployed craftsmen we would state that, while proposed plans and great building projects are in view, there is as yet no time set for their execution, and it is impossible to say at this time when work will start. We have no desire to keep men away from this city, but disappointment awaits all who come here this season. Moreover, it is certainly a bad move to flood this locality at this stage of the game, as it may interfere with our proposed demands next spring. Carpenters are advised to keep aloof from Baltimore until further notice.

Missing and Wanted.

W. T. Murphy, at the time of his departure, the Business Agent and Financial Secretary of Local Union 268, Sharon, Pa., is missing since September 8th and wanted by the local union, he having misappropriated part of their funds. He is thirty years of age, about 5 feet 10 inches in height, weighs 160 pounds and has dark hair and mustache. Any member or reader knowing of his present whereabouts will kindly send information to the undersigned of the investigation committee.

The New York Situation.

There is as yet no material change in the building trades lock-out in New York City and no settlement in sight. The employers remain stubborn and refuse to enter into any negotiations with any of the locked-out trades. They have organized so-called independent unions out of non-union men gathered up from all parts of the United States, who submitted to the terms of an agreement that has proved to be all in favor of the bosses and obnoxious to the locked-out trades. The unions still repudiating this agreement, the fight is now a test of endurance and present indications point to a protracted struggle all through the coming winter. The men composing the independent unions not being competent workmen, are not able to do the work required properly, and as a result building industries remain badly crippled up in New York City. However, one of the leading cabinetmaking firms, Ferdinand Schaettler, who for years held the position of secretary with the Interior Decorators and Cabinetmakers' Association, has deserted the Building Trades Employers' Association, entered into an agreement with our U. B. and put all his men 70 in number, back to work. Theodore Starrett, a builder and member of the Employers' Association, in a statement recently published in the "Real Estate Record and Builders' Guide," openly charges the employers of conspiracy and denounces them as the real instigators of the trouble now existing in the building industry of New York. There are a number of other firms who are on the verge of bankruptcy as a result of the lock-out, and it is only a matter of time when they will have to follow Schaettler's example—abandon the bosses' combine or go out of business.

The Interior Decorators and Cabinetmakers, under date of November 7th, having sent a circular to Mr. Schaettler ordering him to discharge our members in his employ and not to re-employ them under pain of being disciplined or censured, this order has been made the basis of charges of coercion brought against the Executive Board of the Association by the New York District Council in the Yorkville Police Court. The case will come up for trial on December 14th, 1904.

Of the 3,000 Brotherhood members locked out on August 8th, some have secured employment with independent employers, some have left the city on clearance cards, leaving about 1,500 at the present time to continue the struggle. From all appearances it is the design of the employers to exterminate the Brotherhood of Carpenters in New York City, and it now depends on the local unions whether or not they shall be successful in their dastardly scheme. This fight will undoubtedly be brought to a successful termination for the U. B. if the local unions will liberally respond to the appeal for financial assistance sent out by the New York D. C., which appeal has received the sanction and approval of our General Executive Board.

Our New York members, as far as they are in employment, have been assessed since the incipency of the lock-out, by which means they have raised the sum of $76,000 in support of the men involved. In addition to the district assessments some of the local unions are assessing their members in the interest of the unemployed, those not directly affected by the lock-out. However, the winter season having set in and the lock-out nearing its fifth month of duration, it is absolutely necessary that more than the usual strike allowance be granted the brothers still out, and the time has arrived when the local unions of our entire U. B. should come to the assistance of our members so heroically fighting for the integrity of our Brotherhood in the city of New York. Let each and every member do his duty and do it without delay.

Spot Them.

A man representing himself as T. W. Farber some time ago came to the city of Frostburg, Md., and started to build and contract for houses. He has now disappeared from our midst, leaving the wages due four of the members of L. U. 1661 to the amount of $200, besides other bills, unpaid. When last heard of he and his wife, who left a day before him, were heading for St. Louis. We would ask all union brothers to beware of and spot said J. W. Farber. CLIFTON GEIS, R. S. L. U. 1661, Frostburg, Md.

J. McCoy V. Smith, a carpenter by trade, who professes to be a union man, but holds no card, left Danville, Ill., on August 20, with a kit of stolen tools and money obtained by forging three checks. He weighs about 185 pounds, is 5 feet 10 inches in height, is bald-headed, has dark brown eyes, and walks with a free swing and shoulders drawn back. He has a habit of gesticulating when talking and standing with his hands locked or in his pockets. When last seen he wore a white felt hat, lace shoes, dark pants and coat cutaway style. A reward will be given for information leading to his arrest. Communicate with Sheriff of Danville, Ill., or notify

Where Is Harry Weller?

Harry Weller, a member of Local Union 633, Madison, Ill., left here on March 10, 1904, on clearance card. Members knowing of his whereabouts, will kindly communicate with the undersigned. We cannot find his clearance card stub and are anxious to ascertain where he deposited his card.

V. E. COMPTON,

F. S. L. U. 633, Madison, Ill.

Information Wanted.

Webb, or Webster, Morgan, a carpenter, whose home is in Philadelphia, Pa., but whose last place of residence was Chester, Pa., is being inquired for by anxious relatives. Any one aware of his present whereabouts will confer a very great favor by communicating with the General Office. He was last heard from in St. Louis, Mo., but is believed to have left that city.

Wanted.

The address of Reinhold Fiedler, a carpenter or joiner 43 years of age, employed from 1887 to 1892 in New York City. Any information as to his present whereabouts will be thankfully received by his brother,

GUSTAV FIEDLER,

Don't Patronize Stores Handling Unfair Clothing.

The attention of our local unions and members has repeatedly been called to the drastic struggle between the clothing manufacturers and the United Garment Workers of America. The Manufacturers' Association is putting forth strenuous efforts to disrupt the unions of garment workers in all the large clothing centers, particularly in Rochester, N. Y., where the struggle has been on for over a year. The men and women who so gallantly are fighting this battle are entitled to our fullest sympathy, and we trust that every local union and member will render them all possible assistance in their endeavor to whip the Rochester Clothing Exchange, which is absolutely necessary in order to maintain the eight-hour day. We would advise all local unions to appoint a committee to wait on the clothing dealers in their locality and notify them that if they handle unfair clothing, organized labor will withdraw its patronage. The unfair Rochester manufacturers have refused to confer with the national organization and the A. F. of L. on the points in dispute, stating that they would deal with the garment workers individually. Their reasons for taking this stand is obvious and clearly demonstrated in the following:

Reinhold Marquardt, who lives in Orange street, Rochester, was brought up before Police Justice Chadsey on September 13 on a charge of neglecting to support his wife. Lawyer P. C. Oviatt, of the firm of Wile & Oviatt, attorneys for the combine, appeared as his counsel.

Marquardt stated that the clothing company by whom he was employed paid him only $6 a week!

A representative of the company, in corroborating the statement, said he was on Marquardt's bond for $500. Lawyer Oviatt told the judge that Marquardt was a valuable employee and has a permanent position.

The judge was surprised that a "valuable" employee holding a "permanent" position was rewarded so meagerly. The court wanted Marquardt to pay his wife $3 a week, but Oviatt said it was impossible.

It was then agreed for husband and wife to make up. Mr. Barrett, of Webster, Mrs. Marquardt's lawyer, questioned the husband's relatives as to what kind of home would be provided, and learned that it was one room. Objection was made to this place, but it was withdrawn.

"In six years," the Rochester Post Express says in its report of the case, "Marquardt has paid his wife $6, or one week's wages. They have two children, one of whom earns $1.50 a week."

Another Rochester evening paper, in describing the trial, said that Lawyer Oviatt "intimated that his client did not earn more than $6 a week at his trade."

Bommer Spring Hinges Awarded Gold Medal.

We are pleased to inform our members and readers that Bommer Spring Hinges, an article highly appreciated by any carpenter who ever had occasion to make use of it, have been awarded the gold medal at the St. Louis Exposition, for excellence of quality. The Bommer Spring Hinges are advertised in this journal.

The labor movement appeals neither to sympathy nor to prejudice, but solely to sound sense.

CORRESPONDENCE

Read and Ponder.

Editor The Carpenter:

No doubt you will be surprised to hear from Lima, Ohio, the voice of our local union so very seldom, if ever, being raised in the columns of The Carpenter. However, as these columns are open to all brothers, I desire to express my views on a few subjects pertaining to certain provisions of our general laws and the way they are carried out. In the first place, I claim that the obligation we take upon ourselves on entering our U. B. is entirely too tame; all we seem to require is that a man stands up and answers yes to any and all questions asked him. It appears to me that our obligation is too easily taken and too easily broken.

I further assert that too much time is allowed the members by both local union and headquarters for the payment of local dues and per capita tax. I belong to a benevolent order, where, if I am not square on the books on the last day of each month I am not only compelled to pay my dues for the delinquent month and for the month following, but I also have to present a certificate of health in order to retain my benefits. It is compulsion that makes the members of the society I am speaking of to be prompt in their payments. Knowing that unless they square up their dues at the end of each month, they will forfeit their benefits, they do pay up, and there are very few suspensions.

Experience has taught benevolent or fraternal societies that the more time you allow a member for the payment of his dues, the more liable he is to fall in arrears and that the less time is allowed the easier it will be for a member to square up.

Another feature which, in my judgment, is in its effect detrimental to the welfare of our U. B. is the law providing that members over fifty years of age pay the same amount of per capita to headquarters that younger members do, while the former, the so-called superannuated members, are not entitled to the same benefits. This feature alone keeps numbers of good old carpenters, whose experience and advice in many ways would be of great benefit to us, from joining the organization. I claim that the 20 cents monthly per capita paid by a superannuated member goes just as far as the 25-year-old member's 20 cents per capita, toward our benefit fund, and if not, why not?

The non-attendance of meetings of the greater part of the membership is another subject which undoubtedly most of the local unions have been pondering over extensively without finding any solution to this most perplexing problem and I would be grateful to any general officer or member who would devise a scheme whereby we would succeed in inducing our members to attend meetings more regularly. You are well aware that there always are and always were, a faithful few who, through storm and sunshine, will be faithful to their obligation in this respect, and theirs is generally a hard lot—if they do not remonstrate with an iron-clad determination they will be loaded down with office or committee work. Will we ever be able to remedy this evil? Has any brother any suggestion to offer on these lines?

Furthermore, I disapprove of the practice in vogue of grading our members after once they are admitted. We should grade any candidate previous to his initiation, and I would suggest that we adopt a mark or standard that all should come up to, in order that when an employer asks for a man we could accommodate him with our eyes closed and without making a miss.

You may hear more from us later on, and we hope it won't be in this strain, but that we shall have more cheerful news to impart to the brothers and readers.

Fraternally yours,

H. A. REID,

Pres. L. U. 182, Lima, O.

From Redbank, N. J.

Editor The Carpenter:

Deeming it of great importance that any local union affiliated with our U. B. should from time to time be heard from through the columns of our official journal and our local union as yet not having contributed anything to The Carpenter, I will write these few lines, hoping that they will interest the brothers.

As an introduction I will give a little information as to the town of Red Bank itself. The town is quite a pretty one, situated on the North Shrewsbury River, having a population of between 5,000 and 6,000. We have four schools, including a High School, a private academy, two national banks and about fifteen different lodges. Red Bank always has been a business center to some extent, as people from about ten miles around come here to trade, and the town is considered the wealthiest town of its size in the State. The resident carpenters number about 150, the majority of them being kept busy most all the year round. At present there is quite a little stir in carpenter trade, and as a result all hands are at work. But most all the big jobs being out of town, some of our men have to ride on their wheels three or four miles every day going to and from the place of work. We very seldom see a house going up within the city limits at a cost over-reaching $10,000.

Carpenter wages are $2.50 minimum per day, while it should be at least $3.00 per day to be more in keeping with the high cost of living obtaining in this vicinity. In a few instances carpenters receive the much-coveted amount. Masons are paid $3.50 per day.

The outlook for the winter is not of the brightest, there is only one large job started, but several others being talked of. I hope that we will be kept busy during the approaching season.

As to our local union, I will say that we started two years ago this coming December, with a charter list of twelve members at the first meeting. Afterward we gradually grew stronger in numbers, and a little over a year ago we asked for and obtained the eight-hour work day without any trouble to speak of. While we have gained new members, several of the old ones have dropped, but we have learned that they regret their action, as we are now working under the Monmouth County D. C.'s working card, and when these men are asked to show their working card they have none to produce and can't go to work. This will show the brothers that we are determined to keep up unionism. Last month we initiated seven new members, and I think it will not be long until we have the greater majority of the carpenters in this locality under our colors.

A MEMBER OF L. U. 1405,

Red Bank, N. J.

High Tariff No Benefit to Workingmen.

Editor The Carpenter:

It is claimed by a certain political party that the High Tariff is a great benefit to the workingmen. I, being a workingman, or carpenter, fail to see it in that light and would be pleased if some of the brothers would come forth and express their opinion on this subject through the columns of our journal.

In my judgment the high tariff might be of benefit to the laboring people if their interests were equally as well protected as are the interests of the employing or capitalistic class. Under obtaining conditions the government representing the latter interests has for many years and is at the present time running Castle Garden or the Barge Office, in a manner to suit capitalistic interests only. The government is practically importing labor, offering free land, which by birthright ought to belong to our children, as an inducement for labor to come to our country. This is importing labor free of duty, nothing more or less. Why is the High Tariff not applied to immigration? The old "chestnut" that labor so imported scatters all over the land, improving it for the benefit of the entire population, is worn out. We know better.

As the "High Tariff" is to shut out foreign products from the home market, it affords protection to the home manufacturer and enables him to exact a higher price for his products. The working people thus have, on one hand, to pay an increased price for all necessities of life or anything they may purchase, while, on the other they have to compete with cheap labor from foreign countries. And as, according to government reports, the number of emigrants landed at our shores last year has been unusually high, there is a good prospect for a lower price for labor to be paid in the United States than ever paid before.

To sum up, as the lawyer says, the workingman pays the high tariff price for his goods and competes with free labor from all parts of the world. On the other hand, the manufacturing class has the benefit of high tariff prices in selling their goods and are supplied with free or cheap labor to produce these goods. And this is the way the working people are protected. "Worked" is the correct word for it.

S. E. LEE, L. U. 233,

Binghamton, N. Y.

From Shamokin, Pa.

Editor The Carpenter:

Ah, you may say, where is Shamokin? I've never heard of that place—in fact, I don't know that I have ever seen it in print. To that we plead guilty, but we are alive and kicking. We are situated in the heart of the coal regions of Pennsylvania, and no baby local, either, as our number 37 will attest. We are in good financial, physical and social condition, and at the regular meetings on Thursday nights we attract a goodly number of the brothers, who take an active interest and all contribute their share to make things go as under the good of the Order. Many good and bright things are said and done, so that with singing and recitations and other features the coming winter promises to be something out of the ordinary. At one of our recent meetings, among other things the following was delivered by Bro. James S. Kane, and we think it will interest you all:

"Blessed is he who has found his work; let him ask no other blessedness, he has a life purpose. From the heart of the worker rises the celestial force breathed into him by Almighty God, awakening him to all nobleness, to all knowledge."

"It will be my purpose this evening to say a few words, taking the above as a background, not, however, with a view to criticising or fault finding, but with a higher and broader purpose—the elevation and moral advancement of my fellow-man.

"That there is a tendency among us as craftsmen to be clanish is self-evident, but our clanishness should not get the upper hand of our better judgment along the lines of this so-called nationality. A man born in this country, no matter from what country his predecessors came, a foreigner declaring his allegiance to our institutions, and further than that, a foreigner locating here with the aforesaid intentions, becomes an American. Live up to the spirit of the Constitution of these United States. Forget that you are a Polish or Hungarian, Dutch or Irish, English or Welsh. A broader spirit should predominate and local nationalism relegated to the shades of oblivion. Get away from the petty things that seem to keep us divided and be God-fearing men, with a high and noble purpose ever in view; let every man be occupied and occupied in the highest employment of which his nature is capable, and die with the consciousness that he has done his best.

"What we want as workers is to study our social conditions, discuss them here in our meetings. While we may differ in some respects as to ways to better our conditions, let us always endeavor to do the greatest good for the greatest number. Lay aside bickerings and personalities and always remember that we are men, and let it be said of us as Anthony said of Brutus. 'His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world: "This was a man." As working men engaged in the same calling, we naturally should have a common interest. The cause of labor has made progressive strides in recent years, but there is a large field for improvement still undeveloped. Each one of us should then be willing and eager to do his part, so as to leave to posterity a lasting heritage. Not only in our meetings should a feeling of good fellowship prevail, but at our work. When our employers discover this spirit of loyalty among men, they readily recognize that there is a bond of unity existing among his employees that must not be trifled with. On the other hand, if we are saying unkind things of our fellow-workmen, criticising, back-biting, mud-slinging, etc., we soon pave the way for a feeling of distrust. Our employer soon measures our failings, and we become the unwilling tool in his hands to disrupt organization and unionism.

"The world wants men, light-hearted, manly men—men who shall join its chorus and prolong the Psalm of Labor and the song of Love. Then be men, and true men, in the great, big, broad field of life, and under the noble banner of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God all will be well. JAMES S. KANE,

Plan of Amalgamation of British Carpenters Agreed to by Associated Society.

The resolution adopted by the joint conference held in Leicester on July 28th between representatives of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners and the General Union of Operative Carpenters, declaring it an absolute necessity to the interests of the trade that an amalgamation of the three existing societies should take place, has been agreed to by the Associated Carpenters' and Joiners' Society by a vote of 1,950 for and 513 against. These figures are given in a circular attached to the report for the month of October, 1904, issued by the general officers of the last named organization and containing the proposed basis of agreement and an address voicing the sentiments of the bulk of its membership on the subject of amalgamation. The address reads in part:

It has been made unmistakably clear that our society is in "favor of amalgamation, and we trust the minority will now, seeing that the conference has been held and a scheme adopted, consider seriously whether they should continue to approve this bona fide attempt to consolidate the trade and provide an organization suited to the times in which we live and powerful enough to cope with the forces now arrayed against combinations of workmen. Sentiment regarding our Association is natural and must be respected, but we would expect members to recognize that such should not be carried so far as to endanger the formation of a comprehensive union considered necessary by the great majority of our members. We would suppose that most men who are conversant with the present situation, as it affects the larger centers, the inevitable friction, the needless expense, the multiplicity of committees involved in joint action, will not only be in favor of merging the existing societies, but will have as their ultimate aim a combination which would embrace all woodworkers and thus make an end to demarcation disputes and other forms of internecine strife which at present distract those allied trades."

Printers Decide for Eight Hours.

The referendum vote of the International Typographical Union on the eight-hour proposition submitted by their convention recently held in St. Louis resulted in 19,483 in favor and 5,398 against. The proposition provides that on and after January 1, 1906, all book and job members of the union shall work only eight hours a day, and that at that time the eight-hour day shall become effective in all union establishments under the jurisdiction of the International, where existing contracts do not prevent, and in each instance where the eight-hour day is refused work shall cease. In order to carry out this plan, it is provided that beginning January 1 next, an assessment of one-half of one per cent. of all moneys earned be levied upon the membership of the union, for the purpose of a defense fund, such fund to be held and expended by the subordinate union, except in those cases where no trouble is experienced in putting in operation the eight-hour day, and in such unions one-half of the assessment is to be subject to call of the International officers for use in furtherance of the eight-hour day, as in their judgment may be deemed necessary.

The American Trade Union.

The American trade union was born with a sympathetic soul. Her ear is tuned to catch the whispering walls of oppression. Her tongue has always denounced the wrong and upheld the right. Her hands have always been lifting men to a higher and better life by shortening their hours of toil, increasing their rate of pay and improving their environments in general. If she has erred it has been on the side of mercy and humanity, for, as an organization, she has always marched forward, only demanding the God-given and constitutional rights of the American workman, seeking to arouse them to a sense of their rights as citizens of a great republic, and through organization establish their liberty. She has never thrown down the gauntlet to any one, and only stood by demanding the rights of free men under a free flag. If this is un-American I pause for some one to show me where and why.—W. D. Mahon.

Were the power of capitalism a hundred times greater than it is it would be beaten in the attempt to destroy unionism. In unionism lays the only salvation of down-trodden labor and it is here to stay.

THE EARLY HISTORY

Of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

BY W. J. SHIELDS.

SURVIVING Warriors delight to fight their conflicts over again, with more merciful weapons than those by which destruction was wrought and victories gained, and so it will be with the members of the labor army as the years lead them up to that age when work is no longer possible. With what pleasure will they unroll the tales of the struggles of the past to their younger fellows. The coming generation, who, let us hope, will be sufficiently broad in disposition to appreciate the service rendered by the old veterans who brought our movement not only through its pioneer stages, but through the age of prejudice, from that to the age of tolerance and finally leading on to the condition of general recognition, handing the work down to incoming generations as a work well done, a progress that has forced a departure from the conditions and customs of the past and established a recognition of the rights of the trade unionists on the basis of a larger degree of justice. The early history of the U. B. is replete with the sacrifices made necessary to its onward march of progress; to the work of changing from the starting point of twelve small unions with its two thousand forty-one members up to the present condition of over seventeen hundred local unions with an approximate membership of two hundred thousand. The first few years of the life of our organization were trying ones, as the following outlines of our early trials and troubles will illustrate. In considering this early history of our craft organization, especially those that have lasted up to the present age and have been prominent in the latter day reforms, it is well to first treat with that society from which we derived our first inspiration and with which we are at the present time negotiating terms of amalgamation. This organization is the parent organization although not considered an American Society. Its title, the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners; its jurisdiction, the wide world. This organization was founded in England in June, 1860, with branches at the present time in England, Ireland, Scotland, United States, Canada, New Zealand, Australia and South Africa. While organized about twenty-one years previous to the Brotherhood, it apparently did not appeal to the American carpenters. Still its principles and accomplishments inspired them, when the time came, to action and finally to organize what was known as the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America. This society was organized at a convention of carpenters' unions held in Chicago, Ill., August 8, 1881. Prior to this organization many local unions had existed, and efforts had been continually made for the formation of a national organization. The first attempt was made in 1854 and the second in 1867. Our members are conversant with the objects and principles as they are today and what they were at the beginning. The organization favored the establishment of central bodies, was opposed to piece work and convict labor, and desired uniform lien laws throughout the United States and Canada. The first convention of the Brotherhood after organization was held in Philadelphia in 1882. The second convention was to be held in New York in 1883. This convention was postponed in order to place the unions on a better foundation, giving them more time to accumulate funds and a better opportunity to ascertain the actual requirements of the organization, and become more familiar with the constitution. The struggle of the first two or three years of the organization, as of all other workingmen's societies, was a difficult one; but at the Cincinnati convention the G. S. was able to report that the association was out of debt and that a surplus of finances was on hand.

W. J. SHIELDS.

In this age we receive our inspiration from the fact of being stronger this year than we were last year and looking to be stronger still in the year to come. Back in the beginning the membership fluctuated, and too often in the wrong direction. Our hopes at times were buoyed up by an enlivened interest only to be driven back into the depth of despair by a decreased membership. Our experience seemed to confirm to the Christian movement that has for two thousand years past been defending and explaining its principles with the best scholars that the world has produced, and still finds the defense necessary; and so while we were discouraged at times, still we never lost heart, persisting in the defense of our principles and combatting with method and tact the prejudice of the age, and this was no weak antagonist. In my judgment the greatest difficulty we had to overcome was the disabusing of old customs which were responsible for the early days of Trade Unionism, and we were most fortunate in having able defenders to champion our cause. In their position of defending the rights of the labor classes such men as Gompers, McGuire, McNeil and Foster and other leaders of this class were defamed and coerced and stigmatized as demagogues and cranks, and looked on, in fact, as dangerous characters, and in many cases their utterances were squelched by the press and policemen's clubs. It can be understood the effect that this deep-seated prejudice had on retarding the growth of our movement. The average mechanic, believing himself a dependant on the good will of his employer and not enjoying the independence that at least some of the leaders enjoyed, was extremely careful not to implicate himself in exposing his identity as a union man; and so they held their speech and their cards were kept deep in their pockets lest discrimination overtake them. This prejudice not only filled the mind of employer, but was generally entertained by society as a whole, even those in whose defense the movement was conceived. The mates of the union man, the fellow whom you worked side by side with on the job would and has occupied the position of traitor by exposures made, with the understanding that discrimination would follow to his advantage. The first few years before referred to was given to this work. I can look back to the Cincinnati convention in 1884 and appreciate that this question was our greatest difficulty. Between this time and the holding of the Buffalo convention in 1886 came to us the assurance of permanent life. In this era was the great boom in the Knights of Labor, which was responsible for removing to a great extent the prejudice of the past and forcing us on to the next stage, the Age of Tolerance. Under this condition we found things easier and from that time on we progressed in the right direction. The union man of at least the principal cities was no longer victimized, and by being placed on the basis of equality with his fellows he, with his faith and argument, was able to make converts to the extent of a permanent growth. The great trade movements of our organization at this time for the establishment of the eight-hour day attracted wide attention and did much in focusing the mind's eye of the carpenters on the importance of organizing. Strange to relate, nevertheless true, the strike movements have in the past furnished an attraction beyond all other forms of agitation. Where formerly every particle of gain had to be contested for and some of these contests assuming proportions sufficiently serious to attract public attention. On these lines they have proved an education to both labor and capital, and through the experience of these strikes both sides have become convinced that it is far more profitable to confer one with the other on issues involved than to antagonize and precipitate open strife. The most hopeful indications of industrial society is the great increase of mutual respect and good-will between employer and employed, as well as a greater regard on the part of each for the rights of others. To this result strikes have contributed in no small degree. They have also asserted the rights of the organized worker to deliberate on all questions affecting the sale of his commodity—labor. These truths forced themselves on the carpenters back in the age referred to, and it was this knowledge that led men from their prejudice to consider trade unionism and from this to become a part of its working force.

In looking over G. S. reports for the year 1885 we find twenty-one new unions had been formed, with an increase of 1866 members in good standing. It was also reported in the official journal that strikes had occurred in Chicago and New Orleans, and had succeeded in fixing the standard rate of wages at three dollars per day. The strike lasted three weeks and resulted in partial success. A strike occurred in Toronto, Canada, for nine hours per day, lasting two and a half months, but owing to the influx of immigration a compromise was made upon eight hours being a day's work on Saturday. The successful movements for nine hours in the spring of 1885 on the Pacific coast, in San Francisco, San Rafael, Oakland and Alameda, has had a salutary effect in those locations, and it is due to the example of our Brotherhood that other trades are falling into the same lines all over the country. A reduction of the hours of labor on Saturday in St. Catharins, Hartford, Philadelphia and Boston has been accomplished, an agitation has been carried on, out of which has grown a strong central organization or various trades in Philadelphia known as the Short-Hour League.

The usual custom of reducing wages in winter has ceased to be the rule where the union has any power. The rates of wages have become firmer, and all men less exposed to the reduction of wages; and through organization our members have been able to save themselves from many impositions. At the convention held this year a declaration of principles was adopted containing these salient points: That as the average laboring man expends his entire earnings immediately, every dollar added to his wages adds to every market he patronizes, and therefore that every reduction of wages immediately cripples all markets. That a reduction of hours of the day's work increases the opportunity and intelligence of the laborer, as well as increasing the demand for labor in price for a day's work. They also objected to prison contract labor because it put the criminal in competition with honorable labor. They held that voting was better than striking, but that both are right and necessary, and that no wage-earner should vote for any man or any party that does not directly support the labor cause by thought or argument and action. This practically represented the year's work. How nearly it would satisfy in this age; but it was this slow beginning back in the early days of the Brotherhood, with its handful of unions assuming the responsibilities of changing conditions for the craft as a whole. That should be a matter sufficient to attract the attention of those who in this age are enjoying what the pioneers made possible. I think it safe to say that to no single individual does greater credit belong than to that best-fitted and able general, P. J. McGuire. Faults may have developed to weaken and depreciate his latter years, but to the old veterans of our society who worked with and through him in the early days a memory of gratitude for his early sacrifices will tend to lessen the sorrow for his fall at the time when his predictions became realized and the baby he nurtured became what he predicted it would be. Using his own words in his report to the Buffalo convention in 1886, we are privileged to quote the following: "As the humble founder of this Brotherhood it affords me immense pleasure to predict that from present indications our society, before many years, will be one of the most powerful trades organizations in America, and second to none in point of members and financial standing. For this object I have labored and struggled for many a long and weary day, and I take this occasion to thank the delegates here assembled for their presence, and the officers and members of the local unions for their faithful aid and co-operation in this noble and exalted work."

In referring to the conditions of trade the G. S. reports said that the great railroad strike in the Northwest had a very depressing effect on speculative capital, and it shrank from contemplated investment in real estate, causing quite a depression in the building trades. As a consequence, the movement this spring (1886) for shorter hours among the workmen in the building trades was thereby much embarrassed. Trade improved considerably later. Wages and prices, however, were by no means commensurate with the work, while in the majority of cities the labor market was constantly overcrowded with carpenters. In the two years that have intervened between the Cincinnati and Buffalo conventions the Brotherhood has increased its membership 18,481, making a total membership of 42,521. (This showing represented the slow but steady growth of the organization in the first six years, having increased from its beginning about 40,000 members.) The financial affairs were in a prosperous condition. The report showed eight unions working eight hours per day, seventeen working nine hours and twenty-one working shorter hours on Saturday. Back in that age we were afflicted with dual organization, as our history shows that a Carpenters' Assembly Knight of Labor, of Troy, N. Y., refused to work with members of the Brotherhood, and struck against them.

Referring to the strikes for eight hours on May 1, 1886, the records read: In twenty-one cities our local unions have twenty-five cents per day advance in wages, making, in all, fifty-three cities where our local unions have made gains the past year, either in more wages or in reducing hours, while only in nine cities have our local unions failed to secure their demands, and in these cities they demanded the eight-hour system last May. A resume shows that up to the time of holding the Buffalo convention the total gain through organization was 72,434 hours per week. The attractive agitation for the short-hour work day at this time was, in the opinion of the writer, responsible for the progress made in extending our membership.

About this time, or between 1886 and 1888, the need of united organization of carpenters appealed strongly to the Brotherhood members, as at this time there was what was known as the United Order, controlling New York City completely, with branches outside in the State; also in Jersey and Connecticut. The existence of the two societies of the one craft precipitated more or less conflict natural with dual organization. Appreciating the need of supplying a remedy, Gen. Sec. McGuire was instructed to negotiate with the officials of the United Order looking to a conference of representatives of the two societies to consider the amalgamation of the two forces. This work took considerable tact and judgment, as a very set feeling was entertained by many of the United Order members on the matter of independent organization. We had others of this same society that were strong in their faith of the need of one craft organization and, be it recorded to their credit, their persistent work brought about the meeting of representatives from the two wings of the craft societies with the result that it was agreed to amalgamate the Brotherhood and United Order, thereby giving to the country one National organization of carpenters to be known as the U. B. of C. and J. of A. The word "united" was taken from the title of the old United Order and added to the title of the Brotherhood, which then read "United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America." At our Detroit convention in 1888 this work was ratified and about 7,000 of the United Order members became a part of the U. B. They were also represented at the said convention by delegates. The writer was honored by presiding at the conferences, also the convention which resulted in accomplishing this most important amalgamation. The result of which has played no small part in the progress of the carpenters of this country. I was privileged during the time to meet and make lifelong friends of many of the New York craftsmen, and prominent among them at that time, and one who didn't spare his energy to unite the carpenters under one National head, was our present G. S., Frank Duffy. He, back in that age, was the same strong, energetic, hustling character that we find him today, and much credit is due him for the aid he personally furnished in bringing the two sides together. The consummating of this important part in our history soon demonstrated its profitableness to our entire membership, as our progress from that time on was onward and upward. It also placed us in the enviable position of being classed as the strongest numerically of any of the trade organizations on this continent. Through this fact we were looked upon as the division of the labor army to step to the front, enter the firing line and strike the blow that was destined to mark an era of advanced civilization in the interest of the toiling masses.

The delegates at the Boston convention of the American Federation of Labor, held Dec. 10, to 14, inclusive, 1889, through the recommendations of Bro. Gompers, who, appreciating that the time was ripe to start a progressive campaign looking to the putting in operation of the eight-hour work day, this recommendation was intrusted to a special committee. I was honored by representing the U. B.; also served as secretary of the said committee. In considering this progressive step it was agreed that existing conditions would not justify the hope that at this time all the crafts were properly prepared to successfully enforce the eight-hour system on the first of May, 1890, although many of the trades were then ready, and many more would be by the time specified for the inauguration of this, the greatest of industrial reforms. It was therefore recommended that the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. should have power to select such trade or trades from those affiliated with the A. F. of L. as should in their judgment be best prepared to achieve success. It was also recommended that all trades affiliated with the A. F. of L. not now working the eight-hour day, or between whom and their employers existing contracts may prevent, shall appoint committees to confer with their employers and, if possible, secure a reduction of the hours of labor to eight per day. This movement had been prepared for by enlisting the sympathy of business men and there were many of these who, as investors, felt the need of doing away with the fluctuating industrial conditions. The sympathy of ministers of the Gospel and economic thinkers was also sought, and many of them, in considering the philosophy of the trades union movement, willingly gave their aid and influence in aiding on this humane work. In the conclusion of this report the workers received a strong inspiration. This conclusion read: "In this movement towards the emancipation of labor there is no such word as 'fail.'" The longing hearts of the underpaid and unemployed beat responsive to our demand. Women weary of life and children robbed of the sweet delights of childhood groan and cry under the heavy burdens of remorseless poverty. Age unduly hastened by ill-requited toil, trembling in want, pray for our success. The monarchical and industrial serfs of Europe look toward these shores with aspiring hopes that here, where men are sovereign in political power, they may be freemen in their economic and social relations. This movement for less hours of toil, more hours of leisure and more wealth for wealth producers, is co-extensive with civilization. To the trades unionists of Great Britain and Europe marching shoulder to shoulder with us, we need the exultant shout of greeting and all hail. To all who love liberty and are loyal to the principles of free government; to all who look forward to an increased wealth more widely distributed; to all lovers of the human race everywhere; to union men and to those not now under the banner of organized labor, we appeal, in the name of justice and humanity, of increased wealth and diminished poverty, to concentrate their energy upon the single issue of the reduction of the hours of labor. In this same year, although the labor movement of the two continents was in no way connected other than through natural sympathy, there was manifested a world-wide movement on the question of an eight-hour work day. In Germany the demand for eight hours had been voiced by a strike of nearly a hundred thousand laborers which showed sufficient clearness of purpose and directness of action that the Emperor, leading capitalists and statesmen formally recognized it as a legitimate question demanding immediate consideration. In England they had reached the nine hour and a half and were asking for a reduction to eight per day. The same movement took definite form in France and Belgium. It was conceded as a truism by some of the ablest minds back in this age that the country whose laborers are compelled to work the greatest number of hours to earn a living, and hence have the least time for social, moral, intellectual and political development, cannot permanently keep at the head of civilization. The Executive Council of the A. F. of L., in conference, with instructions handed down by the Boston convention on the question of selecting the trade or trades best fitted, made a choice of the U. B. to take the position in the advanced column of the labor army, with the assurance of supplying the ammunition needed to defend the struggle for the eight-hour day. We accepted the commission, and on May 1, 1890, after months spent in training and disciplining our forces to a realizing sense of the immensity and importance of the trust imposed on us, we entered the firing columns. How well we did our duty was defined in the report of the special committee on eight hours at the tenth annual convention of the A. F. of L. held at Detroit, Mich., Dec. 8-13, 1890. In looking over this report we find the following, and it being applicable even to this age other parts than that referring to the U. B. will be used. Standing on this vantage ground of success achieved upon our own chosen field of battle, and looking backward, we see the marshalled forces of our brave volunteers, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, ready for battle. A grand division of the Grand Army of Labor, moving to the music of the union, from town to town, from city to city, from State to State, bearing aloft the banner of Eight Hours and Higher Wages. The scene of that glorious day of May 1, 1890, witnessed not the blood-stained fields that have ever marked the armed and marshalled forces that have contended for conquest and dominion, not desolated homes or ruined cities, but in its path were blooming flowers, prosperous cities and happy homes. Before our ever marching host stands hope with welcome cheer and love with outstretched arms; and in our wake not desolate homes and ruined cities, but homes made happy and cities crowned with increasing power, our spoils not captive slaves or men made subjects to the tyrant's will, but captured hours. Our conquest, self-control; more hours reduced from wage enslaving toil; more hours for home; more hours for brother man; more wages and more wealth. To all who have added in the triumph of organized labor the American Federation of Labor tenders its most hearty thanks, and summons them anew to grander fields of action. Eight hours is no mere party cry; no shibboleth of faction. It is the voiced instinct of the human race. Eight hours means more than two hours released from toil—more than the advance of wages by an enlarged market for our labor. It means the scientific, economic, peaceful solution of the labor problems along the lines of industrial development. It means more wealth today and more tomorrow, the added wealth keeping pace with the increased value of each hour of toil. The hours of labor being reduced to the minimum, and the wealth of the labor being increased to the maximum, the eight-hour movement of today will make the six-hour movement easier in the future. It means more wealth for toilers and less wealth for spoilers. Grand as have been the achievements of the past, glorious as were the successes of the eight-hour movement of 1890, we summons the wage-workers of America to bear aloft the banner upon whose folds is inscribed our battle cry: "Eight Hours and Higher Wages." Forward and onward, members of every division of the Grand Army of Labor. Forward and onward to victory!

This report concluded by indorsing the recommendations of the Executive Council in naming the Miners as the second division to do battle in defense of the short-hour day, and the history of the Miners' organization is replete with the glory and successes of this struggle. If we can look back to those days and reasonably consider the importance of the contests waged and the results achieved—first the Carpenters, then the Miners—and that from the reputations made and the victories won. There, two branches of the labor movement became at this time the two strongest numerically of the trades unions on this continent. The contests waged by the U. B. membership for the short-hour day in 1889 and 1890 acted as a wonderful stimulus in the work of organization, for at the end of this period we had 704 local unions under the jurisdiction of the United Brotherhood, with 77,596 enrolled members, and what was considered at the time a magnificent roster of 53,769 beneficial members, a net gain in the two years of 259 new unions, and 25,353 new members, a gain of 39 per cent. in new unions and 36 per cent. in membership. This placed the United Brotherhood in the front ranks of labor organizations. It was conceded at this time that the U. B. represented the largest and most powerful organization, numerically, of any special trade in the whole civilized world. In 1890, 132 strikes were won, involving 57,420 carpenters, union and non-union men, and we lost eight strikes, involving about 2,300 carpenters. In 1889 we won 78 strikes out of 82 we engaged in. The following shows the number of cities involved in trade disputes in 1889 and 1890 and the results:

Strikes for higher wages..	10	14
Strikes for eight hours a day	1	42
Strikes for nine hours a day ..	63	81
Strikes for shorter hours/ Saturday	6	7
Against reduction of wages	2	...
Total	82	144
The result:
	1889	1890
Number of strikes won	78	132
Number of strikes lost	2	8
Number of strikes compromised ..	2	4
Total	82	144

In four years, 1887, 1888, 1889 and 1890, the wages of carpenters advanced, in 413 cities, 25 to 75 cents per day, which amounted to five and a half millions of dollars per year more wages to the carpenters in those places. This splendid showing of our organized efforts on the lines of increased wages could largely be traced to the decrease in the hours of toil; nor did it benefit us alone, but it created an enlarged market for our labor and the labor of others. It furnished the investing class with a better and more profitable business. The hours of labor had been reduced up to the latter part of 1890 to eight hours per day in 36 cities, and to nine hours per day in 234 cities, not to count 260 cities which recognized the rule of eight or nine hours a day on Saturday. This reduction in the hours of labor alone gave employment to 7,300 more carpenters than would otherwise have been employed had it not been for the existence of the United Brotherhood. The contests necessary to these grand achievements established the undoubted rights to organization. Every gain in this age had to be contested for, and why, simply because the Carpenter Builders, who held, and reasonably so, their right to stand together for mutual strength and protection, denied to the workers this same right, to unite for the same ends, and positively refused to hold any conference with them in their organized capacity, or with their representatives. The union men had this truth forced upon them, that their liberty could only be preserved by using the force of their organization to get more liberty.

This closes a brief sketch of the early history of the United Brotherhood covering its first ten years of existence, and Brothers, I feel safe in saying that you agree with me in the fact that to the old veterans that steered the old ship Brotherhood through the troubled waters of the time, encountering the dangerous reefs and obstacles on the line of prejudice, malice and numerous lands of opposition will be justified in relapsing into a reminiscent mood in their declining years and tell the stories of the period covered in this sketch to those who take up the work where they are compelled to drop it. To this happy work of widening the horizon of existence for millions of human beings who are occupying places on Mother Earth, and to the millions who are to come, this elevation in the standing, of living, the making of happier and better homes is a work that should enthrall all men and bring out their hearty co-operation. The good we have done and the good we may do should prompt us to be alert and watchful and, like a careful and zealous pilot, each would steer his own ship, safely through the channel studded with rocks, shoals and eddies, even though contrary winds made the waters rough and angry; and thus each, alive to the general interest, doing his own work faithfully and well. In this way our principles would be cared for and brought safely through into quiet and peaceful waters. My "slogan" would be, "Awake, ye sleepers, and arouse to action. Let not the good old ship of Labor Organization flounder and go down through your inactivity, selfishness or drowsiness."

Trade union is the agency that makes every man or woman attached to it a sharer in the strength of a great power.

PROCEEDINGS

Of the Meeting of the Board of Govern- ors of the S. B. T. A.

Chicago, Oct. 10, 1904.

The Board of Governors of the Structural Building Trades Alliance held a meeting in the Briggs House at 10 a. m., as per the decision of the last convention, and owing to the inability of the hotel to furnish suitable quarters, the secretary was instructed to procure accommodations in some other hotel or suitable place.

On motion, the Board adjourned to meet at the call of the secretary.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Meeting opened at 3:30 in Hotel Kaiser-hof on the call of the secretary, all members of the Board answering roll call.

On motion it was agreed that the hours of meeting would be from 10 a. m. to 12
m. and from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m., these arrangements being made in order to accommodate the resident members of the Board, who stated the nature of affairs of their organization were such as to debar them meeting at hours other than above. Bro.
Wm. Huber, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and Bro.
H. A. Stemburgh, secretary-treasurer of the International Hod Carriers and Building Laborers, called and were introduced to the members of the Board, and on motion, the courtesies of the meeting were extended to the brothers.

President Buchanan read a statement concerning the Alliance that appeared in the Chicago Inter Ocean, and suggested the advisability of the Board interviewing the management of the paper to the end that a refutation of the alleged charges and false impression created would be made.
The Board of Governors concluded, however, to defer action until a later session of the Board.

Adjournment was taken until 10 a. m.
Tuesday morning.

Tuesday, October 11, 1904.

MORNING SESSION.

Meeting opened at 10:30 a. m. with all members present.

The question of inviting eligible trades to join the Alliance was discussed at considerable length, but the trend of opinion was that the question of sending invitations should be deferred until the jurisdiction claims of the affiliated trades had been disposed of, in accordance with the decision of the Indianapolis convention.

Secretary reported that neither the convention nor the Board of Governors had fixed a charter fee for local alliances, and suggested the advisability of the Board making a decision upon the same. An opinion was expressed that it would be inadvisable to change the policy of the Alliance insofar as levying any tax upon local alliances, but that since some charge was necessary in order to cover the cost of establishing local bodies, the charter fee should be fixed at ten dollars ($10.00), and a motion to establish a charter fee of ten dollars ($10.00) was thereupon agreed to.

On motion it was further agreed that not more than twenty-five constitutions be furnished local alliances chartered by the Structural Building Trade Alliance.

Bro. Wm. Huber, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, again called and presented his respect to the Board of Governors, accompanied by Bro. Wm. Schard and Bro. Chas. Dold.

The hour of adjournment having arrived, the chairman declared an adjournment until 2 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The meeting opened at 2 p. m., all members responding to roll-call. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and concurred in.

The question of jurisdiction and the claims made by affiliated unions were considered at length, and the Chair stated as his opinion that consideration of the jurisdiction claims could not legally be taken up, since the secretary had not consulted the affiliated trades in reference to their disputes, as in line with a resolution passed by the Indianapolis convention, requiring all affiliated unions to endeavor to adjust any disputes through the agency of a properly appointed committee.

The consensus of opinion, however, seemed to be that the Board of Governors had been convened largely to determine the question of jurisdiction of affiliated unions, and a motion to consider and adjust, if possible, jurisdiction claims as submitted was finally agreed to.

The secretary read a telegram received from W. J. Brown, president of the International Union of Bricklayers and Masons, as follows:

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 11, 1904.

Mr. Wm. J. Spencer, Hotel Kaiserhof, Chicago, Ill.

Sincerely wish deliberations will be conducive of much good. Believe good offices should be tendered disputants in New York.

(Signed) W. J. BOWEN.

On motion the telegram was received and ordered filed, and the suggestion to tender the friendly offices of the Alliance in order to adjust the pending trouble in the city of New York in the building trades was concurred in, and the secretary instructed to communicate with the interested parties as early as possible.

On motion, the secretary was instructed to notify the Bricklayers' International Union of the action of the Alliance.

Claims of jurisdiction of unions affiliated with the Alliance were then taken up as follows:

The International Union of Steam Engineers submitted the claim for all hoisting and portable engines on building and construction work where operated by steam, electricity, gasoline, hydraulic or compressed air, including pumps, syphons, pulsometers, concrete mixers, air compressors and elevators where used for hoisting building material, street rollers, steam shovels, dinky locomotives, cableway, clam shells, pile drivers.

On motion, the same was agreed to, and concession of the claim accorded International Steam Engineers.

The claims of jurisdiction submitted by the Bricklayers' and Masons' International Union were referred for future consideration.

The claims of jurisdiction submitted by the Operative Plasterers' International Association were likewise referred for future consideration.

The claim of jurisdiction submitted by the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers as follows:

—Plumbing.—

All piping for waste water leaders, soil and vent lines.

All piping for water filters or meters, all piping for hot and cold water used for domestic and culinary purposes.

All pipe work for pumps on ice machines, where same is used for domestic and culinary purposes.

All thermostatic work in connection with plumbing.

—Steam Fitting.—

All steam pipe work for power and heating of every description; all hot water for heating and ventilating, and all work connected with steam heating and power plants except where lead is used.

Ice machine pipe works, whether brine or ammonia, or any other system pertaining to refrigerating purposes except the water lines which the plumber controls, and all air piping pertaining to power.

—Gas Fitting.—

All gas piping inside of building for both fuel and illuminating purposes.

All fitting or hanging of fixtures for illuminating purposes.

All connections for stoves, fire grates, furnaces, driers, heaters and boilers where gas is used.

All iron pipe for electrical conduits within buildings.

All iron pipe for speaking tubes.

All air pipe except sprinkler, thermostat and power piping.

—Sprinkler Fitting.—

All fitting and hanging of pipes in buildings connected with the sprinklers.

All fire pump, tank or water main connections used for fire protection purposes.

On motion, jurisdiction over these subdivisions of trade was rewarded to the United Association, with the proviso that the claim entered by the United Association shall not be considered as sufficient cause to deny the admittance of the Electrical Workers to the Structural Building Trades Alliance.

The jurisdiction claims of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers were submitted as follows:

The erection and construction of all steel and cast iron structures, ornamental or otherwise, namely bridges and viaducts, steel stacks, coal bunkers, steel grain elevators and tanks, steel stand pipes, steel water tanks, steel towers, blast furnaces, all structural work pertaining to stoves, and all steel or cast-iron work pertaining to buildings, including foundation beams, columns, beams or girders, and structural work for safe deposit vaults, mullions steel or cast-iron, also the wrecking of bridges, viaducts and steel buildings; also any work required to change or alter in field material shipped from the shops, such as framing, cutting, bending and drilling; elevator enclosures, fire escapes, metal furniture, sidewalk vault light frames, stairway, metallic lathing, rolling steel curtains, ornamental front work (solid or shell), corrugated sheet work when attached to steel frames;
plates, anchors, caps, corbels, light lintels, etc. The erection and removal of all necessary false work, derricks, travelers and scaffolding, also moving and placing of heavy machinery in bridges and buildings.

On motion, the claim of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, with the exception of that covering "false work, scaffolding and derricks," be concurred in, and claim over that portion here specified was referred to a joint conference of Carpenters, Iron Workers and Laborers for adjustment, if possible.

The claim submitted by the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, as follows:

All house, signs, pictorial, car, carriages, machinery, ship and railroad equipment painting, decorating, paper hanging, and preparing for same, finishing of all hardwood, which is done either on the job or elsewhere, graining, glazing and setting of all glass in wood or metal frames, varnishing, enameling and gilding.

Was conceded to the organization named, with the exception of that portion of the claim relating to setting glass in wood, and this point, disputed by the Carpenters, was referred to a joint committee of the International Unions of Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and Painters and Decorators, for adjustment, if possible.

The claim of jurisdiction of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners as submitted was read, but the Chair declared the hour of adjournment as having arrived and a suspension of consideration until next session.

Action of the Board of Governors in reference to the suggestion of the Bricklayers and Masons concerning the existing trouble in the building trades in New York was taken up.

Wednesday, October 12, 1904.

Meeting of the Board of Governors of the Structural Building Trades Alliance opened at 10 a. m. with all members present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

At this juncture the claims of the jurisdiction of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners were taken up, as follows:

Jurisdiction extends over all men engaged in putting up all kinds of wood mouldings, putting up "run" strips for plumbers, the boxing of all pipes, cutting for all water, gas and steam pipes, and valves passing through floors, joists or partitions, where coming in contact with wood, also the setting of all woodwork in toilet rooms.

Fastening on all wood cleats to iron work, cutting up and hanging all rough lumber between iron girders and joists for fireproof or concrete centers. The setting of all floor strips on cement floors.

The setting of all sash, doors, windows and other frames made of wood. The building and setting of all centers made of wood. Putting on of all plaster boards and putting on all plaster grounds, also the erection of all furrings for cornices, where wood is used.

The building of all scaffolding where any carpenter tools are used, the building and construction of all derricks, the making of mortar boards, boxes and trestles, putting in "needles," uprights and all shoring of buildings, raising and moving buildings, etc.

The nailing and cutting of all wooden stops in doors and windows, the framing of all false work, derricks, etc., when applying to structural iron work.

On motion the claim submitted, with the exception of that portion relating to scaffolding, erection of centers for fire-proofing and boxing for concrete, be conceded to the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and the disputed points referred to joint conference of the representatives of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and Laborers.

On motion the additional claim of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, as submitted under date of Oct. 11th, was included in the claim of Carpenters, and likewise referred to joint conference committee as follows:

The handling of all material used by carpenters in and around buildings, including all joists, frames and all lumber and materials used by the carpenter contractor.

The claim of jurisdiction submitted by the International Hod Carriers and Building Laborers was read as follows:

Wrecking of buildings, excavating of buildings, digging of trenches, piers and foundations, holes and cassion work, lagging, sheeting of said foundations, holes and cassion work, concrete for buildings, whether foundations, floors or any other, whether done by hand or any other process, tending to masons, mixing and handling all materials used by masons (except stone setters), building of scaffolding for masons' plasterers, building of centers for fireproofing purposes, tending to carpenters, tending to mixing of all materials for plastering, whether done by hand or any other process, clearing of debris from buildings, shoring, under pinning and raising of old buildings, drying of plastering, when done by salamander heat, handling of dimension stones.

And conceded to the organization named, excepting that portion conflicting with the claims of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and the points in dispute were referred to a joint conference committee of representatives of the Carpenters and Joiners and Building Laborers for adjustment, if possible.

The Board of Governors considered at length the plan of arbitration submitted to the Structural Building Trades Alliance by Vice-President Lillian, and the plan as outlined was referred to the secretary to be transcribed and copy of same given each member of the Board at the opening session on Thursday.

PLAN OF ARBITRATION.

Adopted and Recommended to Affiliated Unions and Local Alliances, by the Structural Building Trades Alliance of America.

Each trade connected with the Structural Building Trades Alliance shall be required to enter into an agreement for a certain specified period with their employers in each locality covered by the Structural Building Trades Alliance.

First. Should a dispute arise between the parties to the agreement at any time, the grievance shall be referred to a Joint Board of Arbitration, to be created and maintained as follows:

Second. Each trade under the jurisdiction of this Alliance shall appoint annually one member to serve upon the Joint Board of Arbitration, and each Association of Contractors in each trade under the jurisdiction of this Alliance shall appoint annually one member to serve upon the Joint Board of Arbitration.

Third. The appointees shall be required to create and maintain a Joint Board of Arbitration, to whom shall be referred any dispute arising in the trades covered by this Alliance where the representatives of the trade interested fail to agree on an adjustment.

Fourth. When the parties in dispute have so failed, they shall promptly report such failure to the Joint Board of Arbitration, which must be convened immediately thereafter, and the case in dispute submitted to the Joint Board for a decision.

Fifth. There shall be no cessation of work pending a reference of such dispute to the Joint Board of Arbitration, provided a meeting of the Board will be convened not later than forty-eight hours after the dispute has arisen.

Sixth. It is expressly understood that by and through the creation of a Joint Board of Arbitration, it shall be empowered to insist upon an agreement being entered into between employees and employers in each trade interested; when these agreements are made, that their provisions shall be maintained inviolate; and that in the event of any trade or trades failing to enter into an agreement, it is distinctly understood to be within the power of this Board of Arbitration to prepare a form of agreement as may appear in the judgment of the Board to be best suited to the conditions of the trade involved, and this proposed agreement shall be declared the instrument of the Joint Board of Arbitration, and shall be recognized and lived up to with the same faithfulness as though the trade interested had created the same.

Seventh. Should at any time a deadlock occur on the Joint Arbitration Board, or a failure to agree upon a settlement of any dispute result, the Joint Board of Arbitration shall select an umpire under such conditions as they may decide upon, and the decision of the umpire shall be final and binding.

Eighth. For any failure of any disputant to recognize or abide by the decision rendered by the Joint Board of Arbitration, such penalty shall be imposed as the Joint Board of Arbitration may decide.

Ninth. Should a Local Union refuse to recognize or abide by the decision reached, or to bear the penalty imposed, then the International Union of the trade in dispute shall suspend or otherwise discipline such refractory local.

Tenth. Should an employer refuse to abide by a decision rendered by the Joint Board of Arbitration, or bear the penalty imposed for such refusal, the trade affected shall have the right to take such action as they may decide.

On motion, the secretary-treasurer of the Structural Building Trades Alliance was instructed to procure a bond of $2,000, and the Structural Building Trades Alliance furnished with the same.

The representative of the Engineers decided to know whether per capita tax should be levied on members of affiliated organizations not directly connected with the construction or erection of building work, and the Chair ruled that inasmuch as the Constitution required the payment of per capita tax on all members of affiliated organizations, that such constitutional point would be accepted as the ruling of the organization.

A communication was read from Local Union 22 of the International Association of Marble Workers, asking admittance to the Structural Building Trades Alliance as follows:

Brothers Local Union 22, International Association of Marble Workers, hereby make application to the Structural Building Trade Alliance.

Trusting the same will receive favorable consideration.

(Signed) JAS. CARDEN, Sec'y.

On motion, the communication was ordered received and filed and the secretary instructed to notify the union in question that the Alliance does not provide for the admission of local bodies to membership.

Reverting to the question of inviting eligible trades to join the Alliance, the Board of Governors, on motion, decided to extend an invitation to the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association.

Consideration of this question provoked considerable debate, in which many suggestions were made covering invitations to building trades not already identified with the Alliance. The consensus of opinion, however, seemed to favor extending no other invitation until applications were made by such unions as desired to identify themselves with the Alliance.

The question of seating non-affiliated trades in local alliances was taken up again by the Board, and after a very lengthy and general debate participated in by every member, the following motion was finally prevailed:

Moved, that no trade be admitted to the Structural Building Trades Alliance. On roll-call Buchanan, Kirby, Lillian and Hanahan voted aye, and Spencer and Bainbridge voting no.

It was further moved that any local union admitted to a local alliance whose international is not affiliated with the Structural Building Trades Alliance shall be required to pay the constitutional per capita tax of the Structural Building Trades Alliance.

Hanahan raised the point of order that the constitution does not impose a per capita tax on local unions, that, therefore, the motion in his judgment was out of order. The Chair ruled the point not well taken. Hanahan thereupon took an appeal from the chair, and another roll-call resulted in Buchanan, Kirby and Lillian supporting the ruling of the chair, while Bainbridge, Hanahan and Spencer voted to sustain the point raised by Mr. Hanahan, as against the Chair. The decision of the Chair was therefore declared sustained. It was finally moved as a substitute for motions previously prevailing relating to the meeting of local unions in local alliances, that locals of non-affiliated unions be admitted to local alliances at the discretion of the Alliance, but that the claim for jurisdiction of such non-affiliated trades must be submitted to the General Board of Governors at the first meeting of that body after such admission of local unions in local alliances, when the claim must be decided as in the case of affiliated trades, and a per capita tax charged against the Local Unions thus admitted, in accordance with the constitution.

The Board, having sat in continuous session since 10 a. m., thereupon took a recess at 3:30 until Thursday.

MORNING SESSION.

Thursday, October 13th, 1904.

The Board of Governors of the Structural Building Trades Alliance convened at 10 a. m. in regular form, with all members present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and an error appearing in relation to a deadlock having occurred on a ruling of Chairman Buchanan in the previous meeting, the minutes were ordered corrected to read that since the majority did not vote on roll call against sustaining the chairman, the decision of the chair, according to Roberts' rules of order, was declared to be sustained. The minutes were otherwise approved.

The plan of arbitration submitted by Vice-President Lillian at a previous meeting was presented and the board, after adding the last four additional sections to the plan, approved and adopted it as the arbitration plan of the Structural Building Trades Alliance.

In order to set the plan of arbitration before the contractors in the various trades, it was, on motion, resolved that each member of the Board of Governors be instructed to invite the prominent employers in the different trades affiliated with the Alliance to a conference at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon at the rooms of the Builders' Association, and the secretary stood instructed to procure sufficient copies of the plan to furnish each contractor and member present, in order to acquaint them fully with the nature of the intended arbitration arrangements as adopted.

The secretary was instructed to communicate with the press of the city in order to secure the publication of such matters of interest that should be made public, and of which the press had heretofore failed to give proper notice.

On motion, the question of adopting a uniform working card or monthly button was not concurred in, it being the opinion of the Board that local alliances should use their own discretion as to the adoption of a working card or button.

The Indianapolis convention having instructed the Board of Governors to set a date on which to hold the next convention of the Structural Building Trades Alliance, the Board decided to fix the date on the third Monday of May, 1905.

By unanimous consent, the secretary of the Alliance was empowered to arrange for the time and place of the next meeting of the Board of Governors, when matters of importance were sufficient to warrant the Board in assembling.

It was further unanimously agreed that the Secretary be instructed to prepare a financial statement covering the receipts and expenditures of the Alliance, and include the same in the minutes to be furnished each member after adjournment.

At 2:10 p. m. the Board took an adjournment until 2 p. m. Friday, to meet in conference with the employers, who express a willingness to meet in order to consider the plan of arbitration herein set forth.

Friday, October 14, 1904.

The meeting of the Board of Governors opened at 4:30 p. m., all members answering roll call.

The meeting was convened to consider what steps should be taken to place the plan of arbitration of the Structural Building Trades Alliance before the contractors of the several trades affiliated with the Alliance, since the contractors whom the Board of Governors had conferred with at the arranged meeting of the afternoon had failed to indicate a plan of general adoption.

While expressing their general approval of the plan submitted and commending most highly on the observance of a similar plan by many of the trades in Chicago, it was conceded that they were not in a position to speak for their National Associations and preferred to permit the Structural Building Trades Alliance to work out a general plan of adoption, promising meanwhile to use their efforts to secure such general adoption.

On motion the secretary was instructed to correspond with the National or International Associations of Employers and submit a copy of the Arbitration Plan and arrange a joint conference of a committee of one from each trade identified with the Alliance, for the purpose of negotiating a National agreement between the interested trades and their employers and adopting the Plan of Arbitration as adopted by the Structural Building Trades Alliance.

The secretary then read an application from the International Composition Roofers, Damp and Waterproof Workers as follows:

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 13th, 1904.

Mr. Wm. J. Spencer, Gen. Sec'y-Treas. Structural Building Trades Alliance, Box 7, Dayton, Ohio:

Dear Sir and Brother—After giving the organization of the Structural Building Trades Alliance of America careful consideration, we desire to make application and in accordance with the Constitution we are enclosing you a copy of the jurisdiction and classification of work belonging to the International Brotherhood of Composition Roofers, Damp and Waterproof Workers.

We request you to give this consideration, and should the application meet with the approval and the requirements of your organization, we will, upon receipt of notice of the acceptance of this application, forward the required initiation fee to cover the same.

Trusting you will let me hear from you on this matter as soon as possible, wishing your organization success, thanking you for past favors, awaiting an early reply, I remain, Yours fraternally,

H. S. WOODS, Gen. Sec'y-Treas.

On motion, the correspondence was received and consideration deferred until the objection relating to tile composition and sheeting was more clearly defined by the applicant.

On motion the plan of amalgamation relating to the United Association and the National Fitters, as submitted by Sec'y Spencer, was endorsed. The same being similar to that under which the amalgamation was effected between the German-American Typographical and the International Typographical Union.

Pres. Balhorn of the Brotherhood of Painters, who was present, made a statement relative to the necessity of extending the scope of the Alliance to permit non-affiliated trades being accepted by local alliances, especially those that are in slight conflict with existing affiliated trades, and urging the appointment of organizers as soon as compatible with the affairs of the Alliance.

The suggestions were received and referred to the next meeting of the Board of Governors.

On motion the Board took the adjournment subject to a call by the Chair for the next meeting.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. J. SPENCER, Sec'y-Treas.

The Conflict of Classes.

BY MARGARET SCOTT HALL.

IN the conflict of classes who can accurately place the responsibility for discord, or correctly estimate the result of this gigantic struggle? The industrial situation becomes more serious year by year, and it would be unreasonable to suppose it should do so without cause.

Greed is the most active evil of all agencies in the strife between labor and capital. It is the parent body from which almost every sin of humanity has being and development.

The lust of greed, when once its poison begins to circulate in the human heart, perverts every sentiment of pity, generosity and justice. It poisons the even current of domestic felicity, and generates hate and envy among brothers and sisters of the same household; it creates strife in neighborhoods; it renders politics odious, and law a travesty on justice; it creeps into municipalities and a long suffering public must bear the result; city and government officials produce their annual crop of boodlers. Through the baneful influence of greed, religion has its Judas's, and the church its traitors. Greed is everywhere; then it is not unnatural that strife and resentment should result.

The base selfishness of a greedy spirit of monopoly has become a crime and the nation's besetting sin.

More and more the sympathies of the vast majority are aroused for the cause of the wronged. Greed grabs faster and faster, and on every hand monopoly grows more and more merciless on all within its grasp.

Who shall prophesy truly concerning this conflict of classes? Who shall say what the end shall be to this family quarrel—where, in a prosperous nation, one brother must die of privation that another may amass a fortune?

"That plenty but reproaches me
That leaves my brother bare;
Not wholly glad my heart can be
While his is bowed with care."
The blight of ignorance, poverty and degradation has become a reproach to the cultured, refined, fastidious, besotted aristocracy of greed.

The Southland is rich in the possibilities of undeveloped resources, yet the canker of greed has already marked her for its own. Heaven help the section or the people who, for the sake of gain, will deliver their poor and helpless ones into the rapacious jaws of insatiable monopoly.

Within factory walls, bound in fetters of hopeless ignorance, the youth of the poor are shut in a living tomb.

The manufacturers' prosperity is assured at the expense of mind and body—flesh and blood of the poor white serf, whom necessity compels to serve under slavery's new regime!

Little children are sacrificed to the god of mammon, and a Christian culture makes only feeble protest. Gold-blind, our Christian people refuse to acknowledge their responsibility for others; weaker and dependent ones who are made a prey rather than a charge. Refusing to be their brother's keeper, our Christian people have persistently avoided the issue. But the situation is at last demanding attention; true disciples of a true God are at last raising a voice against injustice, and vainly seeking a remedy for what should have been prevented.

The lowest order of intelligence can be maintained at the lowest rate of expense, while improved minds and bodies would require proportionate increase in life's comforts; greed has contaminated the law-makers, and compulsory education must not be agitated. Once when the blight of slavery cursed the nation, that mighty man of the people, Abraham Lincoln, stepped from the obscure ranks of labor to be champion of the weak. In a mighty and bloody conflict, the fetters were stricken from the slave. Now, a new form of slavery exists for capital's use, and under the new regime the masters are merciless tyrants and the ignorant, wretched slaves are pauperized white people, instead of negroes.

"The boot is on the other foot,"—and every indication points to as desperate a struggle to break the chains of bondage in the new regime as the old. The masters become as irate and excited over the suggestion of emancipating the wage slave as any master of former days did over releasing the African he had bought and owned as lawful chattel.

Pessimism is a useless indulgence, but possibilities and stern realities must be acknowledged.

War is a scourge to any nation, but when time and greed ripen the industrial discontent into an irresistible passion, may the God of righteousness raise up a pure and noble defender of labor's righteous cause. May the spirit of Abraham Lincoln inspire the man of the hour to again brave the storm in the cause of liberty.

Utter indifference to the conditions that mean inevitable pauperism to a large per cent. of the masses has been the attitude of the more favored class. The tools of capital control the situation, and men are cheaper than material or machinery. Selfishness is truly the modern sin.

Surplus millions may buy the glorious title of philanthropist, and the applause of a toadying society, but the multitude who have become poorer and poorer while the surplus millions accumulated are not deceived by the renowned generosity of so-called philanthropists. As well expect the rabbit that has undergone torture in the hands of the physician in the interest of medical science to feel gratitude for the favor of expert surgery that has been performed.

The rabbit was only a means to demonstrate a man's experiment; and in about the same proportion the toiler serves the capitalist in the desired capacity until unfit for work, when he may die or perchance linger in some charity hospital endowed by the capitalist. Linger in pain and poverty long enough to express gratitude for the noble, generous millionaires who pauperized men and endowed charities!

The conflict of classes is the strife of unequal forces equally determined; labor discontented and capital contemptuous and unrelenting; right oppressed, striving with might, the oppressor.

"Best he whose shoulders best endure

The load that brings relief,
And best shall be his joy secure
Who shares that joy with grief."

Whatever comes, we would prefer and hope for a perfect plan of arbitration by which all disputes might find ready adjustment. "We pass this way but once," and life seems too short and too fair to allow bitterness and strife to destroy peace; however, caution would suggest that "in union there is strength."

The Agreement Wastes Effort.

It is unnecessary for the union to exert itself to the slightest degree in an attempt to obtain an agreement which will regulate the hours, wages, etc.

The protection conceded in an agreement at all times depends upon the union's ability to present a force sufficient to resent any aggression.

If the union has strength enough to justify it in making demands and can create influence sufficient to obtain the signature of its employers, it has power enough to maintain its demands without contract and without the co-operation of any employer.

The value of an agreement can be estimated correctly by becoming familiar with the attitude of the Master Tailors in Kansas City, Mo., and in Binghamton, N. Y., where, without ever offering an excuse, they cast it aside and declared the "open" shop.

The tailors of these cities undoubtedly realize now that their years of struggling to obtain an agreement were for naught, and had they devoted the same amount of energy to organizing, the Master Tailors would not have been so hasty in taking action.

To those of the building trades who mourn the loss of an agreement this news should come to reconcile as well as convince them. The tidings of the death of that object, "agreement," should be hailed with rejoicing instead of with sorrow.

Self-Watchfulness.

Every man needs a certain amount of watching to do his best, and if a man does not do his best he is liable to lose his job. A workman can watch himself and by his own will stir up his energy as well as any boss, and the more he does so the less the boss will have to. Watch to make every move count; let the mind plan ahead of the hands. Employers hire men to do their best all time and estimate the cost of work upon that basis, and men engage to do their part in consideration of their wages. A man is morally bound to waste no time and to do his work right, whether the boss is looking or not. To shirk or to do work wrong is stealing, though the wrong be undiscovered.

The wealth and comfort of civilization are made by the work of the hand and brain, one as much as the other, and there is no moral reason why a carpenter should have longer hours than a banker, or that the daughter of the laborer should not have the same education in music or travel as her more favored sister of wealth—that is, if she has talent for music and is able to profit by travel. It is cruelly unjust that any man be forced by conditions that he cannot change to spend all the strength of his life in the gloom of a mine or the mud of a ditch in order to get enough food to eat and shelter that is not as good as the horse barn or the dog house of a more fortunate brother in a better section of the city.

At heart the hand worker is as good as the brain worker, but is not so well trained, hence his shortcomings are detected and in his attempt to right his wrongs he plays into the hands of the politician and makes coarse blunders which the brain worker does not. A man must watch himself, to always be reliable in the study of the political and social problems which so deeply concern him.

A man who employs many men said to the writer: "My hardest work is to find men that I can depend upon to be honest and to work for my interests all the time, whether I am on the job or not." Watch for the interests of the man who gives you employment. The more you help him to make, the more work and better wages he will be able to pay you. True, he too often allows greed to hold your wages down, forgetting that your interests are also his and that when he works you beyond your strength he also wrongs himself, but that is no reason for you to wrong him. Watch to do right by every man that employs you, and if he does not do right by you, watch for the man that will.

Watch how you spend your time and money while off duty. A man owes it to himself, to his employer and to the public to come on the job in possession of all his faculties, not weak and nervous from dissipation, nor fixed up with a "bracer." Self-watchfulness on these lines raises the character of a laborer, gives him a dignity and commands a respect that he does not now enjoy. We cannot get our rights everywhere at once, but every man can begin self-watchfulness without waiting. Watch the intent and influence of your words and vote in the labor movement. There is a notion abroad that organized labor but waits the chance to be as tyrannical and detrimental to public welfare as the trusts and corporations that oppose, and the struggle of capital and labor sinks to the low level of brute warfare. Watch, therefore, to stand above the capitalist and politician who are sunk in the mud and misery of money getting and physical idleness and strive to escape the mental degradation of which overmuch toil makes the workman a victim.

THE STRIKE BREAKER.

BY ROBERT SHACKELTON,
In the Saturday Evening Post.

Very recently I was looking over a roll of names in an office in New York. There were cards contained in drawers and arranged in classified departments. So far as appearances were concerned it was precisely the same as the card catalogue of a library; but as a matter of fact it was all prepared for a very different purpose.

On each card was written the name of a man, with his address and a statement of his occupation; and often there were a few words additional, in succinct comment as to record or character. There were some six hundred machinists listed, there were about as many boilermakers, there were carpenters, teamsters, printers and men of other vocations, and there were "handy men," capable of doing divers things, best in some particular line but fit for metamorphosis. There were some 3,000 names in all, and men of widely separated localities were listed; but that room in New York represented potential organization.

In rolls such as that lies the power of the strike-breaker—a man whose class of work has but recently been established and which has still more recently reached an astonishing development.

It is a factor of singular interest, this which has so unexpectedly come to affect the relations of industry. It is too early, as yet, to gauge its final importance with much approach to certainty; but employers and employed feel an equal sense of its possible consequence, an equal concern in watching its further growth.

So naturally has the new development come about that it seems strange that it did not come long ago. It is a case of evolution; yet, though the processes of this evolution have been open to the sight of all, the final consummation has been unexpected.

For years the employed have been powerfully perfecting their organization. For years employers have been getting their own strength in hand. Long ago it seemed as if the lines were permanently drawn between the two, and that whenever a contest should come, developing into a strike, it would be only a question of whether employer or employed were in that particular instance the stronger.

But the new idea is to hold men in hand ready to proceed to any part of the country and prepared to take the place of strikers in any line of work; not unskilled men, picked up at random, after a need has arisen, but men of efficiency in the particular department of work in which they are called for. For a strike of carpenters, carpenters are to be ready; if builders or boilermakers are wanted there must be builders and boilermakers to fill the gap; if a street-railway line in any city finds itself minus its employees the strike-breaker is expected to see that new motormen and conductors materialize.

And all this is very different from efforts at strike-breaking which have obtained in the past; efforts made with the help of hastily gathered and unorganized men. For the very essence of the new movement is organization, and in the most recent developments the strike-breaker retains personal command of his men and does not merely turn over so many hundreds of them where needed.

In the carrying out of his plans the strike-breaker depends upon the potency of two forces, one old and one new. The new force, hitherto latent and unsuspected, has been discovered by himself, and the old force is one which is very old indeed but which has never before been used with anything of system in such a connection.

It is within the last five years—it is practically within the past three years—that the new system definitely began its development; it is very recently that its strength has begun to be realized. Formerly employment agencies were called upon at random, and men were sought out in the highways and hedges, so to speak, and advertisements for workers were published in distant cities. As the new system develops such aids will less and less be relied upon.

Necessarily, of the men who are regularly enrolled under the new system there will always be a proportion who will be unable to respond when a call is made; but the strike-breakers believe that by far the greater number can be depended upon.

There are at least two strike-breaking bureaus in New York that have adopted the elaborate system of keeping enrolled a force who await a demand for their services; there are two in Massachusetts; there is at least one in Chicago.

At the head of one of those in New York is a man who, having served an apprenticeship with the concern to which I referred at the opening of this article, perceived a point in which the system could be importantly strengthened, and straightway set about the task.

It is he who has set the example of holding the strike-breaking force firmly under his own control, instead of being content with furnishing a certain number of men of a specified line of capability, and his example is sure to be followed, for it gives an element of centralized strength which was hitherto absent.

He not only retains command of his men, but assumes charge of matters of subsistence and daily management, and is himself the paymaster, thus bringing about an entire centralization of power. In his own case the strike-breaking efforts have thus far been applied solely in the direction of strikes of street-railway men, but there is no doubt that he, and the few others who are working along similar lines, will be ready to apply the latest developments of the new profession in any branch of business in which their services are called for.

A small number of men are held in hand, under pay, constantly, and till a strike arises are utilized in general work as private detectives or spies, and they make a nucleus around which reinforcements can be swiftly gathered. A few corporations have begun to pay regular retainers to one or another of the strike-breaking managers, and this renders somewhat of constant expenditure possible and indeed expected. The bulk of the men relied upon are scattered through the country, and most of them, at the time a summons comes, are busied with other vocations—work which they are expected to leave, although the prospect of double pay would seem to the average man but poor compensation. But that is just the point—the men are not of the average kind!

The strike-breaker knows that there are a large number of men, even in this twentieth century, who are as eager for a time of adventure as ever were the men of the Middle Ages. A certain number of such men become regular soldiers, but to most of them an army career is distasteful, on account of too much regularity and being tied too hard and fast, or else circumstances have not been such as to turn them in the direction of an enlistment. The love of adventurous excitement, with as much as possible of freedom still retained, is the feature of their character which is to be depended upon.

These are such men as those who, in the Middle Ages and even in much later times, went from one country to another as soldiers of fortune; men such as Dugaid Dalgetty, or like those who followed the standard of Hawkwood from the territories of one prince to another, now taking part in one fight and now in another.

This principle in mankind is the ancient force which has been rediscovered and applied to their own uses by the professional breakers of strikes.

Numbers of the adventure-loving men are well-to-do; among them are some of really good education; as a class they average high as men to be depended upon to take risks and obey orders. Most of them are quite ready to leave good employment when a call comes, for the love of adventure irresistibly draws them, and as it is the "handy men" who principally form this class it can be readily understood why they have little fear of not finding other work when their services in a strike, at unusually high pay, are no longer required.

But even more interesting is the latent and unsuspected force which has been discovered and applied—the organization of the unorganized!

Workingmen are now well organized. But heretofore it has not occurred to any one to organize, in antagonism to them, those who are outside of the unions.

There are men who have been dismissed from workingmen's unions; there are malcontents; there are some who are opposed to the unions from prejudice or principle; and there is the sadder class of those who, though they have been strong union men and still perhaps are so at heart, have found the unions unable to protect them, and, desirous of working at the trade for which they are best fitted, find themselves almost forced to join the hostile ranks—men, these, who have been active in the union cause in some strike, and afterward, when the strike is over and they have been taken back with others not so prominent, have found themselves discharged for some ostensible cause disconnected with anything for which their fellow-workers can take up their quarrel, and afterward find it impossible to find employment—for blacklisting, or what amounts to that, is an active force in certain lines. Upon this class the professional strike-breaker places great reliance, for it supplies him with a number of well-trained men.

A recent happening in the city of New York was impressively illuminative in its exhibition of the present strength of the new system, which has already taken such swift root, and in its shadowing forth of possible greater strength in the future.

A strike was threatened on the lines of the elevated railway—and it will give an impression of the present power of the unions to explain that the strike was threatened by some 400 men employed by the elevated system on account of dissatisfaction with the scale of wages announced for the employees of another system, the subway, controlled by the same capital, but which at that time had not begun operation. It would seem as if organization could go little further than for the men of one line to stand together in regard to the affairs of a line unopened. But strength was soon confronted with strength.

Silently into New York there came an army of a thousand men, each one qualified to work on an electric road. They came singly or in pairs, they came without ostentation, without the waving of banners and the flourish of trumpets. And these men came prepared to hold in their hands an important factor in the comfort of hundreds of thousands of citizens for as many days as should be necessary.

They all reported to one man, and he, like a general, saw to their organization and maintenance, their way of living, their comings and goings. There were cooks and waiters for the wants of the inner man; there were barbers for the outer. There were dormitories and cots. There was every preparation which could have been made for the maintenance of an actual army of that number of men.

It was known that at any hour the strike might be declared, and therefore it was arranged that on each of the elevated trains there were to be at least two men riding, unnoticed, as passengers, who were ready to assume the positions of motorman and guard. At the dormitories the men were drilled in the calling of the stations, and they were also drilled in the more important matter of the system signals. And thus the strike-breaker in charge of this little army was prepared to continue the operation of trains, no matter at what hour they might be deserted by the regular employees.

Nor was this all. There were preparations made for the aid of the possible injured, and there were lawyers retained, ready to proceed to the police courts, there to represent any of the strike-breaking force who might be arrested on whatever charge. Without this care the forces of the army might have been seriously depleted, especially if scenes of violence had occurred.

Now, it is probable that not every one of these details was part of the original plan of the leader. He must have adopted some suggestions made by the managers of the road. But he and other strike-breakers will doubtless make use of all of them, with new ideas additional, when the next case shall arise. As has been said, the whole thing has been a matter of development.

In this New York case strong political considerations operated to bring about a settlement, whereupon this army of a thousand folded their tents like the Arabs and stole away as silently as they had appeared.

This same man under whose command there were such thorough preparations to break the impending strike in New York, has done other similar work within the last three years, but has till now been able to keep his light under a bushel, where he fain would still have it, for publicity is not a source of strength to him. A year or so ago he took three hundred men to San Francisco in anticipation of a strike, and there, too, the strike did not take place. These new conditions, and the centralization of strength on either side, operate to make all concerned more chary of a conflict.

The men of the unions are frankly dubious as to how best to meet these new developments. They are far from admitting that there is reason for downheartedness, but they say that their own plans of action must be matured with care. Thus far, in industrial questions as in all others, development on the part of an antagonistic force has entailed a sequent counter-development, and it will be interesting to know what form the opposition will take.

A system of spies is an important part of present-day strike-breaking. Corporations admit, unreservedly, that they pay men whose business it is to join the labor organizations and keep in touch with all their proceedings, and in particular to give timely warning of any intended strike.

One large trust has for an important motto, "Avoid a strike if possible." Spies keep the managers of the mills informed; and in most cases, when a strike cannot otherwise be avoided, the mill where it is to occur is suddenly shut down, and the would-be strikers find themselves out of work without having had a chance to give voice to discontent or to formulate demands. With so many mills under its control this corporation can do temporarily without the use of any one, for the work can be turned into other channels.

On the whole, thus far the advent of the man who makes the breaking of strikes a business has operated to the discouragement of strikes; and when a strike occurs it is better to combat it by businesslike display of organized tactics than to make use of arbitrary power, and crush the industry of a town out of existence, as was done in a Pennsylvania town on the ground that it was a "hotbed of unionism." The mills were dismantled, the machinery was moved to other cities, and not a wheel has since been turned there, not a fire has been lighted; which is a severer form of punishment than even the most successful of strike-breakers has either the power or the desire to inflict.

The old-fashioned way of meeting a strike was for the owners to lock the mills, or shut down the works, and then for both parties to do a minimum of negotiation and a maximum of waiting, till at length one side or the other was tired and surrendered at more or less discretion.

But with the growth of business there came to the operators of large concerns a realizing sense of the magnitude of their loss by cessation of work, and so the putting to work of outside men was attempted.

That there are always tens of thousands out of work, or even hundreds of thousands, was the mainstay of this system, and men were gathered from all quarters; and some years ago a feature which plays a prominent part in the most recent strike-breaking began to be observed—that of segregating the men and providing them with food and quarters.

But the present-day strike-breakers utilize a radically different principle in their disregard, so far as possible, of men who are out of work, and their reliance upon such as are somewhere employed. They know that many an individual of most admirable character may be out of work, and with no fault of his own; but when they need to recruit hundreds they fear to recruit them from the idle. Anomalous though it seems, they trust to men who are to leave other employment. This feature clearly differentiates the strike-breaking bureau from the employment agency.

As part of the new system, there are corporations who have an understanding by which they are to aid one another with men in case of a strike. It has been said that they frankly lend, from one city to another, trusted employees who are entirely in the interests of the employers. This is strenuously denied by certain corporations that have been confronted with the charge; but it is a fact that although men are not actually lent, which would give great offense to the unions and needlessly aggravate ill-feeling, there is with some companies a system under which certain men may resign their places, for two weeks or a month at a time, and then—entirely by accident, of course—these men are soon working as strike-breaking employees in another city.

There are at least 15,000 men now enrolled at the headquarters of the strike-breakers. One bureau alone makes claim to the names of more than that, but rivals say that this must certainly be a premature estimate, as the system has not been in force sufficiently long to gain so many men who can be soberly relied upon. However that may be, the system promises to expand rapidly, and any premature estimate of today is likely to seem very small a few years hence.

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS IN GERMANY,

As Seen by a Commissioner of the London Times.

The German factory system, the right of controlling which in the interests of the employed is recognized and regulated by the Government, is made the subject of exhaustive study by a commissioner of the London Times.

The most stringent regulations are those affecting children and women; and herein the state clearly has in view the interests of the community, as represented by the employed. Children may not be employed under the age of thirteen, and at that age only if they are no longer liable to attend school, a condition which is decided by the school inspector. For such children—that is, those from thirteen to fourteen years old—the hours are limited to six a day, with half an hour's interval for meals.

At fourteen boys and girls may go into the factory in large numbers; but up to sixteen they are called "young persons" or (together with those under fourteen) "youthful workers" and are subject to special regulations. The number of "young persons" employed in 1901 was 325,912. They may not be employed for more than ten hours a day, nor on Sundays and holidays, nor during the hours appointed for religious instruction, for confirmation, confession and communion, nor in certain specified trades; their working day must not begin earlier than 5:30 a. m., nor continue later than 8:30 p. m.; they must have an hour's pause at midday and half an hour both in the forenoon and in the afternoon, unless their working day is not more than eight hours, and no continuous spell exceeds four hours. During the pauses any participation in the work of the factory is forbidden, and even to remain in the rooms is allowed only when their own department of the work is brought to a complete standstill or it is impossible for them to go elsewhere.

Women must not be employed between 8:30 p. m. and 5:30 a. m.; on Saturday and on the eve of a holy day they must not be employed after 5:30 p. m. Their daily hours of employment must not exceed eleven on ordinary days or ten on Saturday and on the eve of a holy day. They must have at least an hour's pause at midday, and those who have a household to look after may claim an extra half hour. The number of women over sixteen employed in 1901 was 847,386, of whom 310,211 were under twenty-one.

Wherever women and youthful workers are employed in a factory the employer must give written notice to the police, stating the nature of the employment and the hours of work.

Every factory must have a set of rules hung up in an accessible place in each department, stating the hours of work, the time and manner of paying wages, the length of notice required for terminating employment and the conditions which render notice unnecessary, and particulars of punishments, including fines and the objects to which they will be applied. Punishments which wound self-respect or offend against morality are inadmissible. The factory rules are legally binding on employer and employed; but before they are issued opportunity must be given to adult workers to express their views, and the rules, with any written objections, must be submitted within three days of issue to the factory inspector, who may order amendments if the rules are not in accordance with the law or with special regulations. All fines must be applied to the benefit of the factory workers, and generally go to the sick fund.

German factory buildings are substantial structures. In the most modern steel is used. The floors are sound, dry and clean. The rooms are lofty, amply provided with window space and generally lighted from the roof also. The practice of having several stories one above the other is rare except in textile mills, and then the number of stories seldom exceeds three. What is so common in the United States, namely, a weaving shed on the ground floor with other rooms above it, and the shed consequently pitch dark, is rarely seen. The Germans appear to have grasped the fact that work is better done in a good than in a bad light, and great care is taken to secure it. Ventilation is also well managed.

But the most striking feature of German factories is their clean, orderly and well-kept condition. These qualities seem to be universal, and they extend to the dirtiest and most untidy departments. The foundry is the severest test. It is usually a scene of dirt and disorder, unmitigated by any attempt to be tidy and aggravated by an atmosphere heavy with smoke and gloom. The German foundries are a revelation. They are as clean and well kept and almost as light as any other shop. The remarkable order maintained is systematic, and in a large measure intended to promote the prevention of accidents.

Outside the rooms German factories are well provided with sanitary, washing and dressing accommodation. The workmen are cleanly and careful in their habits. They generally keep a working suit of clothes before and after work. Consequently lockers are provided. Baths are common, particularly shower baths with hot and cold water, and in summer they are much used. German employers do a good deal for their people. They provide many comforts and conveniences for them apart from sick funds and savings banks. It is common to find a number of things done for the people. They have dining-rooms with or without canteens. As a rule the people prefer to bring their own food and have it heated up. Then there are further developments. The dining-room has probably a library and a piano; it is used for meetings, games and choir practices. This nearly approaches the full-fledged model factory.

Good qualities, like good steel knives, grow dull of edge unless they are used.

After all it seems that experience is the only sure teacher. In many instances the new unionist either does not know or will not profit by the experience of the older and now successful unions.—Cigar Makers' Journal.

Gutter-Stop at Gables.

BY W. C. B. RANDOLPH.

METHOD of stopping gutters at gables is given, which, it is believed, will be found very simple, artistic and satisfactory.

In Fig. 1 a section of the frame, gutter and cornice is shown. The gutter is cut off the same length as the look-outs. Take a piece of stuff the same thickness as the fascia and 12 inches wide and about 24 inches long; place it against the cornice it is to cover, as shown in Fig. 2, giving the same margin below the plancia as the fascia, get the position of the gutter and mark some figure that will be a little larger than the gutter and cove. The other end should be a little longer than will take in the bed mold returned around the corner-board. Cut a suitable figure on this end, large enough to cover the short piece of placia as per dotted lines in Fig. 2, and now cut away the surplus part of the piece at the top on a line with the top of the fascia, and you have it ready to nail on. The gutter, however, should be thoroughly coated with white lead before the piece is fastened so that it will be perfectly water-tight.

(Fig. 2.)

The crown-mold is returned against this piece, as seen in Fig. 2, and the shingles are cut to allow them straddling the figured piece.

The placia must be pieced out in width to take in the corner-board and the whole stopped up by a piece indicated by the dotted lines, which will also receive the bed-mold and frieze.

A quick way to get the backing line of hips is shown in Fig. 3. Take a short jack and tack it onto the hip, as shown in Fig. 3, which is its working position, and take your square or anything that is straight and place it on the top of the jack so that the end is plumb over the center of the hip. Now measure down from the end of the straight-edge to the center of the hip, and this distance will be the amount you will have to take off in backing the hip, as shown by the dotted line in Fig. 3.

This method will answer for any pitch roof, and is so quick and accurate that it is not necessary to try to remember a complicated rule.

Tool Grinding.

Though probably no workshop tool pays better for the care bestowed upon it or affects the work of the entire shop more than the grindstone, it is almost an exceptional occurrence to find a good stone, properly hung, running true and in perfect order. The shop stone generally has a trough beneath it to hold the water, and, being usually left with a portion of its edge immersed, that part becomes softer than the remainder, and the stone wears unevenly. The out-of-doors' grindstone soon becomes a worthless wreck from the effects of the weather, the sun's rays warping the wooden frame and making the stone itself too hard for use. Every employer of edge tools should endeavor to get a grindstone that will do its allotted work well and in the quickest time. A good grindstone, to replace one that is hard and flinty, is always a paying investment. A writer on the economic conduct of workshops recommends that a bad grindstone should be broken up, as the best means of saving time and trouble and earning the thanks of those who would otherwise have to use it.

Although the applications of a grindstone are limited in its sphere it acts to perfection, and does that work which can not be executed by the planer, lathe or milling machine. No machine or process has yet been devised to supercede the grindstone, and improvement has not added to, nor invention displaced, this primitive tool. True, science has produced artificial compounds which take the place of the original natural stone and are often used advantageously, but they are new only in the method of manufacture.

Only those who have used a good stone, properly mounted, with its edge running as true as a turned wheel, can appreciate the value of a grindstone, and only such a stone can be applied to fine work. Those who have worked only at a lumpy, badly-kept stone can not form a just estimate of the value of grindstones as applied to the production of the edges of tools in hardened steel. Artificial grindstones are made by binding together silicious particles with silicate of lime, and the process of manufacture is this: Silicate of soda, which is a kind of water glass, is first made by dissolving flints with caustic alkali. Silicious sand of fine and even grain is then mixed with the plastic mass, and the whole is molded to the proper shape. In some cases the stone is treated chemically to render it hard; hydraulic pressure is employed to solidify the material. Some stones acquire their hardness by simple exposure to the atmosphere. According to the fineness of the grains of sand used the texture of the stone is modified, and emery may be used in its stead, resulting in a grindstone of exceptionally good quality; and these artificial stones are in many cases cheaper than the natural stone to quarry and shape, which necessitates the expenditure of considerable time, sometimes with a useless result.

Other kinds of artificial stones have been made in which the grit is held together by various hard-setting cements, but those resulting in a plaster-like surface are of little use, lacking as they do the sharp, cutting properties of the natural stone. Emery and sand are mixed with various substances with a view to obtaining a useful whetstone; clay is used in a plastic state, and then baked with the cutting material incorporated in it; shellac and similar substances have the admixture made while they are liquefied by heat. The following recipes for artificial grindstones have been published: Melt one part of shellac, and add to it three times the quantity of washed silicious sand; emery may be used instead of sand. Boiled linseed is said to form an all-sufficient agglutinant, and merely requires to be subjected to the influences of the air after the abrading material has been mixed with it. When the mass approaches solidity it is subjected to pressure in molds and finally hardened by heating. It would be impossible to give a list of the numberless formulae which have been tried with varying success in the manufacture of emery wheels, which have now taken a very prominent place in tool grinding. Laps made of soft metal, such as lead and copper, are very extensively used for grinding tools of peculiar form. The metal lap is turned to the desired shape, and is then charged with emery, or some other abradent, and oil; the particles become imbedded in the surface of the soft metal, and make of it a "grindstone" which preserves the shape originally given to it and requires to be continually supplied with fresh cutting material in its powdered form. Similarly, disks of wood are used, and to coat the edge of one with glue, and while that is yet soft to press emery into it by rolling the disk in some powder, is an expedient for quickly obtaining a substitute for a grindstone, and it answers its purpose for a time.

The natural grindstone is, however, the one which generally does duty in the mechanics' workshop. Small stones are sometimes used on a spindle and driven between the lathe centers, but this is a practice to be most emphatically condemned. A treadle motion is much preferable to a crank handle, as this necessitates the services of two persons to grind nearly everything. Even the most simple tool requires, as a rule, the use of both hands to guide it on the stone, but when it is attempted to turn the crank handle with one hand and hold the tool with the other, owing to the motion of the body, in all but very small stones, the tool can not be held still, and unsatisfactory results must be obtained. The speed at which grindstones are driven in some cases amounts to a surface velocity of three or four miles per minute, but to attain such a speed it is, of course, necessary to employ multiplying gear and steam power. For ordinary tool grinding sufficient speed is got by turning a two-foot stone as fast as convenient by a foot treadle, but when a hand crank is used the stone goes far too slow, and the remnants of a worn-out grindstone only a foot or so in diameter, sometimes to be seen in use turned with a handle of that radius, are quite unfit for any useful purpose. By putting a flywheel on the spindle and driving at a good speed such a stone might be of some use, but the trouble it would involve is not worth the saving in a new stone. The first cost of a grindstone is but a trifling consideration when the long time it will last and the amount of work that it will do are reckoned, and thus it is well to select as good a stone as can be got, as the extra cost, if any, will be amply repaid in the time saved in producing a like, and generally a better, effect with the superior stone.—The National Builder.

The Pantry as an Adjunct to the Kitchen.

In planning a home too much care cannot be given to the pantry, for here it is many unnecessary steps may be taken, many false movements made, if the place is not convenient in every detail. In most homes it is here the baking is prepared, for unless it is possible to prepare many dishes on a broad shelf in the pantry, it means that all the ingredients used must be carried from the pantry out into the kitchen to the table, and back again into the pantry when the cooking is finished.

In a most convenient pantry there is a broad shelf, sufficiently large to hold a wide bake board, this shelf being at right angles with the shelves on which the supplies are placed, and it is possible to stand in one place while preparing a baking, and, at the most, take but a step or two to the farthest end of the shelves. In front of this shelf is a large window which gives perfect light with which to work, without straining the eyes, says a writer in a recent issue of the Housekeeper. All up and down the sides of this window small brass hooks are fastened into the wood work, and on each of these hooks is placed one utensil used in cookery. When one is at work it is possible to lift any one article without disturbing the rest, and as each article is always kept on its own screw it becomes almost a mechanical movement to reach for any article that is needed.

On the wall, at the right hand side of the bake board, is a knife rack, and all around the wood work of the door, as well as on the back of the door, more brass screws are fastened, and on these sauce pans, baking pans and larger utensils are hung, each one on a hook by itself.

The worker in this kitchen believes in saving work as much as possible, so papers are kept at hand all the time to use in various ways, and on the upper part of the pantry door is fastened a receptacle for the papers. It is very simple in construction. An oblong piece of denim is turned in on all the edges, a selvage edge being used for the top of the bag. The denim is then laid against the back of a door and tacked into place with large headed tacks. Another line of tacks down the middle divides it into two compartments, and in one side newspapers are kept, while in the other are kept paper bags of all sizes and pieces of clean white wrapping paper. The linings of all cracker and cake boxes are saved, for these may be used underneath a flat iron, as a lining for cake tins and for wrapping the various parts of a luncheon, so that one article of food will not be contaminated by the rest. There are many other uses to which these box linings may be put.

A large bake board is a home made affair, and is most convenient, since it is sufficiently large to hold all cups, bowls, and even a pan placed on the edge, so that everything is kept on the board and the shelf or table underneath is not soiled.

This bake board is made of a single piece of board 19 x 20 inches—white pine. A long cleat was placed across the back, making a kind of ledge, which holds the utensils on the board, preventing them from falling off. Two shorter cleats were nailed to the sides, and these cleats slope down toward the front edge of the board, where they end almost even with it.

A splendid idea for pantry shelves is to use two coats of white paint—ordinary paint—and then a third, finishing coat, of white enamel. Wash the shelves with cold water as soon as the enamel dries, and then it will harden quickly. Over this place no oil cloth nor papers, but leave the shelves bare and notice the improvement; since there are no covers under which crumbs can collect, there is no encouragement for mice, the enamel is easily wiped off with a damp cloth, and with such a finish it is never necessary to clean the entire pantry at once—it keeps clean all the time.—Carpentry and Building.

Roof Drafting and Framing.

Editor CARPENTER:

I once more beg for another space in our valuable journal for a small portion of craft on roof drafting and framing, which I believe will be of great benefit to many brothers. Also allow me to say that I shall gladly and gratuitously give further information on the subject or on framing of trusses or arches and all other framing that would be necessary to become a good framer. Brothers desiring such information may communicate, stating number and locality of local union, enclosing postage for reply, with

ROOF DRAFTING AND FRAMING.

First take your span or run as per D. B. in Fig. 1. Then your size as per D. C., and draw line as per C. D., which will be your common rafter. Then square up your run as per D. C., and draw line as per E. C., which will be your hip-rafter. Then space off on the supporting walls without planking. Says The Technical World, in a descriptive article on the subject:

In Fig. 2 is shown another method for the framing of hips, valleys, of two or more pitches. Here you will find three pitches with a run of 10 feet, 7 feet and 6 feet. This first run being your shortest span. Then add to it the difference of it and your next greater run, as per A. D. in Fig. 1, making A. B. your second run. Then draw down your common as per A. C., then your run A. F. parallel to A. C. equal to A. B. Draw your hip line, F. C., and take the length of each of the hips, which in this draft is 31 feet 3 inches and 23 feet 6 inches, subtract the short one from the long one, then take half the remainder and measure it off on the long one as per F. G. From G. to C. will be the length of your hip which will intersect with the two pitches. All cuts can be obtained from this draft.

Floor Beams Made of Concrete.

A new system of concrete flooring has recently been patented by M. Siegwart, an architect of Lucerne, Switzerland. It consists of hollow tubes or beams of mortar which are laid on in a factory are protected against unfavorable weather conditions, such as frost or rain, during the time the mortar is setting, and it is thus comparatively easy to secure uniformity. The beams made at Lucerne have a uniform breadth of 9.84 inches, and are manufactured in five sizes, . . . according to the length of span and load. The size of the iron rods in the beams is between 1.96 and 3.9 inches, and usually six such rods are used in each beam. Two of these rods are laid parallel with the under face of the beam, and the other four are bent upward in the form of a knot at the ends in order to strengthen their supporting power. The proportion of cement to coarse sand used in manufacture is as 1 to 4. The beams, being made hollow, have the same strength as though they were solid, with a great reduction in weight. On account of being hollow, they are more easily heated. Their sides are corrugated so that the cement used in joining them can enter the spaces and form a solid mass.

"The manner of laying the beams together is exactly the same as in the case of wooden beams. They are made in different lengths, and, besides being used in floors, they can be employed in the construction of roofs, terraces, and staircase supports; also in walls where there is a side pressure, as in warehouses, coal bunkers, etc. It has been demonstrated that these beams can support a load four or five times as great as can the ordinary wooden beams.

"The process of manufacture is very simple as carried on at the Siegwart Beam Factory at Lucerne and in other European centers. The beams are made not singly, but in layers eight feet in breadth."

The advantages of this flooring are said to be its great supporting power, its safety from fire, and the greater ease and speed in building secured by its use. The beams insure freedom from excess of heat and cold, on account of their hollow form; the requisite thickness of floors is reduced; and finally they can be used as a heating floor by sending warm air through them.—The Literary Digest.

Short-Sighted Unionists.

We find some men with union cards in their pockets who would vote against an assessment of five cents if they thought the same would save some struggling local from destruction. They think every cent they give to the local, either in dues or assessments, is spent by the international officers riding in parlor cars or drinking champagne, but they never kick about what they "throw away" on whiskey, cards, dice and cigarettes, from which they get no benefit in their pay envelopes. They also like to tell the "ladies" what good union men they are.—Trades Union Advocate.

When blacking has become hard in the cake through long keeping, if a little water is poured over it and placed in a warm oven for ten minutes it will mix quite easily.

There is no right, legal or moral, for which organized labor does not stand. There is no wrong that it will uphold or defend.

Good of the Order.

Now, let us suppose every worker is entitled to carry a card, That we haven't a scab nor a shirker, Every weakness we carefully guard. When we meet to improve our conditions, And to hear the "Love Messages" read, Shall we boast of our great acquisitions? Shall we think all our troubles are dead?

There's an old evil law, time-forgotten, Which established these property rights, Keeps workmen's eyes so bloodshot, They can never get well between fights. And the men who uphold them so strongly, Go struggling through life like fools; Be careful and don't teach them wrongly In these "Union Industrial Schools."

'Twill endanger our progress to dictate, For we might these great powers abuse, With our merciless Master once prostrate We must pardon and vengeance refuse; This would give us a dangerous advantage In this war to the death (that's the game); This system exists by an outrage! By a lie that was forged in God's name.

When we come to "the good of the order," Don't jump up and "move to adjourn;" 'Tis the promised land's beautiful border, That is just where there's good things to learn; Lay aside all your petty bad feelings, Be brotherly just at these times, Discuss these industrial stealings, Selfish motives, their causes and crimes.

No bodies that ever assemble Have labors more noble than ours; In fear we will make tyrants tremble, By temperately using our powers. Don't dash them to pieces like bottles, Don't drive our fair ship on the rocks, Let go of your fellow-men's throattles, Vote for peace in the next ballot box.

The mission of organized labor Is for Justice and a happier home; They'll never be got by the sabre— We've tried it all under God's dome. Talk of love in "the good of the order," Treat the mind to a bountiful feast, Each member is a keeper and warder, Let God's image from greed be released. —C. A. STRICKLAND.

Do good by stealth, and blush to find it fame.—Horace.

Consistency should be the first lesson learned by the trade unionist. Don't go about preaching labor organization with a scab hat on your head, sweatshop clothes on your back and a rat cigar between your teeth.—Cincinnati Chronicle.

Erhöhte Kopfsteuer oder Assessments.

Unter den Amendements zu unserer General-Constitution die gegenwärtig einer Urabstimmung zur Annahme oder Verwerfung vorliegen, ist abermals ein solches, welches die Einführung der monatlichen Kopfsteuer an die General-Offize, von 20 auf 25 Cents vorsieht. Ein dahingehendes Amendement wurde bekanntlich vor zwei Jahren auch von der Atlanta Convention vorgeschlagen, aber von der Urabstimmung verworfen. Es wird sich nun nach Ablauf weniger Wochen zeigen, ob dieses Amendement das Schicksal seines Vorläufers theilen, oder ob heute besseres Verständnis für die finanziellen Bedürfnisse unserer Organisation, und größere Opferwilligkeit unter unseren Mitgliedern vorhanden, und das Amendement zum Gesetze erhoben werden wird.

Zur Zeit wo unseren Mitgliedern diese Nummer des Journals zugehen wird, werden die Würfel in dieser Angelegenheit schon gefallen sein; es kann mithin nicht unsere Absicht sein die Stimmenabgabe unserer Mitglieder deutscher Zunge, zu Gunsten des Amendements oder dagegen, zu beeinflussen. Geringes aber können wir nicht früh genug darauf hinweisen, daß, sollte die Erhöhung der Kopfsteuer auch diesmal verworfen werden, wir durch diese Handlungsweise der Majorität unserer Mitgliedschaft, wie man zu sagen pflegt: nur aus dem Regen in die Traufe gekommen wären.

Die im Laufe des letzten Finanz-Jahres im Journal veröffentlichten Finanzberichte und die Berichte unserer General-Beamten an die Milwaukee-Convention, sollten es doch allen Mitgliedern klar gemacht haben, daß die General-Kasse den heute an sie gestellten Anforderungen, bei einer Kopfsteuer von 20 Cents monatlich, nicht mehr gewachsen ist. Die Frage der Kopfsteuer-Erhöhung muß eben heute so aufgestellt werden, daß wir entweder regelmäßig, monatlich einen erhöhten Beitrag zur General-Kasse leisten, oder uns auf ein oder mehrere Assessments gefaßt machen müssen, um unseren Verpflichtungen bei Ausständen, „Dockouts“, Sterbefällen und Unfällen, fernerhin nachkommen zu können. Zu einem von Beiden wird es unvermeidlich kommen müssen, und daß von diesen beiden, sogenannten Uebeln, die Erhebung von Assessments das größere ist, hat uns die Erfahrung gelehrt. Warten wir es nun ab, ob unsere Mitgliedschaft das größere oder das kleinere Uebel wählen wird. Was auch immer das Resultat der Urabstimmung bezüglich erwähnten Amendements sein wird, wer nur ein wenig Umschau hält in anderen Gewerksvereinen, Unterstützungs- und Versicherungs-Gesellschaften; wer deren Beiträge und Benefits mit den unsrigen vergleicht, muß unbedingt zu dem Schluß kommen, daß unsere Beiträge zu niedrig oder unsere Benefits zu hoch gegriffen sind.

Wenn wir mit unseren finanziellen Mitteln bisher auskommen konnten, so lag dies daran, daß unsere Organisation und unsere Mitglieder verhältnismäßig noch jung waren. Beide werden aber immer älter an Jahren, die Sterblichkeit unter uns wird immer größer, und damit die Forderungen für Sterbe-Benefit immer zahlreicher, und es müssen unter allen Umständen Maßregeln getroffen werden, die zu einer Vergrößerung der Einnahmen der General-Offize führen, damit diese mit den vermehrten Ausgaben Schritt halten können.

Ein anderer Umstand der bei der Erörterung der Kopfsteuerfrage schwer in's Gewicht fällt, ist der Versuch des organisierten Unternehmertums den sogenannten „offenen Shop“ einzuführen, und womöglich unsere Organisation zu vernichten, wodurch wir schon verschiedentlich in „Dockouts“ und Ausstände verwickelt wurden, die der General-Kasse außergewöhnlich große Opfer auferlegten. Wenn wir die Vergewaltigungen des organisierten Unternehmertums nicht über uns ergehen lassen wollen, so ist es die höchste Zeit daß wir die Munition beschaffen, die nötig ist um die uns noch bevorstehenden Kämpfe siegreich ausfechten zu können. Darum also, wann nicht höhere Kopfsteuer, dann Assessments!

Arbitrations-Regeln

—der—

Structural Building Trades Alliance von America.

Im Interesse unserer deutschredenden Mitglieder veröffentlichen wir nachstehend den, vom Board of Governors der Structural Building Trades Alliance, in dessen vom 10ten bis 13ten Oktober abgehaltenen Sitzung angenommenen Arbitrationsplan in deutscher Uebersetzung. Ein vollständiger Bericht über die Verhandlungen erwähneter Sitzung erscheint im englischen Theile dieser Ausgabe.

Arbitrationsplan.

In jeder Lokalität, in welcher die Structural Building Trades Alliance Controlle über verschiedene Baugewerke ausübt, sollen die mit der Alliance affiliirten Gewerke mit ihren Arbeitgebern einen Vertrag eingehen, welcher sich auf einen gewissen spezifizirten Zeitraum erstrecken soll.

1. Sollten zwischen den Vertragsparteien, bezüglich der Vertragsbestimmungen, zu irgend einer Zeit Streitigkeiten entstehen, so soll die Streitfrage einem gemeinschaftlichen Arbitrations-Board unterbreitet werden, welches in nachfolgender Weise gebildet und aufrecht erhalten werden soll:

2. Jedes, unter der Jurisdiktion der Alliance stehende Gewerk und jede Association von Arbeitgebern jedes dieser Gewerke, sollen jährlich ein Mitglied zu dem Gemeinschaftlichen Arbitrations-Board ernennen.

3. Die so Ernannten sollen das Gemeinschaftliche Arbitrations-Board bilden, dem alle vorkommenden Streitfragen und Beschwerden, die von gewöhnlichen Vertretern der betreffenden Gewerke nicht geschlichtet werden können, unterbreitet werden sollen.

4. Wenn ein Versuch dieser Vertreter, diese Streitfrage zu schlichten gescheitert ist, so sollen die betreffenden Vertragsparteien sofort den Gemeinschaftlichen Arbitrations-Board hiervon in Kenntniß setzen, welcher hierauf sofort zusammentreten, eine Untersuchung des Falles einleiten, und eine Entscheidung treffen soll.

5. Während eine solche Streitfrage dem Gemeinschaftlichen Arbitrations-Board zur Entscheidung vorliegt, soll keine Einstellung der Arbeit stattfinden; vorausgesetzt, daß dieses Komite nicht später als achtundvierzig Stunden, nach Entscheidung der Streitigkeiten, zur Sitzung zusammentritt.

6. Es wird hiermit ausdrücklich erklärt, daß mit der Schaffung eines Gemeinschaftlichen Arbitrations-Board, letzterer ermächtigt ist, auf das Eingehen eines Vertrages zwischen den Arbeitgebern der interessirten Gewerke und den Arbeitgeber-Vereinigungen, zu bestehen, und daß nachdem ein Vertrag eingegangen wurde, dessen Bestimmungen eingehalten werden müssen. Und im Falle der Verletzung eines Gewerkes, oder Gewerke, einen Vertrag zu Stande zu bringen gescheitert ist, soll es ausdrücklich verstanden sein, daß es innerhalb der Machtbefugnisse des Gemeinschaftlichen Arbitrations-Boards liegt, einen Vertrag auszuarbeiten, wie es nach bestem Ermessen des Board den Bedürfnissen der beteiligten Gewerke entspricht; und dieser Vertrag soll als die gesetzliche Grundlage des Gemeinschaftlichen Arbitrations-Board erklärt, und von den interessirten Parteien anerkannt und ebenso gewissenhaft befolgt werden, als wenn obiger von letzteren selbst ausgearbeitet und angenommen worden wäre.

7. Sollte zu irgend einer Zeit bei der Abstimmung und Entscheidung des Gemeinschaftlichen Arbitrations-Boards, über eine Streitfrage, Stimmengleichheit herrschen, oder dessen Versuche eine Streitigkeit zu schlichten erfolglos sein, so soll das Board einen Schiedsrichter ernennen, unter Bedingungen die es selbst bestimmen mag, und die Entscheidung dieses Schiedsrichters soll dann endgültig und rechtskräftig sein.

8. Wenn sich eine, an einer Streitfrage beteiligte Partei weigert, die Entscheidung des Gemeinschaftlichen Arbitrations-Board anzuerkennen oder dieselbe nicht befolgt, so soll dieselbe in eine Strafe verfallen, die das Board bestimmen mag.

9. Sollte sich eine Lokal-Union weigern eine Entscheidung des Board anzuerkennen oder zu befolgen, oder die ihr auferlegte Strafe zu tragen, so soll die Internationale Union des betreffenden Gewerkes, diese hartnäckige Lokal-Union suspendiren oder einem anderweitigen Disziplinar Verfahren unterziehen.

10. Sollte sich ein Arbeitgeber weigern eine Entscheidung des Board anzuerkennen oder zu befolgen, oder die ihm auferlegte Strafe zu tragen, so soll das betreffende Gewerk das Recht haben solche Maßregeln zu ergreifen, als es bestimmen mag.

Unterstützung arbeitsloser Mitglieder in New York.

In New York, wo bekanntlich ein Theil unserer Mitglieder und andere Baugewerksarbeiter seit dem 8. August ausgesperrt sind, erheben einige unserer Lokal-Unions von den beschäftigten Mitgliedern eine wöchentliche Tage, deren Ertrag der Unterstützung arbeitsloser Mitglieder gewidmet ist. Unter arbeitslosen Mitgliedern sind hier nicht die ausgesperrten, sondern solche Mitglieder zu verstehen, die vor oder während der Aussperrung ihrer Beschäftigung verlustig gingen, die also auf Dockout-Unterstützung keinen Anspruch machen können, denen es aber begreiflicherweise unter obwaltenden Umständen schwer hält Arbeit zu erlangen. Mit deren Unterstützung liefern die hier in Rede stehenden Lokal-Unions den Beweis daß, obgleich die in Arbeit stehenden Mitglieder seitens des District-Councils um $1.00 die Woche besteuert werden, dieselben nun während einem Zeitraum von mehr denn drei Monaten, auch zur Leistung eines wöchentlichen Beitrages von 50 Cents im Interesse der Arbeitslosen herangezogen werden konnten.

In der Betrachtung dieses Falles wirft sich uns unwillkürlich die Frage auf: Warum können arbeitslose Mitglieder nicht auch in Friedenszeiten unterstützt werden, wo deren Zahl doch eine viel geringere ist und eine bedeutend niedrigere Besteuerung der Beschäftigten genügen würde? Auf diese Frage könnte man uns erwidern, daß es sich im New Yorker Dockout um eine Sache handle bei der die Interessen sämtlicher Mitglieder auf dem Spiele stehen und die beschäftigten Mitglieder, dem einfachen Gebote der Selbsterhaltung folgend, eine derartige Besteuerung über sich ergehen ließen. Gegen diese Logik haben wir nichts einzuwenden, denn man kann von Arbeitern nicht verlangen, daß sie Wochen oder Monate lang im Interesse der Gesamtheit feiern, ohne ihnen wenigstens die nothwendigsten Mittel zur Fristung ihres Lebensunterhaltes zu liefern. Diejenigen, die vielleicht in der Lage wären eine so ausge dehnte Verdienstlosigkeit auszuhalten, würden, wie uns die Erfahrung gelehrt hat, die Ersten sein die sich als Streikbrecher anbieten würden, wenn ihnen keine Unterstützung zuflöße.

Aber, müssen wir weiter fragen, haben die Beschäftigten nicht auch unter normalen Verhältnissen und fortwährend die Konkurrenz der Arbeitslosen zu befürchten? Und liegt es nicht im Interesse der Beschäftigten auch unter normalen Umständen dieser Konkurrenzgefahr entgegen zu wirken?

Wir wollen hier von einer eingehenden Besprechung der Frage Abstand nehmen, denn wir sind uns wohl bewußt, daß die Unterstützung arbeitsloser Mitglieder, oder ein Arbeitslosen-Benefit, nur in einer Organisation möglich ist, deren Mitglieder von einem außergewöhnlichen Geiste der Brüderlichkeit und Opferwilligkeit beseelt sind, zu dem sich unsere Brüderchaft noch nicht herauschwingen konnte. Da es aber in diesem Lande besonders die fortschrittlich gesinnten Arbeiter sind, die die Einführung der Arbeitslosen-Unterstützung bekämpfen, wollen wir eines Ereignisses, welches sich kürzlich in deutschen Parteifreien abgespielt hat, Erwähnung thun, aus welchem ersichtlich ist daß man in der deutschen social-demokratischen Partei sowohl wie in den deutschen Gewerkschaften, die ersterer bekanntlich sehr nahe stehen, anderen Ansichten huldigt.

Auf dem Internationalen Sozialisten-Congreß in Amsterdam referirte Abgeordneter Mollenbuhr über „Social-Politik und Arbeitsversicherung“, welches Referat kürzlich zu einer Polemik in der deutschen Parteipresse führte. Mollenbuhr befürwortete nemlich die Einführung der Arbeitslosenversicherung, (Unterstützung der Arbeitslosen) von Staatswegen; also, so weit dies Deutschland betrifft, die Anreicherung dieser Institution an die schon bestehenden staatlichen Kranken- und Invaliden-Versicherungen, zu denen der Staat, Arbeiter und Arbeitgeber, zur Beitragsleistung heranzieht. Während nun das „Hamburger Echo“ den Standpunkt Mollenbuhrs vertritt, warnt die „Leipziger Volkszeitung“ gegen eine Arbeitslosenversicherung unter staatlicher Controlle, weil diese, wie das Blatt ausführt, der Gewerkschaftsbewegung das Wasser abgraben und sie überflüssig machen könnte.

Die Diskussion über diese Frage und die Gründe für und wider, sind sehr interessant, doch würde uns eine Wiedergabe derselben zu weit führen. Es genügt uns zu konstatiren, daß man auf beiden Seiten den Werth und die Nothwendigkeit einer Arbeitslosen-Unterstützung vollständig anerkennt, wie nachfolgendes Citat aus Nr. 203 des „Hamburger Echo“ zeigt:

„Ist es möglich dem Arbeitslosen irgend eine Hilfe zukommen zu lassen, dann ist es ein Gewinn, sowohl vom rein menschlichen als auch vom politischen Standpunkte. Wir haben nicht erst nöthig nachzuweisen, daß Subsistenzlosigkeit, keit den Arbeiter körperlich und moralisch vernichtet. Aber auch vom Standpunkte des Klassenkampfes muß man wünschen, daß dem Arbeitslosen Hilfe gebracht wird. Mancher Streikbrecher wäre von dem verräterischen und selbstmörderischen Treiben zurückgehalten worden, wenn er nicht durch die Noth soweit heruntergebracht gewesen wäre, daß er jeden moralischen Halt verloren hätte. Die Noth unter der Arbeitslosigkeit, ist der schlimmste Feind der Arbeiter. Das haben auch die Gewerkschaften erkannt und sind diese immer mehr bemüht, der Noth entgegenzuarbeiten."

Soweit das deutsche Parteiblatt. Auch in diesem Lande hat die Idee der Unterstützung Arbeitsloser Boden gefaßt und sind Erfolge in dieser Richtung aufzuweisen. Die Amalgamated Society of Carpenters, die deutsche Typographia, die Internationale Cigarrenmacher-Union haben das Arbeitslosen-Benefit längst eingeführt und verdanken dieser Institution zum großen Theile ihren inneren Halt und ihre Kampffähigkeit. Was letztere Organisation betrifft, so machte sich unter deren fortschrittlich gesinnten Mitgliedern Ende der achtziger und Anfangs der neunziger Jahre eine große Opposition gegen dieses Benefit geltend. Diese Opposition ist in dessen längst verstummt, weil sich letzteres unter den Cigarrenmacher bewährt hat. Es läge im Interesse unserer Bruderschaft und im Interesse der Mitglieder, wenn auch sie der Frage der Unterstützung Arbeitsloser etwas näher treten wollten Sehr wichtig.

Es ist eine unerfreuliche Thatsache, daß besonders unter unseren deutschredenden Lokal-Unions und Mitgliedern über die Bedingungen die bei Forderungen für Sterbe- oder Unfall-Benefit erfüllt sein müssen, oder zu erfüllen sind, große Unklarheit herrscht und dadurch häufig Verzögerungen in der Auszahlungen der Benefits entstehen und sogar Abweisung der Forderungen erfolgt. Wir wollen daher versuchen über diese Bedingungen etwas mehr Licht zu verbreiten.

Vor allem müssen wir darauf aufmerksam machen, daß die scheinbar, unter unseren Mitgliedern deutscher Zunge, allgemein geltende Ansicht, daß ihre Benefitberechtigungen nicht angezweifelt werden könne, so lange sie zu keiner Zeit mehr denn drei Monate mit ihren Beiträgen im Rückstande waren, eine irrige ist.

Die Mitgliedskarte, die einen Zeitraum von zwei Jahren deckt, mag wohl nachweisen, daß zum Beispiel die Beiträge für den Monat Januar, im darauf folgenden Monat März und die Beiträge aller folgenden Monate, während dem dritten, diesen folgenden Monate entrichtet wurden. Was aber die Karte, wenn die Zahlungen so wie hier angeführt, gemacht wurden, nicht nachweist, ist, daß Sect. 89 (a) unserer General-Constitution, auf den Inhaber nie zur Anwendung kam, oder wenn dies der Fall, daß diese Section befolgt wurde. Diese Section, die wir zu besserem Verständnis unserer Erläuterungen hier anführen wollen, lautet folgendermaßen:

Sect. 89 (a). Wenn ein Mitglied eine Summe schuldet, welche dem Betrage von drei Monats-Beiträgen gleichkommt, ist es nicht mehr guttühend und von allen Benefits in der Zwischenzeit suspendirt, und kommt nicht eher wieder in's Benefit, als drei Monate nach der Bezahlung aller Rückstände.

Obige Section sagt klar und deutlich, daß ein Mitglied, welches mehr denn drei Monatsbeiträge schuldet, alle seine Rückstände begleichen, und nachdem dies geschehen, drei weitere Monate lang keinen Anspruch auf Benefit erheben kann.

Wie sollen nun aber die General-Beamten feststellen können ob Sect. 89 (a) jemals auf den Inhaber einer Karte anwendbar war, oder wo dies der Fall, ob sämtliche Rückstände beglichen wurden, wenn die zweijährige Mitgliedskarte keine einzige Zahlung up-to-date, das heißt keine einzige Vorauszahlung nachweist? Wenn sie nicht nachweist daß während dem Zeitraume, auf den sich die Karte erstreckt, ein einziger Beitrag, während dem Laufe des Monats für welchen der Beitrag bestimmt ist, entrichtet wurde?

Dies ist unter diesen Umständen den General-Beamten einfach unmöglich. Sie müssen aber, ehe sie eine Forderung für Benefit anerkennen, die Versicherung haben, daß das Mitglied in dessen Interesse eine Lokal-Union eine Forderung einreicht, allen seinen Verpflichtungen gegenüber unserer Bruderschaft nachgekommen ist. Sie müssen schon deshalb bezüglich der in Sect. 89 (a) enthaltenen Bestimmungen strikt verfahren, weil es häufig vorkommt, daß ungeleglicher Weise gewöhnlich um einem Mitgliede zu einer Arbeitskarte zu verhelfen, Theilzahlungen seitens eines rückständigen Mitgliedes entgegen genommen werden. Daß ferner ein Mitglied auch späterhin nur Theilzahlungen macht, dem Bestimmungen der Sect. 89 (a) nicht voll und ganz nachkommt, und somit fortwährend außer Benefit bleibt.

Die Lokal-Unions sollten es sich zur Aufgabe machen ihren Mitgliedern begreiflich zu machen, daß unsere Beiträge, für jeden Monat im Voraus, oder doch vor Ablauf desselben zahlbar sind. Wenn eine Mitgliedskarte keinen Rückstand und nur eine einzige Voraus- (up-to-date) Zahlung nachweist, so werden bei Forderungen für Benefit keine Verzögerungen entstehen, vorausgesetzt natürlich daß die Forderung anderweitig berechtigt ist.

Weist aber eine Mitgliedskarte eine solche Vorauszahlung nicht auf, so muß der Finanz-Sekretär bei der Einreichung einer Forderung, die verjährte Mitglieds-Karte oder Karten einsehen und wenn er um eine Voll-Beitragszahlung des betreffenden Mitgliedes nachweisen, bis zur Zeit dessen Aufnahme zurückgreifen muß.

Sollte die verjährte Mitglieds-Karte oder Karten nicht zur Hand sein, wie es zuweilen vorkommt, so muß der Finanz-Sekretär eine genaue Abschrift des Zahlungskonto's des betreffenden Mitgliedes aus dem Ledger, mit der Forderung, der General-Offize zu senden.

Dies sind jedoch Scheerereien die dem Finanz-Sekretär erspart bleiben sollten und erspart werden können, durch eine nur einmalige Beitrags-Vorausbezahlung während des Zeitraumes auf den sich die Mitgliedskarte erstreckt.

Die Situation in New York.

Der „Lockout“ in New York, der am 8ten August von den Vereinigten Bau-Unternehmern über die Baugewerksarbeiter verhängt wurde, ist noch im vollen Gange und das Ende desselben nicht abzusehen. Die Unternehmer weigern sich beharrlich auf Unterhandlungen mit den Arbeitern einzugehen und haben aus Nicht-Union-leuten und anderen ähnlichen Elementen, sogenannte „unabhängige Unions“ gegründet bei denen die Unterzeichnung des von den Arbeitgebern verfaßten Ver-trages eine Vorbedingung zur Aufnahme ist.

Da sich aber die ausgeschlossenen Unions ebenso beharrlich weigern diesen, den Bauunternehmern günstigen, aber den Interessen der Arbeiter zuwiderlaufenden Vertrag noch fernerhin anzuerkennen, so steht zu erwarten, daß dieser Kampf noch während des ganzen Winters andauern und vielleicht erst nächstes Frühjahr seinen Abschluß finden wird.

Daß es bei einem Kampfe von solcher Ausdehnung auch Fahrenflüchtige gibt, ist wohl zu bedauern aber erklärlich, trotzdem ist deren Zahl bis jetzt nicht genügend gewesen um die Bauunternehmer in die Lage zu setzen ihren Contracten nachzukommen und an vielen Bauten ist daher die Arbeit vollständig lahm gelegt.

Doch auch auf Seiten der Bosse ist Bresche gemacht worden. Ferdinand Schättler, der bisherige Sekretär der Cabinetmaker-Bossen Association und eine der bedeutendsten Firmen dieses Faches, hat sich von der Association und von der Bau-Unternehmer-Vereinigung losgesagt, mit dem New Yorker District-Council Frieden geschlossen und dessen Arbeiter, 70 an der Zahl haben die Arbeit wieder aufgenommen.

Theodor Starrett, ein Bau-Unternehmer und Mitglied der Bossen-Vereinigung hat kürzlich in einem in dem „Real Estate Record and Building Guide“ veröffentlichten Artikel die Arbeitgeber als den schuldigen Theil in den Bauwirren New Yorks hingestellt und ihre Taktik als eine verwerfliche bezeichnet. In diesem Artikel in dem er die Situation eingehend bespricht, sagt Starrett;

„Es kann wirklich nur den Handwerkern zum Guten angerechnet werden, daß sie sich weigern, einen Vertrag zu unterzeichnen, der ihre individuelle Freiheit einschränkt. Die Wirren haben jetzt nichts mehr mit den Delegaten zu thun, mit denen die Arbeitgeber immer so fein ausgekommen sind. Nur das individuelle Mitglied kann jetzt eine Aenderung in die Sachlage bringen. Sie sind freie Männer und das involvirte Princip ist solcher Natur, daß sie, wenn sie auch nur einen Funken von Selbstachtung haben, nicht nachgeben können.“

Auch unter den Plasterern haben einige bedeutende Arbeitgeber ihrer Vereinigung den Rücken gekehrt; andere Arbeitgeber stehen in Folge des Ausstandes am Rande des Bankrotts und werden über kurz oder lang dem Beispiele Schättlers folgen oder ihr Geschäft aufgeben müssen.

Die Cabinetmaker-Bossen Association hat natürlich Alles aufgeboten den Friedensschluß Schättlers rückgängig zu machen und denselben zu Raisson zu bringen. So hat ihm das Executiv-Comite der Association einen Befehl zugestellt, welcher ihn anweist, unsere von ihm beschäftigten Mitglieder zu entlassen und nicht wieder einzustellen, widrigenfalls er, Schättler, einer Disziplinar-Strafe verfallen werde. Auf Grund dieses Befehles hat der New Yorker District-Council eine Klage wegen Verschwörung, gegen die Bossen-Association im Yorkville Polizeigerichte eingeleitet, die am 14ten Dezember zur Verhandlung kommen soll.

Von denn etwa 3000 Mitgliedern unserer Bruderschaft, die am 8ten August ausgeschlossen wurden, haben eine Anzahl bei unabhängigen Arbeitgebern Beschäftigung gefunden; andere haben die Stadt verlassen, so daß jetzt noch etwa 1500 Mitglieder ausgesperrt sind. Allem Anscheine nach ist es die Absicht des Arbeitgeber-Verbandes unserer Bruderschaft in New York den Garaus zu machen und es liegt jetzt an den Lokal-Unions außerhalb New Yorks Alles aufzubieten, um diesen teuflischen Plan der Bosse zu nichte zu machen. Dies können sie vollbringen, indem sie die nun beinahe vier Monate lang so heroisch kämpfenden Mitglieder in New York in liberaler Weise mit Geldbeiträgen unterstützen. Der von dem New Yorker District-Council an die Lokal-Unions ergangene Hülferuf hat die Genehmigung und Billigung des General-Executiv-Comites erhalten und sollte von keiner Lokal-Union unbeachtet gelassen werden.

Die New Yorker Mitglieder selbst, soweit sie in Arbeit stehen, haben durch „Lockout“-Assessments bis Ende November die Summe von $76,000.00 zur Unterstützung der Ausgesperrten aufgebracht und werden sich auch weiterhin einer Besteuerung unterziehen. Da aber der Winter nun hereingebrochen und die den Ausgesperrten verabsolgte übliche Unterstützungssumme absolut erhöht werden muß, ist es an der Zeit daß die Lokal-Unions des ganzen Landes unseren kämpfenden Brüdern in New York zu Hilfe eilen.

Ihr Kampf ist ein Kampf im Interesse unserer ganzen Bruderschaft und ihre Niederlage würde eine Niederlage unserer Gesamt-Organisation bedeuten. Möge daher ein jedes Mitglied ohne Verzug sein Schärfein zur siegreichen Beendigung dieses Kampfes beitragen.—Zugung nach New York ist fern zu halten!

Die organisirten Bauarbeiter Nord-Böhmens hielten am 9ten und 10ten Oktober ihre vierte Jahreskonferenz ab, die zahlreicher als die früheren besucht war und 36 Teilnehmer zählte. Wie das Agitations-Comite berichtete, hat sich die Zahl der Lokal-Vereine im Laufe des letzten Jahres verdreifacht, deren Zahl stieg von 342 im September 1903 auf 856 am 1ten September 1904. Im Gebiete der nordböhmischen Gruppe werden ungefähr 3250 Maurer und Zimmerer beschäftigt, so daß also nur der vierte Theil der für die Organisation zunächst in Betracht kommenden Bauarbeiter dem Verbands angehören.

Die Berliner Tischlermeister die schon seit einiger Zeit mit dem Plane umgehen, durch eine allgemeine Aussperrung ihrer Arbeiter, deren Organisation einen empfindlichen Hieb zu versetzen, haben im Laufe des Monats Oktober begonnen eine theilweise Aussperrung der Tischler vorzunehmen, die wie ein Beschluß der Fabrikanten besagt, langsam aber stetig zunehmen sollte, um dadurch die Kasse der Holzarbeiter-Verbandes, dem ihre Arbeiter angehören, zu schröpfen, und die Organisation zu schwächen. Um diese Taktik zu durchkreuzen, haben die Tischler der größten Fabriken die Arbeit eingestellt.

Den organisirten Zimmerleuten Deutschlands ist es trotz dem heftigen Widerstande der Arbeitgeber gelungen in 176 Bezirken Verträge zur Regelung der Arbeitsverhältnisse abzuschließen. Unter diesen Bezirken befinden sich Berlin mit Umgebung, Leipzig, Dönnitz, Pinneberg, Pirna, Potsdam und Tharandt. Von diesen Verträgen wurden 4 im Jahre 1900, 3 im Jahre 1901, 9 im Jahre 1902 und 38 im Jahre 1903 eingegangen und wieder erneuert. Die meisten Verträge enthalten genaue Bestimmungen über die Dauer der täglichen Arbeitszeit, über Stundenlohn, Lohnaufschläge für besondere Arbeiten, über den Tag der Lohnzahlung, Dauer des Vertrags und Kündigungsfrist. Unter den in den Verträgen stipulirten Lohnraten ist diejenige für Berlin, die höchste. Die meisten eingegangenen Verträge laufen in den Jahren 1905 oder 1906 ab; auch bleiben einzelne Verträge bis 1908 in Kraft.

L'Y UNION FRATERNELLE DES CHARPENTIER ET SES MEM- BRES DE NATIONALITEES ETRANGERS.

D'après les communications de plusieurs délégués à la convention de Milwaukee, il paraît que certain délégués de langue anglaise ont trouvé bon de protester contre les articles et rapports publiés en allemand et en français dans notre organ de métier.

C'est, je crois la première fois que dans une conventions du métier cette tentative à la "knownothingisme" c'est fait remarquer, et c'est avec plaisir que nous apprenons que la tentative a avorté complètement. Pourtant, la chose pourrait se renouveler et il est urgent de se prémunir d'arguments pour pouvoir y obvier! Puisque c'est devenu nécessaire, non seulement d'accepter ces étrangers (devenu citoyens ou non) dans nos rangs, que voir même nous leurs envoyons des organisateurs à la seul fin de les amener sous notre contrôle, il est fort naturel que nous les mettions en état de comprendre, et aussi de se faire comprendre à nous. L'Union fraternelle n'est pas une organisation nationale, ni de race, mais bien une corporation de métier. Du moment que ce fait est accepté nous devons faire notre possible, pour fortifier notre position, c'est à dire notre but doit être de contrôler tous les ouvriers de notre état, sans nous occuper ni de leur langue ni de leur nationalité.

Il fut un temps, pas encore très éloigné de notre époque, où les protestations les plus énergiques émanait précisément des mêmes gens qui aujourd'hui nous répètent à tout moment; "talk United States." Les étrangers furent rendu responsable de la baisse des salaires et du manque de réussite dans les entreprises d'organisations ouvrières. On les accusaient de travailler à bas prix, de prolonger les heures du travail et d'accepter toutes les conditions plus ou moins défavorable, octroyé par le patronat. Ce furent en premier les ouvriers de langue allemande qui ne se voyant pas acceptés dans les organisations existantes alors, ou avec beaucoup d'entraînement, formèrent des syndicats parmi les ouvrières de même langue et même métier. Plus tard les mêmes Allemands organisèrent les Scandinaviens plusieurs union de Français, et dans certains métiers même des Américains, tel que les ouvriers mouluriens et tappissiers, aussi que bon nombre d'autres.

S'il est d'une grande utilité pour les ouvriers que les capitalistes en générale, et les patrons en particulier, vivent en concurrence et s'entendent le moins que possible, il est au contraire très urgent pour la class ouvrière de bien s'entendre, c'est à dire d'accepter et d'appliquer à leur organisation la forme la plus apte à agglomérer ou fédérer le plus grand nombre possible d'ouvriers.

Aussi voyons nous de certains métiers s'organiser sous une forme internationale, en étendant leur action au delà des frontières de notre continent, tel que les débardeurs, les matelots, les verriers, etc. D'autres, comme que les travailleurs des mines, suivent cet exemple et le temps n'est pas loin où l'Union fraternelle des Charpentiers et Menuisiers devrât à son tour s'unir avec les camarades du métier d'outremer, en accordant leur admission dans notre union, aussi tôt arrivé aux Etats Unis ou au Canada, en reconnaissant leur carte de membre d'une bonne fide organisation de leur pays d'origine. Le fanatisme du "know nothing" est la cause de la perdition de bon nombre d'ouvriers qui ne sont devenu "scabs," que par le manque de fraternité que nos amis anglo-Américains ont démontrés à ces pauvres frères qui débarquant à nos côtes sans moyens d'existence sans apais et sans connaissance de notre pays, furent la proie facile de l'exploiteur en lutte avec l'organisation de ses ouvriers.

Comme nous voyons par ceci, que tout les ouvriers de n'importe quelle langue ou nationalité doivent être serrés dans nos rangs, nous leur devons également toute facilité pour leur faire bien comprendre nos principes, et pour les mettre bien au courant avec les faits et cause qui les y ont amenés. Non seulement l'esprit de justice nous commande cela, mais il est de l'intérêt essentiel de l'organisation en général de suivre ce cours. D'agir d'une manière contraire serait faire le jeu du patronat, qui a toujours profité du désaccord de la class ouvrière. ALPHONSE H. HENRYOT.

LE MOUVEMENT SYNDICAL EN FRANCE.

Le Congres de Bourges.

Comme je vous l'avait annoncé, en vous faisant parvenir la liste des questions portées à son ordre du jour, le quatorzième congrès de la confédération générale du travail s'est tenu à Bourges du 12 au 17 septembre. Il comptera parmi les plus importants de ceux tenus jusqu'ici par cette organisation, tant par le nombre des syndicats représentés que par l'ampleur qu'a revêtue la discussion des quelques questions qui purent venir en délibération. 400 délégués, représentant plus de 1,200 syndicats, avaient répondu à l'appel du comité confédéral.

Pour la première fois il était indispensable qu'un syndicat fut régulièrement confédéré pour pouvoir être représenté au congrès et cette qualité ne peut être acquise que par la double adhésion du syndicat à la Bourse du travail de sa localité et à sa Fédération d'industrie ou de métier. Cette double obligation compliqua à tel point l'oeuvre de la commission de vérification des mandats, qu'elle ne put donner communication au résultat de ses travaux que le mardi soir. La discussion de son rapport fut dès plus laborieuse, au point que le Congrès ne put être considéré comme normalement constitué, par la validation des mandats, que le mercredi après midi. Son installation avait donc demandé deux jours et demi sur les six consacrés au congrès. Il y eut là une perte de temps regrettable à tout les points de vue, et il y aura lieu, pour l'avenir, de prendre des mesures empêchant un pareil gaspillage des moments dont peuvent disposer les congressistes.

Deux tendances, nettement marquées, se font jour dans les milieux ouvriers français. L'une assigne au mouvement syndical une fin exclusivement révolutionnaire, avec, pour but, la transformation de la société, et, comme moyen d'action, une grève générale victorieuse réalisée en dehors de toutes préoccupations, de toutes attaches politiques, et c'est celle dont se réclament ceux qui sont à la tête de la confédération générale du travail. L'autre, que l'on a qualifiée improprement ou incomplètement de "réformiste," par opposition à la première sans borner son horizon, sans renoncer à l'espoir de voir instaurer une société mieux en harmonie avec les aspirations de chacun, n'a qu'une foi très limitée en l'efficacité d'un mouvement violent, d'une brusque transformation sociale qui risque de manquer de profondeur, et ne sera qu'éphémère si les cerveaux ne sont au préalable préparés à en tirer tous les profits et à en assurer le maintien. Ce serait une victoire piteuse que celle qui n'aurait pour résultat que de changer le nom et la qualité de nos maîtres. Par contre, l'échec d'un pareil mouvement serait désastreux et ramènerait fortement en arrière le prolétariat encore si imparfaitement organisé. Aussi ceux qui partagent cette manière de voir donnent-ils au mouvement syndical un but plus immédiat et, s'inspirant des exemples de l'étranger, travaillent-ils avec ardeur au développement méthodique des organisations à leur renforcement journalier, pour les faire concourir à une action constante contre le patronat dans le but d'améliorer des conditions de travail que tous s'accordent à trouver déplorable. Comme ceux qui appuient l'action révolutionnaire, ils pensent que le prolétariat doit faire ses affaires lui-même et en dehors de toute ingérence politicienne; mais ils n'en reconnaissent pas moins que certaines réformes, dont tous les ouvriers réclament les "bénéfices," ne peuvent découler que des décisions du Parlement et que, par conséquent, les ouvriers ont une action à exercer de ce côté. L'expérience a d'ailleurs démontré que, chaque fois qu'ils y ont été intéressés, ils n'y ont point failli.

Ceci dit, on comprendra mieux que des discussions ardentes, passionnées se soient déroulées sur le rapport du comité confédéral. A part quelques menus reproches sur sa gestion, sur la façon dont il a appliqué les statuts, c'est bien sur la tâche que même du Comité que la bataille c'est engagée. La critique la plus grave que lui fut faite et à laquelle à mon sens il n'a pas suffisamment répondu touchait à l'orientation donnée à la confédération non pas au point de vue économique, mais bien sur le terrain des idées. Le délégué des chemins de fer est venu protester contre l'immixtion du Comité confédéral dans la politique et réclamer vivement pour qu'il prohibe de son sein toute politique, même la politique libertaire. Mis aux voix, le rapport du comité confédéral en recueillit 825 contre 369; c'était pour lui un véritable succès, mais qui lui donnera certainement à réfléchir si l'on songe qu'au dernier congrès son rapport n'avait eu contre lui qu'une seule voix et qu'antérieurement il était voté à mains levées et à quasi unanimité. Mais cet engagement n'était que le prélude d'un autre beaucoup plus important et qui, lui là, fut de part et d'autre conduit avec méthode et précision. La question de la Représentation proportionnelle fut largement débattue et si les discours prononcés ne changèrent rien aux votes (la plupart des délégués ayant un mandat impératif) ils n'en est pas moins vrai que la discussion aura éclairé plus d'un côté de la question et que, rentré chez soi, chacun aura tout le loisir de peser les arguments fournis et de se faire en toute indépendance un jugement personnel. A ce point de vue, le Congrès aura été profitable à tous.

Cette proposition fut déjà repoussée aux deux précédents Congrès. En 1901 elle n'avait réuni que 26 voix. 74 mandats se prononcèrent en sa faveur en 1902. Les partisans déclarent que puisque les obligations financières sont proportionnelles au chiffre des adhérents, il est de toute justice—en écartant la question de représentation au Congrès—qu'il en soit de même pour la représentation au sein du Comité confédéral, chaque représentant de fédération ayant un nombre de voix, non pas strictement proportionnel à celui des syndiqués représentés, mais permettant tout au moins aux grandes organisations de n'être pas écrasées par les plus petits, une fédération de 100 membre (et il y en a) balancant et annulant par son vote celui d'une fédération de 12,000 membres! C'est le système actuel et contre lequel s'élèvent les partisans de la représentation proportionnelle. Les adversaires retournant l'argument objectent que son adoption aurait pour résultat la prédominance des grandes organisations sur les plus petits, ce qui ne serait aucunement démocratique, étant donné qu'une unité d'organisation en vaut une autre quel que soit le nombre de ses membres.

Ceux qui réclamaient la représentation proportionnelle eurent beau s'appuyer sur la manière dont on procède à l'étranger et montrer que le danger signalé était pour le moins illusoire, mais que par contre on s'exposait à de graves mécomptes en maintenant le mode actuel de représentation, puisqu'en cas de décision importante à prendre on courait le risque de voir un mouvement ordonné par une majorité de petits organisations et que ne suivrait pas l'immense majorité ouvrière représentée par la minorité composée des grandes organisations. Rien n'y fit. Le siège de chacun était fait, et, par 825 voix contre 379, la représentation proportionnelle fut repoussée.

Les partisans étaient auparavant fixés sur l'issue du débat, mais ils n'avaient pas escompté une minorité aussi imposante. C'est là pour eux le gage d'une victoire future et l'assurance qu'un avenir prochain verra fonctionner en France un système de représentation qu'a depuis longtemps fait ses preuves à l'étranger et que l'équité la plus élémentaire suffirait à recommander.

Ces deux votes émis, la suite de l'ordre du jour devait moins passionner le Congrès. Après la lecture du rapport de la commission chargé d'étudier la solution à donner à la journée de huit heures, le Congrès décida qu'une agitation vigoureuse commencerait aussitôt pour en amener la réalisation et qu'un mouvement général serait tenté le 1 mai 1906. On voulut bien, à cette occasion, citer les résultats obtenus à l'étranger, notamment en Amérique et, pour une fois, l'expérience tentée hors de France fut reconnue valable. A la cotisation obligatoire réclamée par la commission pour gager les frais de la campagne à entreprendre, le Congrès substitua les souscriptions volontaires jugées suffisantes. Comme dix-huit mois nous séparent encore de l'échéance fixée, j'aurai certainement l'occasion de vous parler encore de cette décision et des suites qui y seront données.

Relativement au label, un conflit avait surgi entre la confédération et la Fédération du Livre, celle-ci ayant émis la prétention de donner à son label la forme qui lui convenait, ne demandant au Comité confédéral que de le reconnaître purement et simplement. Ce dernier, par contre, voulut imposer à la Fédération du Livre l'obligation de faire figurer dans sa vignette l'insigne confédéral. Les deux parties ne pouvant s'entendre le cas fut renvoyé au Congrès de Bourges, lequel donna gain de cause au Comité confédéral contre la Fédération du Livre. C'est en fin de Congrès, et au milieu d'un véritable brouhaha que cette question, qui touchait à l'indépendance des organisations, fut discutée et tranchée. Il en fut de même pour la suite de l'ordre du jour, et c'est au bruit des conversations particulières et des allées et venues des uns et des autres que furent adoptés des vœux touchant l'extension de la juridiction prudhomale aux ouvriers qui n'en bénéficient pas encore aux accidents du travail, à l'application des décrets sur les adjudications, l'antimilitarisme, le marchandage, etc. Le sort désigna ensuite la ville d'Amiens comme siège du prochain congrès.

Ainsi prit fin le quatorzième congrès de la confédération. Il a permis de constater une fois de plus que le trop grand nombre de délégués est un véritable obstacle à la bonne marche des travaux, chacun d'eux caressant le secret désir de prendre la parole afin de voir son nom inscrit au procès verbal. Mais comme je l'ai dit au début il n'en aura pas moins une grande importance pour le prolétariat français.

L'exploitation effrénée de l'enfance, tant par sa répercussion désastreuse sur les prix de main d'œuvre que par la formation d'ouvriers imparfaits et par là même peu aptes à maintenir les salaires à leur niveau normal, fait un devoir aux syndicats de surveiller avec un soin jaloux tout ce qui touche à l'apprentissage.

CARPENTERS' AND BUILDERS' STANDARD LIBRARY

By FRED T. HODGSON

Each volume a veritable gold mine of up-to-date information for the architect, contractor, carpenter, mechanic and apprentice, or any one who would work with wood. These volumes have been issued since September, 1902, and must not be mistaken for Mr. Hodgson's former works, which were published some twenty years ago.

This series of Fred. T. Hodgson's new works are today the approved and most helpful set of practical builders' "educators" published. They have been tried and found by architects, contractors, carpenters and builders to be efficient "aids" for advancement and thoroughly reliable for daily consultation as books of reference, covering as they do thousands of self-help points necessary for all workers of wood.

The books are positively up-to-date and we most heartily recommend them to every one as the most valuable series of books for self-instruction published in the world on the subject treated. All volumes or complete sets will be sent, all charges paid upon receipt of prices. We do not ship C. O. D.

MR. FRED T. HODGSON'S NEW BOOK BUILDERS' ARCHITECTURAL DRAWING, SELF TAUGHT

This work is especially designed for carpenters and architects and other woodworkers who desire to learn drawing at home, and who have not the means, time or opportunity for taking a regular course in school or college, or availing themselves of the offers made by one or other of the "Correspondence Schools."

The work commences with a description of drawing instruments and accessories, with rules for using them, and hints as to their care and management. Rules for laying out simple drawings and executing same, are given, and the student is taught, step by step, to draw to scale, first the plans, next the elevations, and finally the details of a cottage, including foundations, walls, doors, windows, stairs, and all other items required for finishing a small building complete in every particular.

A chapter and a number of plates are devoted to a more elaborate work, and the student is shown by a series of easy lessons in simple language, how to make more elaborate drawings. Theory is not considered in the work, nor is perspective or shading, as the author has endeavored to make the work a purely practical one for practical workmen. Nearly all the examples given are drawn to scale and may be followed as they are given, or may be enlarged or reduced at the will of the student. As an Architectural Drawing Book for real practical workmen, who intend making draftsmen of themselves by their own efforts, this book has no equal.

This valuable work contains over 300 pages printed from new, large type, on a superior quality of cream wove paper. Over 300 fine line engravings made especially for the work, each drawn to scale; 18 large double folding plates with full explanation for each. Durable bound in either fine silk cloth or half leather. The Financial Secretary of your Local has a copy of "Builders' Architectural Drawing," and he will be pleased to show it to you at any time.

EVERY CARPENTER

Should be a reader of

The National Builder

FRED T. HODGSON, EDITOR

Mr. Hodgson's books are good, as you know. So is the National Builder, of which he is editor. The National Builder is a large sized paper of fifty-two pages which is equivalent to a one hundred and four page book the size of THE STEEL SQUARE. It is published on the 15th of every month.

Matters of every day interest to the carpenter are taken up in each issue, and discussed in the same clear easily understood manner that is so characteristic of Mr. Hodgson. Each number contains a supplement with the complete plans of a low priced residence at scale with full details and complete bill of materials.

Among the articles that are running now are the following:

“SOME BUILDERS' TOOLS, THEIR USES AND ABUSES.” In this series Mr. Hodgson takes up the various different tools, the ways that they can be used most effectively and even the most expert carpenter can learn something that will be useful to him.

“USES OF THE STEEL SQUARE,” in a series by A. W. Woods, fully illustrated, is a subject that is exceedingly interesting to the readers of the National Builder.

“HOLLOW CONCRETE BUILDING BLOCKS” are touched on by Fred W. Haglock, the well known authority on this subject. These blocks are coming into use more and more, and all engaged in the building industries should become familiar with their use and limitations.

THE CORRESPONDENCE COLUMN is open to all readers of The National Builder, and in this column all sorts of practical experiences are discussed by readers of the paper.

“EASY LESSONS ON ARCHITECTURE AND STYLES” is a series that is valuable to every carpenter.

“DETAILS OF BUILDING CONSTRUCTION,” by J. A. F. Cardiff, is a series of articles accompanied by a full page plate each month, taking up various details.

There are many other features, but a copy of the paper itself is the best description.

NEW ALBANY, IND.—There is nothing new to relate as regards local conditions; everything is working smoothly and all our members are employed. Work is plentiful around the Falls Cities at present; there is more of it than there are carpenters to do it.

* * *

McKEESPORT, PA.—Craftsmen contemplating coming to this vicinity are advised to stay where they are, or wend their way towards other quarters. Work is exceedingly dull, and newcomers will but swell the number of unemployed. Remain away.

* * *

PORTLAND, ORE.—The directors of the Lewis & Clark Centennial Exposition, to be held in this city in 1905, being members of the Citizens' Alliance, who are antagonistic to organized labor, we hope that members of trades unions and their friends will extend to them the same courtesies that they accord to us.

* * *

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.—With the unmistakable design to overflow the labor market here and to destroy unionism, the Builders' Exchange of this city is advertising in Northern papers for carpenters to come here, stating that work is plentiful and wages high. This is a false assertion; trade is exceedingly dull and many brothers are walking the streets in search of work. All carpenters are warned not to pay heed to these decoy advertisements.

KREBS, I. T.—Local Union 1716 is in very good condition, though, owing to the dullness of times our attendance is small. The majority of our members had to look elsewhere for employment, yet the different crafts of this district realize the fact that we have a lively Carpenters' Union notwithstanding the scarcity of work. Traveling brothers are advised not to come to this part of the territory with the expectation of securing employment. We have more men than work.

TOLEDO, O.—Trade has been fair this summer and our men were kept employed; but now work is slacking up and what is worse, the work let out of the architects' office is awarded to unfair contractors. These parties advertise every day for carpenters, promising steady work all winter at good wages; this is a lie on the face of it, their design being to bring in floaters and to cut wages. Carpenters will please take notice of the situation and steer clear of Toledo, O., at present.

NACOGDOCHES, TEX.—Our Local Union 1717, being organized as recently as in June last, we are as yet not properly entrenched to stand a clash with our employers, which for this reason, in our efforts to obtain recognition from them, and to enforce our trade rules, we are anxiously trying to avoid. By the end of the year, however, we expect to have our grievances adjusted and our union in better shape. We earnestly hope that migrating carpenters will co-operate with us in this endeavor, by keeping shy of this locality.

* * *

YAZOO CITY, MISS.—In our town we have one Mr. J. B. Gibson, who formerly was a union contractor somewhere in the State of Louisiana. Since his arrival here he has severed all connection with the union, joined the Contractors' Association, and is doing his contract work under non-union conditions. After causing the two local unions here a great deal of trouble we have this unfair contractor now in a tight place, and if carpenters coming here will refrain from approaching him we shall soon have him in the boat. We have at present a first-class D. C. doing efficient work and up-to-date business.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—Members of the U. B. and all carpenters coming here are advised not to accept employment from Winchester & Cullen, a contracting firm whose home is in Janesville, Miss. They have secured the contract for the Council Bluffs Public Library, and Mr. Cullen, who has charge of the carpenter work, has employed non-union men only, all ex-members, who work ten hours per day at $2.75, which is below the union rate. L. U. 364 has declared Winchester &

Cullen and the library building unfair, which action has been indorsed by the local Trades and Labor Assembly. Our efforts to adjust the matter having failed, we take this means to inform the brothers of the situation, hoping that they will heed our warning.

* * *

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Again we desire to give brothers of trades or callings, especially building trades men, a warning. Clippings from Eastern newspapers are still being sent to our local secretaries, stating that mechanics of all kinds are greatly in demand in Southern California at extravagant wages. They are simply paid advertisements of the Employers' Associations, who desire to break up labor organizations. Take a warning from last winter's experience, when thousands of men were walking the streets vainly searching for employment, and contractors took advantage of the situation by cutting wages. Mechanics should bear in mind that this coast is the dumping ground for surplus labor from all over the continent. The Pacific ocean is hard to cross, and the return fares are double.

MR. KISCO, N. Y.—Local Union 1134 is progressing splendidly. We are admitting new members nearly every meeting night, and delinquents are paying up their back dues. We have had a very prosperous summer, and the outlook for a winter's work is very bright. There is a good chance for a few more men to secure employment, and we would like to see some good union men avail themselves of the opportunity.

The contracting firms of J. R. Dakin & Son and Geo. C. Hoffman have been declared unfair to organized labor. On April 1st the latter firm was the first to agree to the advance in wages of 50 cents per day, but afterwards refused to pay the increase. Both firms employ non-union men, hence union men should give them a wide berth.

Beware of Him.

John Northrop, a member of Local Union 705, Lorain, O., went into contracting last spring, and afterwards left the city, removing his family and goods in the dark of night, without paying the men who worked for him. He also took with him the tool box and some tools belonging to a brother member. He is a man of about 5 feet 7 inches in height, weighs about 160 pounds, has light hair and heavy, sandy mustache. He is supposed to be in Toledo, O., at present. Beware of him!

Death of Mrs. Frank Duffy.

On October 19th, 1904, at 11:45 a. m., Mrs. Nellie Duffy, the beloved wife of our General Secretary, Frank Duffy, died suddenly from heart failure, following child birth. Mrs. Duffy was a noble character, a devoted wife and mother, a woman of kind and benevolent disposition, who, though having lived in the city of Indianapolis only since the removal of Brotherhood headquarters from Philadelphia, less than two years ago, had made a host of friends.

The funeral took place on the 22d, and was very largely attended, the National organizations of Miners, Bricklayers and Masons, Barbers, Hod Carriers, Teamsters, Sawsmiths, the District Council of Chicago and the local unions of the city, each having sent representatives. Their high esteem for the departed and their respect and sympathy for the grief-stricken father and children in their irreparable loss, was also manifested by numerous and elaborate floral designs.

On behalf of our General Secretary, we desire to return thanks to the various organizations, members and friends, who so fraternally sent telegrams and letters of sympathy. They have given him renewed fortitude to bear up under his great affliction. Such mementoes of friendship will ever remain in grateful remembrance.

Don't Patronize the Maydole Hammer Company.

We once more would call on our members to refrain from purchasing the scab hammer manufactured by the Maydole Hammer Co., and to make the boycott of this article more effective than it has been in the past. The members of L. U. 252, of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths in the employ of the company before the strike occurred in May, 1903, are still out, all efforts of the International Union and the American Federation of Labor to bring about an adjustment of the controversy having proved unsuccessful. While we are informed that the sale of the products of this unfair firm have been materially reduced, a considerable number of hammers are shipped to all parts of the country and may be used by carpenters. Assist the striking blacksmiths by leaving the Maydole scab hammer severely alone.

The Washburn Crosby Co. Still Unfair.

The agents of the Washburn-Crosby Flour and Cereal Mill Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., are circulating the report that the differences between the company and the union of cereal mill employes has been adjusted and their products placed on the fair list. This is false, the company is still refusing to submit the points in dispute to arbitration; their employes are still out on strike and entitled to the full sympathy and support of all organized labor. Keep on discriminating against the Washburn-Crosby Co. unfair flour.

British Carpenters Conferring on Amalgamation.

The question of amalgamation is again under consideration among the three national organizations of carpenters existing in Great Britain. Representatives of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners and the General Union of Operative Carpenters and Joiners recently met in joint conference in the city of Leicester, the Associated Society of Carpenters and Joiners having notified the conference of their inability to send representatives at this occasion, but intended submitting the matter of amalgamation to their membership and receive instructions from them.

After a general discussion on the subject and advantages of amalgamation, the following resolutions were agreed upon:

"That in the opinion of this joint meeting of the General Councils of the General Union and Amalgamated Societies of Carpenters and Joiners, amalgamation is desirable for the interest of our trade.

"That this conference, representing the General Union and Amalgamated Societies of Carpenters and Joiners, sincerely believing it to be absolutely necessary to the interest of the trade that amalgamation of the societies should take place, hereby agrees to submit the whole question in all its details to a joint committee, composed of six members of each society, and their respective general secretaries, empowering each joint committee to act if possible, with a similar number of the Associated Society.

"That the joint secretaries communicate the result of this conference to the Associated Society and seek their co-operation by inviting them to appoint six of their members to act on this joint committee."

According to later advices the cabinet makers and wood workers have also been invited to join in the efforts of establishing one great organization of the wood working industry and we sincerely hope that dual organization, which is a detriment to the interests of any trade in any country, will ere long be a thing of the past in Great Britain.

Our Thirteenth General Convention.

The thirteenth General Convention of the U. B., held in Milwaukee, Wis., adjourned on the 6th of October, having been in session consecutively for sixteen days. It has thus surpassed any previous conventions as to time consumed and as to the number of delegates in attendance. In addition to the brief review on the transactions of the convention in last month's journal, up to the time when that issue went to press, we will now make mention of the most important subsequent proceedings.

The numerous amendments to the Constitution adopted and now before the membership for a referendum vote will be found elsewhere in this issue. For obvious reasons we refrain from any comment on the proposed changes to our laws. However, we can not help calling particular attention of our local unions and members to the amendment providing for an increase of our per capita tax from 20 to 25 cents per member per month. This is a proposition which has been voted down by the referendum vote on several previous occasions, and it is most urgently desired that it may not meet with a similar fate in this instance. The necessity of increasing the revenues of the General Office has been frequently and very forcibly commented on by members in the columns of this journal, as well as in the reports of our General Officers to the convention. It should be well understood by each and every member at this time that the present amount of per capita to headquarters has become entirely inadequate to meet the expenses accruing from trade movements and death and disability claims. It is comparatively but a small sacrifice to pay the additional amount of 5 cents per member per month, while the levying of an assessment, which will be inevitable should this amendment not be concurred in, has generally been found objectionable by our membership.

The convention consumed three days' time in discussing and investigating charges of extravagance against the General Officers contained in a report submitted by the General Executive Board.

The committee of seven appointed, one from each district for investigation of this matter, handed in a report exonerating the General Officers from all charges, which finally was adopted by a vote of 318 to 117.

The long-pending question of jurisdiction came up on receipt of a communication from Sam Gompers recommending the appointment of a committee to meet with a committee of the Amalgamated Wood Workers for the purpose of trying to bring about a more harmonious feeling between the two organizations. The convention instructed the G. S. to reply and ascertain the information as to whether the A. W. W. had requested that such action be taken by the convention, and if the conference as suggested was intended to try to so amalgamate the A. W. W. into the U. B. so that but one organization of Carpenters and Joiners, comprising all the branches of the wood working industry, as enumerated in Sec. 61 of our General Constitution would hereafter be recognized by the A. F. of L. To this Sam Gompers later on replied that the A. W. W. did not suggest the conference, but that the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. of its own initiative had authorized him to send the letter to General President Huber recommending the appointment of a conference committee to which the A. W. W. on their part had consented. Further action in this matter was deferred until such time as it is evident that no spirit of prejudice exists and that any committees that may be appointed would be able to bring about an amalgamation of the A. W. W. with the U. B.

The following resolution condemning the outrages committed by the Governor of Colorado, the military authorities and the mine owners and Citizens' Alliances of that State, were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, In the State of Colorado there is an organized and determined effort being made by an organization known as the Mine Owners' Association, in conjunction with the Citizens' Alliance, to destroy an organization known as the Western Federation of Miners; and

WHEREAS, The military arm of the State has been used by the chief executive of the State to aid these organizations in carrying out their purpose; and

WHEREAS, To accomplish this, extreme and awful methods have been used, such as confining in bull-pens, and deporting peaceable and law-abiding citizens, deposing by threats and force, and without any semblance of legal process, city and county officials, filling their places with men ready and willing to do their bidding, wholly disregarding constitutional and property rights, thereby making it next to impossible to retain allegiance to any labor organization; and

WHEREAS, The Locals of the U. B. in these sections of the State have been almost destroyed, and if maintained financial aid must at once be given by this convention; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the U. B. C. and J. of A., in convention assembled, most emphatically denounces such actions on the part of Governor Peabody, the Mine Owners' Association and the Citizens' Alliance, as being diametrically opposed to the fundamental principles on which this government was founded and rests, and contrary to all principles of justice and equity; and be it further

Resolved, That this convention at once come to the relief of our needy brothers in Cripple Creek, Victor, Trinidad and Telluride.

A motion to publish THE CARPENTER in English language only was voted down by an overwhelming majority.

The suggestion to publish the journal in magazine form and style and to be sold to members, through the local unions at 25 cents per year per member, is also before the membership for a referendum vote.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., is the city designated for the meeting of the next convention, to be held in 1906.

The New Child Labor Law in New Jersey.

The new Child Labor Law now in effect in the State of New Jersey, if conscientiously carried out, will place New Jersey in the foremost ranks of all States, so far as child labor is concerned.

The new law provides the minimum age at which children may be employed, the length of time they shall work each day or week. It defines the methods by which their ages shall be certified; it fixes a penalty for false affidavits; it insists upon every necessary privilege of factory inspection; it provides for the protection of employed children against accident; it compels dangerous machinery to be guarded; it requires employers to provide liberal air space and ventilation; it prohibits children from being set to cleaning machinery in motion; it looks after the sanitation of shops in which children are employed; it provides against improper forfeiture of wages; proscribes the abuse of sweatshops; forbids the use of unsafe stairways, and compels the construction of proper, safe and adequate fire escapes where such are needed.

State of Carpenter Trade in Great Britain.

In his report for September, 1904, the General Secretary of the Associated Carpenters and Joiners' Society of Great Britain has the following to say of trade conditions in that country:

Employment in the building trades continued dull during August, and on the whole showed little change as compared with July. It is, however, much worse than a year ago. Employment in the shipbuilding trade shows a slight improvement as compared with the previous month, but is still bad; it is worse than a year ago.

We regret the continued increase of the number of our members claiming Unemployed Benefits, which indicates clearly a depression in trade all over the country. This cannot be wondered at, when we take into account the vast amount of our nation's wealth that has been needlessly and extravagantly expended by our government during late years by engaging in warfare. Two hundred and fifty millions of money can not be spent in such a manner without leaving its after effects behind it, and we are experiencing that by this depression in trade. Good times or bad times, working men should be loyal to their trade union and endeavor to make it even stronger in the face of adversity. It is the best friend the workman ever had, ever can have or ever will have.

Only that day dawns to which we are awake.—Walden.

GENERAL VOTE ON THE AMEND-MENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION,

As Agreed to and Adopted by the Thirteenth General Convention, Held in Milwaukee, Wis.,
Sept. 19 to Oct. 6, 1904.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Oct. 25, 1904.

To the Officers and Members of All Local Unions of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Greeting:

The subjoined are the amendments and alterations agreed to and adopted by the thirteenth General Convention of the United Brotherhood, held in Milwaukee, Wis., September 19th to October 6th, 1904, which have been compiled by a committee appointed for that purpose by General President William D. Huber.

As many important changes are proposed in these amendments, it is absolutely necessary to hold a special called meeting of your union to consider same in order to vote intelligently thereon.

It now becomes my duty, in accordance with Sections 137 and 184 (a) of the General Constitution, as General Secretary, to submit to all local unions and members thereof these amendments, for a general vote in their respective meetings.

This vote must be returned to the General Office by December 8th, 1904, at the latest. Take the vote by show of hands "FOR" and "AGAINST" each proposition separately. Only the actual vote cast at a meeting of your local union in this manner will be counted. The two official forms sent to each local union should be filled out correctly and signed by the President and Secretary of each local union, the seal of the local union should be affixed. One of these forms must be returned to this office by December 8th;

the other should be filed away for future reference. Votes received after December 8th, 1904, will not be counted.

Be kind enough to attend to these matters in detail, and oblige,

Fraternally yours,

FRANK DUFFY,
General Secretary.

second line. (See Sec. 76.)

Sec. 55. Each local union shall pay used as a fund for the general management of the U. B. and payment of all death and disability benefits prescribed by the Constitution, together with all legal demands made upon the U. B.

Sec. 59. A local union, when three months in arrears to the U. B., shall be suspended. The G. S. shall by registered letter, notify the L. U. when two of the members of the locals to see that tax of their L. U. is promptly paid and receipts for the same read at the meeting.

Sec. 64. Strike out "18" in the first line and insert "17."

Add to Sec. 70: And while a member is contracting, or engaged in any occupation other than carpentry he shall not be entitled to a voice or vote in his local union.

Sec. 71. No member of the U. B. can remain in, or become a member of more than one local union, or any other organization of Carpenters and Join-fits.

Sec. 88. Insert "and R. S." after "Financial Secretary" in the first line.

Sec. 89 (a). When a member owes a sum equal to three months' dues he is not in good standing, and is thereby rent month.

Sec. 113 (a). A member who leaves the jurisdiction of his local union to work in another locality, or transfers his membership, must apply to the F.
S. and procure a clearance card. It is compulsory for the local union to issue said card, providing the member has no charges pending against him and pays all arrearages, together with ensuing and current month's dues in advance and ten cents for the card. He shall deposit said card in the union having jurisdiction on the first meeting night after having secured work.

RESIGNATIONS AND SALOON KEEPER.

Sec. 118. A member can withdraw or sever his connection with the U. B. by resignation in writing, and it shall require a two-thirds' vote of members present at a regular meeting to accept a resignation. No person who engages in the sale of intoxicating drinks can be admitted or retained as a member.
A member wishing to withdraw or sever his connection with the U. B. shall present his resignation in writ-without pay, as provided for in Sections 45 and 46.

Sec. 133. Relief in case of strikes or lockouts may be given members only at such rate and extent as the general funds will warrant, and shall not be payable before the end of the second week of the strike or lockout, and then from the beginning of the second week, provided financial aid has been voted by the G. E. B. and the strike or lock-out has been legally sanctioned by that body. All members shall be entitled to relief, provided that a member who is in arrears shall out of his first payments square up his arrears in full. In all strikes or lockouts only those men employed where such strike or lock-out takes place are entitled to strike-pay under our laws.

Sec. 138. The officers of a local un-

Sec. 170. A member must be charged and tried within the jurisdiction of the local union or D. C. where the offense was committed, and if he is a traveling member a copy of the verdict must be sent to the L. U. of which he is a member. Any local union may fine, expel or suspend a member, by a three-fourths' vote, when the evidence is plain and the circumstances require immediate action. A member forfeits his right to appeal within the U. B. by taking his case to the civil courts.

Sec. 180. STANDING DECISIONS OF THE G. E. B.

Amendment. That the standing decision of the G. E. B., rendered Feb. 19th, 1886, read as follows: "A member in the ante-room on business authorized by the union, or out on official business, must be considered as present at the meeting, and is eligible to nomination for office."

Strike out decision of March 12, 1887. See Sec. 65. Persons ruptured and afflicted with chronic rheumatism can only be admitted as semi-beneficial members.

Strike out decision of Oct. 10, 1895. See Sec. 176, General Constitution.

The occupation of a paid city fireman is hazardous and a member so engaged can not be allowed benefits.

Strike out decision of Oct. 22, 1887. See Sec. 106 (b), General Constitution. Claims for disability benefit must date to the time of accident.

Strike out decision of Jan. 5, 1889. See Sec. 70, General Constitution.

A union contractor must always hire union carpenters where available, and where not available he should have the non-union men he hires join the union.

Strike out decision of Sept. 7, 1889. See Sec. 89 (a), General Constitution.

A member owing a sum equal to three months' dues can not pay part of his arrears and be in benefit. He must pay all he owes the union and wait three months after that to be in benefit.

Strike out decision of Nov. 2, 1889.

A fine can be imposed by a local union on a member for not parading on Labor Day.

Decision of G. E. B., Nov. 15, 1890.

Amend the decision by striking out the words "walking delegate" and inserting "business agent."

Strike out decision of April 17, 1891.

It is not advisable to extend the jurisdiction of a District Council over a large extent of territory, but to confine it to one city or one county.

Note:—This is merely advisory in its terms, and is in fact not a decision, therefore not binding on any district. Such being the case, it should be stricken out.

Strike out decision of Jan. 13, 1891. See Sec. 64, General Constitution.

A local union can not admit a boy under 18 years.

Urabstimmung

—über die—

Amendements zur General-Constitution

vorgeschlagen und angenommen von der, vom 19. September bis 6. Oktober 1904 in Milwaukee, Wis., abgehaltenen dreizehnten General-Convention.

Indianapolis, Ind.,
den 25. Oktober 1904.

An die Beamten und Mitglieder aller Lokal-Unions der U. B.

Nachfolgend unterbreite ich Euch die von der dreizehnten General-Convention angenommenen Amendements, wie dieselben von dem, vom G. B. zu diesem Zwecke ernannten Comité zusammengestellt wurden.

Da es sich hier um verschiedentliche und wichtige Constitutions-Veränderungen handelt, ist es absolut notwendig, daß die Lokal-Unions eine Spezial-General-Verammlung einberufen, um dieselben in Erwägung zu ziehen und in intelligenter Weise darüber abzustimmen.

Es ist meine Pflicht als General-Sekretär, und in Uebereinstimmung mit den Sektionen 137 und 148 (a) der General-Constitution, den Lokal-Unions, die Amendements zur Urabstimmung vorzulegen.

Das Resultat der Abstimmung ist spätestens bis zum 8ten Dezember 1904, der General-Offize zuzusenden.

Ueber jedes einzelne Amendement ist separat durch Hände aufheben abzustimmen und die für und dagegen abgegebenen Stimmen zu notiren.

Nur die wirklich, in einer, wie oben bezeichneten, Verammlung abgegebenen Stimmen werden berücksichtigt und gezählt werden.

Die beiden offiziellen Formulare, welche einer jeden Lokal-Union zu diesem Zwecke zugehen, müssen richtig ausgefüllt, von dem Präsidenten und Sekretär der Lokal-Union unterzeichnet, und der Stempel beigefügt werden.

Eines dieser Formulare ist bis zum 8ten Dezember 1904, an die General-Offize zuzusenden und das andere von der Lokal-Union behufs spätere Bezugnahme aufzubewahren.

Abstimmungs-Resultate, welche der General-Offize nach dem 8ten Dezember 1904 zugehen, werden keine Berücksichtigung finden.

Ich bitte, diesen Angelegenheiten die nöthige Aufmerksamkeit zu schenken und zeichne

Brüderlichst,
Frank Duffy,
General-Sekretär.

Amendirte Sektionen der General-Constitution.

Sekt. 10. Jeder Delegat soll zu einer Stimme berechtigt, und keine Stellvertretung erlaubt sein. Ein Delegat zu einer Convention der U. B. muß im Besitze eines, von der U. B., deren Mitglied er ist, ausgestellten Mandates sein, doch können sich mehrere L. U.'s oder solche in einem D. C. vertretenden, zur Erwählung eines Delegaten verbinden, aber nur die L. U., welcher der erwählte Delegat angehört, kann demselben ein Mandat ausstellen.

General-Beamten.

Sekt. 15 (a). Die General-Beamten der U. B. sollen bestehen aus einem General-Präsidenten, zwei Vize-Präsidenten, einem General-Sekretär, einem General-Schatmeister und einem General-Executive-Board von sieben Mitgliedern, welche aller lokalen Pflichten in der U. B., deren sie angehören, entbunden sein sollen.

Sekt. 15 (b). Die Gehälter der General-Beamten sollen wie folgt sein: Der General-Präsident soll $2,000 jährlich, Der General-Sekretär soll $2,000 jährlich, Der General-Schatmeister soll $1,800 jährlich erhalten und Die Mitglieder des General-Executive-Boards und die General-Organisatoren sollen die Summe von $4.00 täglich für die Zeit erhalten während der sie im Dienste der U. B. stehen. Alle Gehälter der General-Beamten sollen von der General-Convention festgesetzt werden und der Gutheißung der Urabstimmung unterworfen sein.

Sekt. 15 (c). Die Namen aller Candidaten für alle General-Beamtenstellen, sollen den Mitgliedern der U. B. zur Urabstimmung unterbreitet werden und diejenigen Candidaten, welche die höchste Stimmenzahl erhielten, sollen als erwählt erklärt werden. Nominationen für alle General-Beamten sollen während der Tagung der Convention vorgenommen und sofort der Urabstimmung unterbreitet werden. Der Amtstermin der General-Beamten soll am 1ten Februar beginnen und nach zweijähriger Dauer am 1ten Februar ablaufen. Vorerwählte Beamten sollen gemäß des australischen Wahlsystems erwählt werden. Gedruckte, die Namen aller Candidaten enthaltende offizielle Stimmzettel sollen den L. U.'s von der General-Offize der U. B. geliefert werden und die Mitglieder, hinter dem Namen des Candidaten, für welchen sie zu stimmen wünschen, ein Kreuz (X) beifügen. Der Gebrauch aller anderen Stimmzettel ist verboten. Alle Beamten sollen zwei Jahre im Amt bleiben, oder bis ihre Nachfolger vorchriftsgemäß erwählt und in ihr Amt eingesetzt sind.

Sekt. 15 (d)—neue Sektion. Kein Mitglied soll als General-Beamter, Organisator oder Abgesandter wählbar sein, das nicht zur Zeit der Wahl oder Ernennung von der U. B. beschäftigt, oder zur Prüfung seines Unterhaltes im Gewerbe beschäftigt ist; und soll während seiner Amtsdauer nicht in die Dienste einer anderen Person oder Organisation treten.

§ 18. Wenn Klagen gegen einen General-Beamten erhoben werden, so soll der G. B. die Macht haben, denselben während der Untersuchung des Falles seitens des G. E. B. zu suspendiren. Diese Untersuchung muß innerhalb dreißig Tagen stattfinden und das Resultat derselben ist den Lokal-Unions innerhalb dieses Zeitraumes zur Urabstimmung zu unterbreiten. Das Resultat dieser Urabstimmung ist dem G. B. innerhalb weiterer dreißig Tagen zuzusenden, und sollte der Angeklagte durch zwei Drittel der abgegebenen Stimmen des beschuldigten Vergehens schuldig befunden werden, so soll der G. B. die Suspension als permanent erklären.

(Anmerkung:) Die einzige Aenderung in der englischen Constitution besteht in der Beifügung des Wortes: „abgegebenen“ (Stimmen) (members "voting"). Diese Aenderung ist bereits in der deutschen Ausgabe vorgefunden, mithin ist Sekt. 18 im Deutschen unverändert.)

Sekt. 19—(neue Sektion.) Wenn Klagen gegen den G. B. erhoben werden, so sollen die General-Vize-Präsidenten, in Verbindung mit dem G. E. B. den Fall untersuchen und die Macht haben, denselben während der Dauer der Untersuchung zu suspendiren. Den Befund dieses so gebildeten Gerichtes soll der G. E. innerhalb 30 Tagen, und nachdem alles Beweismaterial vollständig vorliegt, einer Urabstimmung der Mitglieder der U. B. unterbreiten. Das Resultat dieser Abstimmung sollen die L. U.'s innerhalb weiterer 30 Tagen dem G. E. zuzusenden und sollte die Anklage, wie erhoben, von zwei Drittel der abstimmenden Mitglieder als berechtigt befunden werden, so soll der vorher erwähnte angeklagte Beamte als schuldig erklärt, und die Suspension permanent gemacht werden.

Sekt. 19 sei gestrichen. (Diese Sektion ist eine Wiederholung des ersten Satzes der Sektion 18 und lautet folgendermaßen:

Sekt. 19. Im Falle von Anklagen gegen einen General-Beamten soll der G. B. die Macht haben, während die Untersuchung vor dem G. E. B. schwebt, solchen Beamten zu suspendiren.)

Sekt. 53. Der ganze Nachsatz nach dem Worte: „werden“ in der zweiten Zeile, sei gestrichen. (Siehe Sekt. 76.)

Sekt. 55. Jede L. U. soll monatlich für jedes guttuhende (nicht drei Monate im Rückstande) vollberechtigte oder theilweise berechnete Mitglied fünfundszwanzig (25) Cents an den G. S. entrichten. Alle bei dem G. S. eingehenden Gelder sollen als Fond für die Verwaltung der B. S. dienen und für Bezahlung aller Sterbe- und Unfall-Benefits, sowie aller sonstigen gesetzlichen Ansprüche an die B. S. verwendet werden.

Sekt. 59. Wenn eine L. U. drei Monate mit ihren Beiträgen an die B. S. im Rückstande ist, soll sie suspendirt werden.
Wenn eine L. U. zwei Monate im Rück-stande ist, so soll sie der G. S. vor dem fünftzehnten des dritten Monats in einem regulierten Briefe hiervon benachrichtig-ten.

Es ist die Pflicht der Mitglieder aller
L. U.'s darauf zu sehen, daß letztere ihre
Tage pünktlich entrichten und daß die Quittung für dieselbe in der Versammlung vorgelegt wird.

Sekt. 64. Lehrlinge über 17 Jahre, von gutem Rufe, können als Mitglieder auf-genommen werden, und wenn sie 21 Jahre alt, sechs Monate guttugend und sonstwie qualifizirt sind, wie in Sektion 61 vorgeschrieben, als zu Benefit berechnete Mitglieder gelten.

Sekt. 70—(Zusatz.) Und wenn ein Mit-glied als Contractor oder in einem anderen Berufszweige, und nicht im Carpenter-Gewerbe beschäftigt ist, soll es weder zu beratender noch zu entscheidender Stimme in den Versammlungen seiner
L. U. berechnigt sein.

Sekt. 71. Kein Mitglied der B. S.
kann Mitglied in zwei Lokal-Unions, oder Mitglied einer anderen Organisation sein, noch werden, außer in der Organisation der Zimmerleute und Bauhütten, wodringens es bestraft oder ausgeschlossen werden soll. Tugend ein Mitglied, welches sich der Armee oder Flotte anschließt, soll nicht zu finanziellen Benefits berechnigt sein.

Sekt. 88. Nach den Worten „Finanz-Sekretär“, in der zweiten Zeile seien die Worte „und Protokoll-Sekretär“ (P. S.) beigefügt.

Sekt. 89 (a). Wenn ein Mitglied eine Summe schuldet, welche den Betrag von drei Monats-Beiträgen gleichkommt, ist es nicht mehr guttugend und von allen Benefits in der Zwischenzeit suspendirt, und kommt nicht eher wieder in's Benefit, als drei Monate nach der Bezahlung aller Rückstände, die Beiträge für den laufenden
Monat mit einbegreifen.

Sekt. 113 (a). Ein Mitglied, welches den Wirkungsbereich seiner L. U. verläßt, um in einer anderen Lokalität zu arbeiten, oder seine Mitgliedschaft übertragen will, muß von dem F. S. eine Freikarte verlangen. Die L. U. ist verpflichtet, solche Karte auszustellen, vorausgesetzt, das betreffende Mitglied nicht unter Anklage steht und die Beiträge für den laufenden und nachfolgenden Monat im Voraus und zehn Cents für die Karte bezahlt hat.
Das Mitglied muß besagte Karte der L. U.
des Wirkungsbereiches am ersten Versammlungs-Abend, nachdem er Arbeit erhalten hat, einreichen.

Resignationen und Wirthhe.

Sekt. 118. Ein Mitglied kann austreten oder seine Verbindung mit der B. S.
lösen, indem er seine Resignation schriftlich einreicht, und nur in einer regel-mäßigen Sitzung kann eine Resignation mit Zweidrittel-Majorität angenommen werden. Personen, welche berauschende Getränke verkaufen, können nicht als Mitglieder aufgenommen werden, noch können sie ihre Mitgliedschaft aufrecht erhalten. Ein Mitglied, welches auszu-treten, oder seine Verbindung mit der B. S.
zu lösen wünscht, muß seine Resignation schriftlich einreichen und muß die-selbe zwei Wochen, behufs Unterzuchung zurückgelegt werden.

Sekt. 121. Wo ein D. C. besteht, soll dieser die Regeln für die Leitung von Strikes und Lockouts in jenem Distrikt feststellen. Ein Mitglied, welches in einem, außerhalb des Wirkungsbereiches seines eigenen Distrikts gelegenen Orte, in Arbeit tritt, um die größeren Vortheile der an diesem Orte eingeführten Arbeitsbedingungen zu genießen, soll dies auf sein eigenes Risiko hin thun und zur Niederlegung der Arbeit (Strike) beordert werden können, ohne zu Strike-Unterstützung, wie in Sekt. 45 und 46 vorgesehen, berechnigt zu sein.

Sekt. 133. Strike- oder Lockout-Unterstützung soll nur in solchem Betrage oder Maßgabe an die Mitglieder ausgezahlt werden, wie dies die General-Kasse er-laubt, und soll solche Unterstützung nicht vor Schluß der zweiten Woche des Strikes oder Lockouts und von dem Beginn der zweiten Woche an gerechnet, bezahlt werden; vorausgesetzt, daß der Strike oder Lockout seitens des G. C. B. gesetz-mäßig sanktionirt und finanzielle Unterstützung bewilligt wurde. Alle Mitglieder sollen unter der Bedingung, daß rückstän-dige Mitglieder von der ersten Unterstützungs- und vollständigen Rückstände begleichen, zur Unterstützung berechnigt sein.

Bei allen Strikes und Lockouts sollen nur solche Mitglieder, die an dem Orte be-schäftigt sind an welchem dieselben statt-finden, unter unseren Gesetzen zu Unterstützung berechnigt sein.

Sekt. 138. Die Beamten einer L. U. sind ein Präsident, Vice-Präsident, Pro-toll-Sekretär, Finanz-Sekretär, Schatz-meister, Conductor, Warden und wenig-stens drei Trustees. Sieben Mitglieder bilden ein Quorum.

Sekt. 153 (a). Der F. S. soll alle in die Union eingezahlten Gelder in Empfang nehmen und sofort, mit Tinte, die Eintragungen im Tagebuche, (Journal) machen. Er soll am Schluß jeder Versammlung die empfangenen Beträge gegen Quittung dem Schatzmeister einhändigen. Er soll über jedes Mitglied ein genaues Rechnungskonto und ein Verzeichniß der vollen Namen und Adres-sen der Mitglieder führen.

Sekt. 158 (d). Die Trustees sollen alle Mitglieder der L. U. durch den P. S. auffordern, in der ersten Versammlung eines jeden Quartals anwesend zu sein, um die Beitragsarten der Mitglieder mit den Büchern des F. S. zu vergleichen.
Eine Strafe von nicht weniger als 25 Cents soll jedem Mitgliede auferlegt werden, welches unterläßt, dieser Versammlung beizuwohnen.

Sekt. 169 (a). Der Präsident soll alle von der Constitution und den Neben-gesetzen vorgeschriebenen Strafen verhängen, falls nicht anderweitig verfügt wird.

Sekt. 169 (b.) Alle Geldstrafen oder gesetzlichen Assessments sind vom F. S. dem betreffenden Mitglied anzurechnen, werden wie regelmäßige Beiträge betrachtet, sind binnen dreißig Tagen zu bezahlen und müssen vor den Beiträgen bezahlt werden, wenn der Betreffende zu irgend welchen Rechten, Privilegien oder Benefits der B. S. berechnigt sein will.
Mitglieder, welche während einem Aus-stande in Arbeit stehen, müssen eine Strike-Steuer entrichten wenn eine solche erhoben wird.

Sekt. 170. Ein Mitglied muß unter der Jurisdiktion der L. U. oder des D. C., in deren Bezirk das Vergehen begangen wurde, angeklagt und prozessirt werden, und wenn es ein sich auf der Reise befindliches Mitglied ist, muß der Union, deren Mitglied es ist, eine Abschrift des Urtheils zugeestellt werden. Tugend eine L. U.
kann durch eine Dreiviertel-Majorität Strafen auferlegen, ausschließen oder sus-pendiren, wenn die Beweise klar auf der Hand liegen und die Umstände sofortiges Handeln erfordern. Wenn sich ein Mit-glied in einem Beschwerde-Fall an die Civil-Gerichte wendet, so vergräbt es sich dadurch seines Appellations-Rechtes innerhalb der B. S.

Sekt. 180. Es soll keine Geldschenkung für irgend einen Zweck gemacht, noch Abgaben oder spezielle Steuern von irgend einer L. U. auferlegt werden, ohne daß dies von einer Zweidrittel-Mehrheit der anwesenden Mitglieder beschlossen wurde.
Ein dahingehender Beschluß kann nicht an demselben Abend, in dem der Vorschlag gemacht wurde, für rechtsgültig erklärt, sondern muß mindestens auf zwei Wochen behufs Erwägung zurückgelegt werden; ausgenommen, wenn es sich um ein Hülfsgeld handelt, welches von einer Schwester-Lokal-Union der B. S. aus-geht, deren Ausstand vom G. C. B. sank-tionirt wurde. In der Zwischenzeit müssen alle Mitglieder der Union brieflich davon in Kenntniß gesetzt werden, daß die
Frage besagten Geldes, Abgabe oder Steuer in der Schwebe ist.

Sekt. 183 (b.) Keine Fabrik oder Sägemühle soll zur Benutzung des Labels be-rechtigt sein, in welcher die achtstündige Arbeitszeit nicht eingeführt ist, oder die allen ihren Angestellten, Maschinenarbeiter, mit einbegriffen, nicht einen Minimal-Lohn von 30 Cents per Stunde bezahlt und ausschließlich Mitglieder der B. S. beschäftigt, ausgenommen, in Fällen, wo der G. B. auf Applikation eines D. C. oder einer L. U. ein Ausnahmerecht gewährt hat. Und der G. B. soll die Macht haben, den Gebrauch eines Metaloder Gummi-Stempels zur Anbringung des Labels zuzulassen wenn dies der Organisation zum Vortheil gereicht.

Sekt. 183 (j). Es soll die Pflicht aller
D. C.'s oder L. U.'s sein, der Verwendung von Begleitungs-Gegenständen (trim) und in der Werkstätte hergestellten Carpenter-Arbeit, die mit diesem Label versehen ist, Vorschub zu leisten und wo immer möglich, die Mitglieder ihres Wir-kungsbereiches von dem Handhaben oder Aufstellen von Nicht-Union-Material ab-zuhalten.

Stehen der G. C. B. Beschlüsse.

Die betreffende, unter'm 19ten Februar 1886 getroffene Entscheidung des G. C.
B. soll folgendermaßen lauten;

Ein Mitglied, welches sich während einer Versammlung im Sprechzimmer (anteroom) befindet, um im Auftrage der Union Geschäfte zu verrichten, oder amtlich von der Union außerhalb des Versammlungs-lokales beschäftigt ist, soll als anwesend betrachtet werden und zur Nomination für eine Beamtenstelle berechnigt sein.

Folgende Entscheidungen seien gefassen:

einem Bruch oder chronischem Rheuma-tismus behaftet sind, können nur als theilweise zu Benefit berechnigte Mitglie-der aufgenommen werden. (Siehe Sek-tion 65.)

10ten Oktober 1895; An Orten, wo ein
D. C. besteht, hat derselbe das alleinige Recht, über Anklagen wegen Verletzung der Gewerksregeln zu verhandeln und abzuurtheilen. Das angeklagte Mitglied muß von dem D. C. und nicht von einer Lokal-Union berührt, und von demselben abgeurtheilt werden. (Siehe Sekt. 176.)

10ten Juni 1887: Die Beschäftigung eines bezahlten städtischen Feuerwehrmannes ist gefährlich, und ein als solcher angestelltes Mitglied ist nicht zu Benefit berechnigt. (Siehe Sekt. 104.)

22ten Oktober 1887: Forderungen für Unfall-Benefit müssen den Datum des Tages des Unfalles tragen. (Siehe Sekt. 106 b.)

5ten Januar 1889: Ein Union-Con-schäftigen, wenn solche zu haben sind, und wenn nicht, so soll er die von ihm be-

The Real Anarchists.

In the American Lawyer for July Samuel Hopkins Adams discusses, from the standpoint of a lawyer, „Despotism vs. Anarchy in Colorado.“

He shows the training of a lawyer in the remarkably clear and forcible way in which he brings out the ascertained facts in the Colorado troubles.
One feature of the affair that he makes pointed is the fact that the militia was in the pay of the mine owners, and that their employment was not to preserve order, but to brutally prosecute members of the miners' unions.

Mr. Adams then declares: „A strange spectacle this, of a State hiring out its militia to the feud of provate interests, for it amounted to that.“

The article then goes on to show who the real anarchists in Colorado are, as follows:

„One object of the Federation's former fight against the smelters and reduction mills is to get an eight-hour workday rule established. Failing in this, they got the legislature to pass a law limiting a day's work to eight hours. The law was declared unconstitutional by the Colorado Supreme Court; not only unconstitutional but ‘absurd,’ although the United States Supreme Court, which is not largely given over to absurdities, had upheld the same in other States. The question of amending the constitution was put to the people and carried by more than 45,000 majority in a total population of 400,000. This amendment made the passage of an eight-hour day mandatory upon the legislature. But lobbysts, loaded, got at the legislature of 1902-03, and the will of the people was defied. That overwhelming majority of votes counted for less in the government of Colorado than the dollars of the lobbyists. The bill was never passed. This was anarchy by ballot; not as brutal as anarchy by bullet, but in the long run no less murderous. It was a dear victory for the mine owners. Through their lobby they had made their declaration to the Federation:

“You need hope for nothing from legal methods; we control the law-making.”—Mine Workers' Journal.

A New Start.

Let us cherish hope and courage,
Faith and fortitude renew;
Let us make a new beginning,
And resolve the right to do.
Simple lives serene and earnest
May at least some hope impart,
If in failure we have courage
For a new and better start.

Home'y duties are distasteful,
Do them with a better grace;
Those who are to duty faithful
Oft deserve a hero's place;
When life's clouds are low and heavy,
Till our troubles chill the heart,
Hoping, praying, persevering,
Make a new and better start.

When our best results in failure—
Almost everything goes wrong—
Turn a bright face toward to-morrow,
Sing a cheerful, hopeful song;
Fate befriends a happy fellow,
Who will kindly do his part,
True to duty, ne'er discouraged,
Make a new and better start.

CORRESPONDENCE

Labor Organization Should Be Commended by the Public.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

Our Local Union 284, Fort Dodge, Ia., has experienced the most critical period in its existence. Building has been dull and many of our members were forced to leave the city in search of employment. Besides, we have been compelled to work with a good supply of non-union men and to work for bosses who have but little respect for union principles and no regard for the welfare of those they employ. I do not care to dwell at length on this side of the situation, but rather relate to the better side.

The bulk of our membership have gallantly and intelligently stood by their posts of duty all through these trying times and skillfully helped one another to secure employment to the effect that our members with a few exceptions hold the best positions in our trade in this city to-day, to the credit of our local union.

I wish to compliment Bro. D. R. White, the organizer sent here by the General Office, for his personal interest in our local situation and energy displayed in his efforts to fortify our organization. Good results accompanied his work; he personally secured one new member and adherent to our cause each day, while in our city and succeeded in arousing the interest of the mechanics in favor of organization. Organization is one of the strongest promoters and the most potent factor in the social and intellectual life and environments of people who are the founders of the industrial greatness of this country, which excels all others on earth in its achievements and success. Organization is a modern school for the study of collective economics and interests and the greatest support of a civic form of government.

We, as members of labor unions, justly pride ourselves for cultivating mutual interest in the welfare of our fellow man, and through our combined efforts we elevate his home, gain more comforts for his family and increase his value as a citizen.

I contend that at the present time, where individualities count only as units, a large amount of credit is due to the intelligence acquired through organization of the laboring class, in the upbuilding of the great social, industrial and commercial structures this country can boast of.

Organization for legitimate purposes and higher ideals, such as trades unions represent, should be commended and cherished by the public without prejudice. It represents the most successful method of learning as to the true conditions and the needs of those who toil. Its teachings are based on the most authentic facts and their reasons for actions of relief are perfectly sound and incontestable. Her tongue officially announces to the public at large what should be done for the maintenance of the integrity of the honest workmen. Yours fraternally,

GEO. W. ROCKEY,
L. U. 284, Fort Dodge, Ia.

From Nashville, Tenn.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

As it has been quite a while since I have seen anything in our journal from L. U. 1444, and presuming that some of our sister local unions would like to know how unionism is progressing in the capital city of the grand old "Volunteer State," I take the liberty of giving you a brief description of conditions obtaining here. We are gaining new members every week and though we occasionally lose a member by him lapsing or through some other cause, our gain in membership by far exceeds our losses. Trade is fairly good here at present, and all the union men are at work; our wages, however, are not what they ought to be, nor what we intend to make them. The most competent mechanic is paid only 25 cents per hour of ten hours' work, the ten-hour day still being in vogue, with the exception of one contractor, who has adopted the nine-hour system. Nevertheless, we hope that by this time next year we shall secure the eight-hour day and that Nashville will then be entitled to a place on our list of eight-hour cities. Until this has been accomplished we would advise all carpenters to keep aloof from this locality; by doing so they will give us a chance to prepare for the battle and help us to win out. Wishing the U. B. an unbounded success, I am, yours for unionism,

O. D. WELLS,
L. U. 1444, Nashville, Tenn.

Suggests Mailing of "Carpenter" to Members' Home Addresses.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

I have just been reading the September CARPENTER, and it came to my mind how much good our journal is doing and how much more it would do if every brother would get his copy. You know as well as I do that about one-half of the members of any local union come to the meetings only once every three months, and as a result a number of copies of each issue of the journal are going to waste. In my estimation we would incur but a very small additional expense by mailing the journal directly to the home address of each member.

It should be part of the duty of the R. S. of every local union to furnish the General Office with the address of each member and to give due notice of any change of residence that may occur. With a little more exertion on the part of this officer and a small increase in the expense of mailing every member would get his CARPENTER and not a copy would be wasted.

The system of mailing the journal directly to members' residences is in operation and works satisfactorily with the International Typographical and other international and national unions and if adopted by our U. B. would undoubtedly fill a long-felt want. Fraternally,

AUG. SCHULTZ,
L. U. 1369, Louisville, Ky.

The Duty to Vote Implies the Duty to Vote Right.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Thousands of our brother carpenters, with millions of others, both old and young, forming our vast army of citizens, will have an opportunity at the coming presidential election to cast a vote for a President of the United States. For many it may be their first entrance into national politics; and with them that first vote weighs many times as much as any one that will follow it. Of itself it counts no more in the ballot box than any other vote, but it determines largely the character of those that will come after it.

Man's conduct is regulated by a great variety of circumstances. In politics, once his choice of a party has been made; his associations, his pride of opinion, his sentiment of loyalty, all combine and are helped by other considerations to deter him from changing his party relations. Men break away from their early political associations, but they are exceptions. Consequently the first vote generally determines the political future. See that you make the right choice and ally yourself with the party whose history, achievements and aims attract you to it.

All qualified voters have the right, and it is also their duty to vote. The voters elect, and are therefore the rulers. When they fail to vote, they fail to rule, fail to do their duty to the people and to themselves. The duty to vote implies the duty to vote right, to vote for good men and good measures. Therefore, men should study their duty as voters that they may elect honest, capable, faithful officers for government, and support the parties and principles that will best promote the cause of Labor and the good of the country. Every man should study his political duty with the best light that he can obtain, decide what is right and then vote his sentiments honestly and fearlessly. When we have good government the voters deserve the credit; when we have bad government the voters deserve the blame.

Many men vote as their fathers did. They are Republicans, Democrats, Populists or Prohibitionists because their fathers were, and the chances are they will always vote that ticket. It is unfortunate that so little independent thinking is done. The few furnish the brains and the argument for the masses, and, consequently the country is cursed with bad politics and badly enforced laws.

Men and brothers, think for yourself and vote your convictions. Look over the field and vote for the best men. When you see an incompetent or unworthy man on your ticket don't vote for him. Remember that no party can rise above the moral character of the men that represent its principles. Vote for good men regardless of party, and you will do your duty as a good citizen. Bad men must be kept out of office. If your party puts up an unprincipled man, rebuke the party by refusing to vote for him. Remember, industrial and moral worth, not wealth, is the true standard of individual and national greatness. Yours fraternally,

HENRY D. MAY,
President L. U. 1345.

Expulsions.

Alex Dorden, of Local Union 445, Rich Hill, Mo., has been expelled for selling property belonging to the union and for other grave offenses.

An Embezzler

Chas. E. Douglas, the subject of this sketch and former Financial Secretary of Local Union 696, Tampa, Fla., absconded with $661.73 of the local union's funds, on October 8th, 1904. A reward of $100.00 will be paid for his capture. Douglas is a Swede or Norwegian by birth, of Scotch parentage. Age, 35; height, 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 140 pounds; eyes, light blue; has figure of naked woman tattooed on right forearm and anchor and chain on left forearm and has a habit of dropping one corner of under lip at times when speaking. Douglas is a fairly good sailor as well as a carpenter. In case of arrest, communicate with Sheriff of Hillsborough County, Tampa, Fla.

What would the rate of wages be now, or what would be the length of the working day, if it was not for the efforts and sacrifices made by the organized workers in defense of labor's rights?

The parties who threaten to stamp out unionism don't know what they are talking about. They can't do it.

It is power that rules the world; through manifestation of power trade unionism has gained advantages in the past and there is no other way by which it can make progress hereafter.

The Morrill Nail Puller.

Chas. Morrill, No. 277 Broadway, New York, has brought out a nail-puller known as Morrill No. 1, which embodies many new and novel improvements.

As can be seen by the illustrations, the foot is mounted male and female, instead of the regulation scissor-like fashion. This reduces the wear on the pin to a minimum and always insures a correct alignment of the jaws.

In the ordinary nail-puller after it has been used a while, the rivets wear away and spread outwards, causing the jaws to spread apart sideways when the strain of pulling a nail is brought to bear upon them. Mounting the jaws male and female enables a pin to be used instead of a rivet, reduces the wear and the side walls will not permit the jaws to spring apart sideways.

The foot is so shaped that twice as much power can be developed as in the ordinary shaped foot; the result being that harder holding nails can be pulled than with any other puller. No springs are used, a small ball of metal on the end of the foot serving as a counter-weight and faking its place.

The shank has a handle and hand-guard forged integral with it. This prevents the hand from being pinched or bruised by the ram. The shank is built on the model of an eye-beam, thus combining the greatest strength with extreme lightness.

Throughout the rest of the tool the same scientific construction has been carried out, giving as a result a perfectly balanced and handsome appearing tool. The shank and foot are drop-forged from a very high grade steel and combine the greatest strength together with toughness. The tool is fully warranted and will pull all kinds of nails, either with or without heads.

Foolish he who for the world would change a faithful friend.—Euripides.

Such Is Life.

Pitiless Greed! Insatiate to oppress
And grind the faces of the suffering poor!
A lower wage means more of wretchedness,
Of cold and want than toil has felt before;

But Plenty, knowing not the keen distress,
Piles up the burdens Labor has to bear,
Of suffering a little more or less,

Will matter not for those long used to care.

Whilst in its lair Want's spectre grim doth hide,

Wealth, knowing not the agony of dread,
The bitter emptiness of joys denied,

Of blighted hopes and happiness all fled,
Bids Labor question not unequal strife,

But bow submissive, knowing such is life.
MARGARET SCOTT HALL.

The Holy Business of Capitalism

Deprive the working class of their natural and social rights, deny them an opportunity to gain a livelihood, compel them to pay rent for the privilege of occupying land, maintain their separation from the means of production, burden them with war debts and the ruinous cost of militarism, confer powers on corporations to hound them from the cradle to the coffin, and, if they are not model citizens under such treatment, bring out the gatling guns and murder them. That is the holy business of capitalism, and a capitalist controlled government.—Union Herald.

CINCINNATI, O.—The employees of the well known Robert Mitchell Furniture Co. have recently been organized under the banner of the U. B., and are entitled to all consideration from all local unions and D. C.'s.

CANTON, MASS.—Carpenters everywhere will please take notice that we have placed the Cabot job of Green Lodge Str., Poukpopog, on the unfair list, the contractor, Chas. A. Meed, of Boston, Mass., having refused to recognize our union. Keep away from said job.

* * *

TIFFIN, O.—The organizations here all went over to Fostoria on last Monday to celebrate Labor Day, and had a big time. Bro. J. W. Slayton, of Newcastle, Pa., was the speaker of the day. We expect to form a Central Labor Union here in Tiffin in the near future. Work has been fair in our locality this summer.

* * *

SPARKS, NEV.—Although trade is fair this season, we must advise brother carpenters to keep aloof from this place. Craftsmen have been flocking here for some time to the extent that now we are overcrowded with men, and disappointment will await any new comers expecting to obtain employment. Stay away.

* * *

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Owing to some cause or other there is an influx of carpenters to this locality, which in its effect is detrimental to resident carpenters and to incoming ones as well. Work being very dull here, we have more men than there is demand for, and traveling brothers will avert disappointment by shunning Youngstown until further notice.

VICKSBURG, MISS.—In addition to the amounts received from local unions of this State towards our fund to fight the injunction standing against us and published in the August CARPENTER, we hereby thankfully acknowledge receipt of the sum of $1.25 from L. U. 824, Jackson, Miss. Conditions here are about the same as last reported; the scab bosses are losing out; they are not getting any of the good jobs, hence things look bright for the union.

* * *

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—While we have been practically successful in our demand for the eight hours, all is as yet not settled. Some of the contractors are still holding out against us, and we would earnestly request carpenters to remain away from this city until we can adjust certain differences.

* * *

KEY WEST, FLA.—We desire to remind the local unions and brothers of the U. B. that we have a carpenters' union in this city that is surely alive. We are gradually increasing in membership, and there is every prospect of a brilliant future for us. Trade conditions are fair at present, still there is no lack of men, and migrating brothers are advised to steer clear of Key West.

* * *

NEWMAN, GA.—Local Union 1390 is in a better condition than it has ever been. At present we have more work than men, and we would like to have eight or ten good union carpenters come here to help us out, the number of resident craftsmen being inadequate to do all the work in the required time. The few non-union men who have come to town recently will join our Organization. We are in hopes of having plenty of work for some time.

* * *

OTTAWA, ILL.—Our little city had a grand time on last Monday, Labor Day. Everything passed off satisfactorily to all organized labor. The parade was the largest ever held in this city, and as to the speakers, we feel proud to have such men as Sam Gompers, Judge Prentiss of Chicago and T. L. Lewis, Vice-President of the Mine Workers. We can say for the U. B. of C. and J. of Ottawa that they feel proud of the day and its results.

IRVINGTON, N. Y.—We notice in the JUNE CARPENTER that our sister local union in Tuxedo, N. Y., has placed the firm of Mead & Taft on the fair list again. This firm has been doing work in this vicinity for for years and always have been and are now, unfair to us. They employ non-union men on their jobs here and pay all kinds of wages, save union. Mead & Taft should be kept on the unfair list until union conditions are established wherever they are doing work.

* * *

GAINESVILLE, FLA.—The name of the contractors placed on the unfair list by our local union is J. R. Eddins & Sons, not J. R. Eddins, as stated by our R. S. and published in August CARPENTER. The firm are the leading mill men in Gainesville; builders and manufacturers of doors and sash and all kinds of building material, of which they send car loads to all points of Florida. We trust that all local unions, especially those located in this State, will keep a watchful eye on and discriminate against this unfair firm's products.

* * *

BENNETTSTOWN, S. C.—We have enjoyed Labor Day splendidly. Leaving town in the morning for a large lake about nine miles distant, the weather was against us and the ground wet on arrival. So we put up at a large academy, a fine place for a picnic, and spread our tables with the fine and excellent material that our good union wives had prepared to build ourselves up with. Fine speeches were made by the Hon. J. Preston Gibson and by Mr. John R. Sampson, of our town. Everybody enjoyed themselves. Our local union is getting along finely. We had to drop two of our members and are looking for some more to fill their places. We shall keep the ball rolling.

BAR HARBOR, ME.—Although the number of L. U. 459 appears in the Financial Report published in THE CARPENTER each month, further information as to the standing of our local union has been lacking for some time. Our silence may have lead many of our sister local unions to believe that we are dead; we are not, however; we only have neglected to send reports on local conditions to our journal. We are glad to state that we have a good strong organization, with sincere and reliable members, who are always ready to take active part in our struggle. All the men in our town are good, full-blooded union men, imbued with brotherly love, ever ready to assist one another in every way possible, and we may well be proud of our local union. Work is dull here at present, a number of brothers are walking the streets, with poor prospect for work ahead of us. Carpenters are advised to stay away from Bar Harbor, Me., until further notice.

* * *

ALTOONA, PA.—Local Union 900 is still in the land and expects to be as long as the U. B. of C. and J. exists. We had a magnificent Labor Day parade and picnic, which proved a grand success all through. Having lost some members in our struggle of last spring, people here thought the Carpenters' Union was dead. But our boys turned out nobly and we showed the public that we are as strong as ever; the large number of carpenters in line was a great surprise to them. We distributed invitation cards to the non-union men at the occasion and in return we had two applicants that day and more will follow. The non-union men begin to realize that union men are given the preference by the people of Altoona, and that the loss of a just strike did not scare us, but made us more determined and firm in our demands. All places of business were closed on Labor Day, and that amounts to a good deal.

Building Trades Lockout in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The Builders' Exchange of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., at a meeting held on September 13th, decided that each member notify their employees that their shops will be closed on that day to re-open on September 19th as an open shop, when men desiring to work could do so by agreeing to work independent of any union. As a result of this unexpected and arbitrary action of the Exchange, and without the slightest intimation or provocation, a majority of the members of local unions affiliated with the Wyoming Valley District Council of C. and J., were locked out on September 14th. While the local unions so affiliated are rendering all possible moral and financial support to the brothers affected, and are determined to teach the members of the Builders' Exchange a wholesome lesson, which they feel confident they will accomplish, carpenters generally will assist them greatly by keeping aloof from the field of battle. Carpenters and all building craftsmen are urgently called on to keep away from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., until this fight has been brought to a successful finish.

"The worth of a state in the long run is the worth of the individuals composing it."—J. S. Mill.

A Russian Ukase in America.

Are we living in America? Is Colorado in America? These are questions frequently and rightly asked in view of the outrages committed in Colorado. Parallel only to the lawless and criminal actions of Governor Peabody, the military authorities and Citizens' Alliance of Colorado is the decree recently rendered by Judge Galbreath, of Butler county, Pa., in the case of Purvis & Co. against L. U. 500, Butler and the D. C. of Pittsburg, Pa. The decree so openly conflicts with and is so flagrant a violation of the laws of Pennsylvania and the constitution of the United States, that we are well justified in raising questions similar to those quoted here above, viz.: Is Butler in America? Have union men any rights at all? Have they a right to breathe?

The unfairness and antagonism of the firm of Purvis & Co. compelled our local union in Butler and the Pittsburg D. C., some time ago, to discriminate against them by applying the methods usually adopted in such cases. The effects being felt by the unfair firm, they brought suit for the establishment of restrictions, as well as for damages, against the members of both local union and D. C.

The decree filed by Judge Galbreath in this case on August 23d, prevents action against the obnoxious firm in any manner whatever and surrounds the members of the Pittsburg district so completely that they can not by action or inference do anything which might prevent anyone from becoming patrons of the unfair firm, and by which our members were seeking to get redress.

The decree furthermore requires L. U. 500, Butler and the Pittsburg D. C. to pay the plaintiffs the sum of $1,870, the amount they claimed to have lost by reason of not securing contracts from the different builders as a result of the discrimination, and to pay costs. The decree is as follows:

"1. That as to L. C. Wick, one of the defendants, the bill is dismissed.

"2. That the defendants (not including L. C. Wick), and each and every one of them, their officers, committees, agents, employees, servants, members, associates and all others that may act in concert with them, or by their direction, each and every one, be restrained and strictly enjoined from interfering and from combining, conspiring or attempting to interfere for the purpose of doing injury to the plaintiffs in their business, with the sale or contract for sale by the plaintiffs of building materials by representing or causing to be represented in express or implied terms to any customer of the plaintiffs, or to any person or persons or corporation who might become customers of the plaintiffs, that such customers will suffer or are likely to suffer loss or trouble in their business for purchasing or continuing to purchase or contracting for the purchase of building materials from the plaintiffs; or by intimidating or attempting to intimidate, by threats, direct or indirect, express or implied, of loss or trouble in business, or otherwise, any persons or corporation who are now customers or who may hereafter become or desire to become customers of the plaintiffs; or from sending out to any person or persons or corporation who are now customers, or who may hereafter become or desire to become customers of the plaintiffs, through the mails or delivered to them otherwise, any written or printed card, letter, circular or other notice, stating that members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners will not handle or work mill work or materials coming from mills which fail to comply with regulations of the Carpenters' District Council and that the plaintiffs had failed to comply with an agreement of the Planing Mill Association of Western Pennsylvania with the Carpenters' District Council, or an agreement adopted by the Master Builders' Association and said Council, and requesting such customers or prospective customers of the plaintiffs to have their mill work done by mills that operate under said agreement so that no controversy can arise on account of non-union mill work, or from sending out to such customers or prospective customers of the plaintiffs any card, circular or other notice of similar character or purpose, directly or indirectly, or from writing or sending through the mails or otherwise, any written or printed card, circular, letter or other communication, conveying, or intending to convey to any customers or prospective customers of the plaintiffs that the plaintiffs are under the ban of Local No. 500, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, or the Carpenters' District Council of Pittsburgh, Allegheny and vicinity, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, or other trades union, or of similar import; or from attempting by any scheme, combination or conspiracy among themselves or with others, to annoy, hinder or interfere with or prevent any person or persons or corporation from purchasing building materials or making contracts for the purchase of the same, from the plaintiffs, and from any and all acts, and from the use of any and all ways, means and methods with a purpose to injure plaintiffs in their business which (acts, ways, means and methods), by putting or attempting to put any person or persons or corporation in fear of loss or trouble will tend to hinder, impede or obstruct the plaintiffs from making sale, or making contracts for sale, of building materials; or from interfering and from combining, conspiring or attempting to interfere for said purpose with the business of the plaintiffs, by the enforcement, under Rule 7 of the working rules adopted for the government of local unions under the jurisdiction of the Carpenters' District Council of Pittsburgh, Allegheny and vicinity, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, which provides that: "No member shall be allowed to work any material coming from any non-union mill and shall comply with this rule when the local unions are so informed and instructed by the District Council," or by other like coercive rules, the natural and necessary effect of which would be to deter the members of said trades unions or others from working on buildings or other constructions to which the plaintiffs were furnishing materials, or contractors, builders or owners of said buildings or other constructions, or others, from purchasing materials from the plaintiffs or from interfering and from combining conspiring or attempting to interfere with the business of the plaintiffs for the purpose of injuring them in their business by the enforcement of fines or forfeitures, suspension or expulsion from membership in any of the locals within the jurisdiction of the Carpenters' District Council of Pittsburgh, Allegheny and vicinity, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, for failure to observe Rule 7 of the working rules adopted for the government of local unions under the jurisdiction of said Carpenters' District Council of Pittsburgh, Allegheny and vicinity, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, or for failure to observe any of the rules adopted and in force in that union, or that may hereafter be adopted, which would by coercion of said members interfere with the business of the plaintiffs, or from otherwise restraining, coercing and intimidating any one or more of the members of said union for said purpose from working for any contractors, builders, owners or other persons because they are doing or desire to do business with the plaintiffs; or from interfering and from combining, conspiring or attempting to interfere with the business of the plaintiffs by the issue of union labels to any mill within the jurisdiction of the Carpenters' District Council of Pittsburgh, Allegheny and vicinity, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, such issue of labels being made for the purpose of interfering with the business of the plaintiffs. From the doing of any and all of which acts and things for the purpose of injuring plaintiffs in their business and thereby compelling them to unionize their mill or have such injury continued, the said defendants (not including said L. C. Wick) and each and every of them, their officers, committees, agents, employes, servants, members, associates and all others that may act in concert with them, or by their direction, are hereby enjoined and restrained."

L. U. 500, Butler, and the Pittsburgh D. C. have appealed from Judge Galbraith's decision to the Supreme Court and the case may come up at the October term. In the opinion of eminent legal authorities they have a "good case;" but if the higher tribunal should not set aside this sweeping, inequitable decree, what then? The article from the "Bricklayer and Mason," published elsewhere in this journal, gives the proper answer to this query: "Let us all strike at the ballot box! Let us send men of our own class to legislatures!" And may we add, let us relegate to the rear judges and public officers subservient to capitalist interests.

The End of Parryism in Des Moines, Ia.

"The Citizens' Alliance of Des Moines, Ia., was formed over one year and a half ago. Its membership included all those who were members of the Builders' Exchange, Material Men's Exchange, Merchants' Exchange, and the Manufacturers' Association.

"After their organization had been perfected they served notice, through the public press, that they were going to wipe out of existence all labor organizations in that city.

"The journeymen plumbers were the first to lock horns with the Alliance on the first of March, 1904.

"Then followed the electrical workers about the middle of March.

"Next came the members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

"The above named organizations were locked out for over six weeks.

"On or about the 1st of January, 1904, the secretary of the district council of the U. B. of C. and J. of A. notified the secretary of the Contracting Carpenters' Association that the carpenters locals of Des Moines desired a renewal of last year's contract or agreement, to which the secretary of the Contractors' Association replied that their association would enter into no agreement whatever. The secretary of the district council of carpenters replied that the journeymen carpenters would work without an agreement.

"The first week in April passed and the contractors seeing that they were not going to strike, they, the employers, closed down all their mills and shops and buildings, and told the men they would have to sign an agreement with their employers to the effect that they had resigned their membership in the union and would not again become a member of any labor organization.

"This the members of the United Brotherhood refused to do, and started to do contracting for themselves.

"The contractors soon learned of this and demanded of the material men that they refuse to sell lumber to any member of the carpenters' union.

"The material men complied with the demands of the contractors and the hardware merchants likewise. The lockout was then complete.

"The members of the various unions held daily meetings; conducted themselves in an orderly manner, and watched patiently the progress of the lockout. They finally became impatient with the manner in which their employers were handling their first strike or lockout and took a hand in the matter themselves.

"The United Brotherhood locals appointed a committee of three and sent them to Chicago to inquire if there was any lumber and hardware for sale in that city. They returned and reported that they could get all the lumber and hardware they wanted—all that was necessary was the money.

"A special meeting of the carpenters was called and over $10,000 in cash was subscribed towards starting a co-operative lumber yard and hardware store. They purchased their lumber from Green & Co. (the lumber privates of the west, as they are called by the Lumber Dealers' Association), and their hardware and other building material from well known firms in Chicago.

"When the members of the Citizens' Alliance learned of the first ten carloads of lumber to arrive in Des Moines the members of the Material Men's Association, so-called, were frantic in their efforts to bring about a settlement.

"The District Council of Carpenters and Joiners appointed a committee to meet with a committee from the contracting carpenters, as the carpenters informed the Alliance they had nothing to do with dry goods merchants, butchers, patent medicine men, etc., but the committee must be contracting carpenters. The committees met and not only got a written agreement for one year, but an advance of two and one-half cents per hour to make up for the time lost in enforced idleness and all men to return to their former positions. The men all returned to work.

"The members of the Material Men's Association presented bills to the Citizen's Alliance for money lost in closing their lumber yards during the lockout. There was not sufficient money in the treasury of the Citizen's Alliance to pay the bills presented. Lawsuits followed thick and fast. The Alliance scattered to the winds, and thus ended Parryism in Des Moines, Iowa.

"But the Carpenters' Co-operative Lumber Yard and Hardware Store Co. is still doing business and all carpenters are working."—Wm. B. Macfarlane, General Organizer.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Right and Wrong of Strikes.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

Having read an article in a recent issue on sympathetic strikes, I would like you to publish this letter (if you can afford the space in THE CARPENTER), which will embody my views on the "Right and Wrong of Strikes."

What is a strike? A strike is a concerted suspension of work by wage-workers, of either sex, in the employ of wage-payers for an alleged non-fulfillment of a contract, or as a protest at the alleged imposition of new demands, or for the sake of obtaining some benefit declared to be deserved on account of new conditions in the line of industry pursued, or in the cost of living, or for the correction of personal offenses against wage-workers.

In any contract or business relation between the wage-worker and the wage-payer, the two parties should meet on terms of complete equality in respect to the law, to natural common rights, to the claims of respect and courtesy, to all the obligations of fair and patient consideration. This excludes, on the part of the wage-laborer, jealousy, suspicion, eye-service, or sham work, under the influence of class feeling or resentment. It excludes on the part of the wage-payer contempt, national, or sectional, or personal prejudice, all taking advantage from a sense of superior power or social standing, or from any traditional sentiment due to past social distinctions.

That any number of men in this country have a right to combine, organize and act together for the lawful promotion of their convictions or their common interests, ought by this time to be beyond dispute. If a number of men may combine, or organize, to raise or keep up the price of oil, meat, or sugar, then there may be a union to keep up the price of labor. An organization of workmen for that purpose is far less likely to do mischief than are the manufacturers or the trafficking monopolists, who overtax the many for the aggrandizement of the few. It will be likelier to have in it manlier men, better characters, and a more disinterested public spirit. Politicians, who have no scruples in damaging and obstructing one another's parties by all sorts of devices, are shocked when they hear, and sometimes when they only suspect, that labor men are doing the same thing. The game is bad for both of them. It takes time to convince unwilling minds, but time and experience will do it.

It sounds well to say that labor cannot live without capital. In point of fact, taking capital in its technical scientific sense, there is a conceivable, and not impossible, industrial and social state where labor can live without capital independently and comfortably. It has done so, and may do so again. At any rate, capital knows very well that without labor their capital would not, in most cases, have been created, and, if created, would speedily disappear.

We hear it offered as an excuse for a sharp policy on the part of capital, that the working classes are in no danger of depression, in fact that they rather need to be kept down by the strong hand. Is it true? By a report some time ago from the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics of Labor, "one-third of all the persons engaged in remunerative labor are unemployed at their principal occupation for about one-third of their working time." The average annual wage of the operatives in the ninety manufacturing establishments in New England, as shown by a professor of the Massachusetts State Agricultural College, was, but a few years ago, $441; of the proprietors, $4,983. If one has but the time and patience to investigate, he will find that about 250,000 families control 75 to 80 per cent. of the national wealth and pay but 27 per cent. of taxes for the support of the government; while the owners of but a quarter of the property pay 73 per cent. In any contract or business relation between the wage laborer and the wage-payer, no transaction is righteous where the necessities, the weakness, the dependence of the laborer are directly or indirectly made to reduce the price of his service below an equitable mark, or to delay payment.

One of the principles of organized labor is to persuade employers to arbitrate all differences which may arise between them and their employes in order that the bonds of sympathy between them may be strengthened and that strikes may be rendered unnecessary. The primary preventive of strikes is definiteness and particularly in the original agreement of contract between the employer and the employed. The specifications could easily be made to meet ordinary cases of difference, and forestall a rupture.

Membership in an association representing a social theory, or a plan of mutual support without any hostile purpose toward any particular institution or enterprise, is no more a justification for discharging workmen than is membership of the officers of a railroad in a political club a justification for an abandonment by the workmen of their work.

Justice demands that, except in extreme necessity, the act which on either side dissolves the contract or suspends the work should not be sudden. The suddenness is a needless element in the injury. Unless there is a patent or actual outrage, notice ought to be given and an opportunity afforded for an amicable adjustment. Either party may apprehend that the other will take advantage of the notice to secure itself and damage the antagonist.

Taking into account the disturbances, the damage to related branches of business, the risk of loss, temporary at least, to one or both parties, the uncertainty of the result, and the probable provocation to ill-temper and consequent alienation, the strike must be regarded as an evil—a measure to be resorted to only in the last extremity, when all other modes of remedy or satisfaction have first been tried.

No strike can be justified on the ground of reduced wages where it can be proved by the board of arbitration, or otherwise, that the market value of the product of the industry is insufficient to sustain wages at the regular rate. The employer should be compelled to show his books, the workman what it cost him to live, and fully explain his embarrassment in meeting present prices.

In cases of difference, however exasperating, a wise forecast will keep both parties in mind that every such struggle has effects far beyond the immediate issue, and that in the present and prospective state of public feeling any settlement brought about by sheer coercion is to be deprecated as leaving behind irritation instead of mutual good will, and the discontent of an unhealed wound instead of mutual confidence.

Serious and needless losses are suffered among workmen and their families by haste, indiscretion and assumption in exciting and ordering strikes where they are not warranted by sufficient cause. If organizations are needed to prevent this mischief, organization becomes an imperative duty. No rash indignation, no appeals to pride or class spirit, no false loyalty to an irresponsible society, will excuse a wanton waste of time and family comfort. Workingmen lose by it not only what they can not afford to lose in their own welfare; they lose the respect and sympathy of the wiser part of the community standing ready to befriend them.

The wage-earning classes need every bit of mental capacity which they possess or can acquire to enable them to attain well being in the struggle of modern industrial life. The wage-earning classes, as classes, must act solidly together. The solidarity of their interest can be disputed by no fair-minded and competent observer. Industrial and moral worth, not wealth, is the true standard of individual and national greatness.

HENRY J. D. MAY,
L. U. 1345.

From Porto Rico.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

The recently arrived new Civil Governor of this island, Mr. Winthrop, has taken charge of his office. He found the country, of which he is now the highest executive officer, in a lamentable condition, and its working population on the verge of starvation. In his inaugural address the new Governor pays us a true compliment, bidding us to assist him in the execution of his functions, to co-operate with him in the work before his eyes, to courageously brave the many vicissitudes that the people of this country may have to combat and to wipe out the misery prevailing among its toilers.

We, the working men, cherish some hope. The arrival of Mr. Winthrop has aroused great excitement among us and we are all awaiting new and beneficial reforms and new inspirations to take hold of the minds of the people of the land. The great interest the workingmen of Porto Rico are taking in the assumption of his office by the new Governor was manifested in San Juan in a procession formed by and composed of the twenty-seven different labor organizations enrolled under the banner of the American Federation of Labor. The procession marched through all the main streets of the capital, with banners corresponding with colors and emblems of the respective unions. One of these banners distinguished itself greatly—that of the carpenters. Their members wore the badges and buttons of our United Brotherhood.

Without doubt the new Governor was surprised when passing over the avenues of our shores to find the people of this country, or the politicians rather, completely divided in their politics, while the more intelligent workmen, those who are not the creatures of the politicians, are showing their absolute neutrality in party politics.

The poor class of the people here, as a rule, is and has been dissatisfied with the proceedings of the government, and what has been said by us at previous occasions concerning the political and economical conditions of this country is our incontestable expression of our honest opinion. If one could weigh the political personnel and the workingmen as though they were in a scale, one would find that the working class has been elevated somewhat intellectually and morally through and within our movement. In other words, the organized workers and those under their influence, have escaped political debasement and entered the labor movement cleansed from all impurities of their former associations.

Stay Away Notices Should Be Discouraged.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

Never having seen anything in our journal from this place, I write these few lines to say that the practice in vogue among many local unions of advising carpenters, through the columns of our journal, to stay away from their respective localities, ought to be discouraged, and the publication of towns and cities where work is dull should be discontinued and eliminated.

I claim that publication of notices of this kind entirely fails to have the desired effect, as it attracts the attention of non-union men to localities where they are least wanted and induces them to flock to these very cities or towns, while on the other hand it has a tendency of keeping union men away, who would help the local union in their strife for better conditions. I say, don't discourage any union men from going to any locality he likes to go to; if one man is not able to make a living there maybe another one can and still be a union man at heart and live up to his obligations. Let us all try to help one another.

Geo. Ballard, of Mattoon, Ill., has the contract for a church in Coshoc-ton, O., and also for a church in Decatur, Ill. He is an unfair contractor, and our sister-local unions in the localities named would do well by having a watchful eye on him. May be they can bring him to terms, which we have failed to do, owing to our weakness.

Open Shop and Arbitration in New York City.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

What does this recently discovered "cure-all," the "open shop," stand for? While the capitalists feign to be so solicitous for and concerned about the welfare of the unemployed, is it not clear to any unbiased mind that the inauguration of the open shop is the entering wedge for the destruction of labor organization and thus for cheaper labor and longer hours? And does not an increase of the working hours result in diminishing the opportunity of the unemployed to earn a livelihood? We hear a considerable amount of rot about the divine right of any man, union or non-union, to labor—labor for what? For a mere existence! Who ever heard of an employer voluntarily raising wages one cent? What would our rate of wages be, and how many hours would we be compelled to work, if labor organization was not in existence, if through its effort we had not obtained a minimum rate of wages (which in most cases is the maximum) and decent working hours? Are we now to go back twenty years, to twenty shillings and ten hours, six days in the week? This is exactly what the open (scab) shop means, and how would that benefit the unemployed? It is a fact beyond contradiction that unionism, by reducing the hours of toil, has increased the opportunity of the unemployed to secure employment and better their condition as well as the condition of the union men.

The "open shop" and the jug-handled so-called "arbitration" is favorable to the bosses only and a detriment to all wage earners alike.

The arbitration agreement forced upon us in New York City about a year ago stands as evidence for this assertion. According to the provisions of this agreement, while arriving at a decision in any controversy or grievance, the job in question would be finished before a settlement could be reached. The New York employers, in insisting on a majority of representation in the Board of Arbitration, makes it ridiculous as a judicial and deliberative body and destroys all hope of redress in disputes of wages, hours, etc. This kind of arbitration is only a delusion and a snare, calculated to blind the general public.

I, therefore, claim that both the open shop and the one-sided arbitration are inimical to true union principles and simply a retrogression to barbarism; in other words, a colossal fake!

Yours truly,

Bro. Douglass on the Negro Question.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

In the report of our Second Vice-President, R. E. L. Connolly, published in July CARPENTER, I find that he styles the negro question "that senseless color question." Now, I desire to state that L. U. 1725, Daytona, Fla., notwithstanding representations to the contrary, has done nothing antagonistic to our General Constitution or their own local by-laws.

Bro. Connolly's idea may be correct from his exalted view point of our "senseless color question," but a large majority of carpenters or L. U. 1725, Daytona, Fla., beg leave to differ with him. We recognize the right of contractors to employ union labor of any race created by God, but reserve the right of not working with them if we individually so decide. I am fully convinced that, for the good of our U. B., all local unions, especially those in the South, should be free to meet this negro question according to their environments. Should the U. B. in convention or otherwise attempt by law to encourage a spirit along the lines advocated by our Second Vice-President it would kill organized labor here in Daytona deadlier than African slavery. From my knowledge and experience of the negro (as a race), he does not want this so-called "equality." It is a fact beyond successful contradiction that if a white man puts himself on a level with a negro the negro immediately loses all respect for the white man. Bro. Connolly's idea on this "senseless color question" will certainly not go in Daytona, Fla., and I would say that in following up this idea he is treading on dangerous ground and not for the good of our U. B., especially so in this section of our country.

Fraternally yours,
J. A. DOUGLASS,

The Disastrous Effect of Political Agitation in Trade Unions.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

In the August number of THE CARPENTER we find a resolution offered by L. U. 1410, Boston, Mass., demanding that our General Constitution be so changed as to permit the discussion of questions of political nature in the meetings of local unions.

To be frank, we will say that we believe the delegates to our convention to be possessed of too much common sense as to vote for the adoption of this resolution. For the sake of argument, however, and for the benefit of the members of the U. B., we will give a brief sketch of certain occurrences in the city of Erie, Pa., within the past three years.

The resolution, preceded by a series of "whereases," winds up thus: Resolved, "That the General Constitution be so amended as to not only permit of discussion of such questions of political nature as pertain to the welfare of our class, but also to urge upon local unions the necessity of instructing their members in matters of this kind." Brothers of the U. B., stop and think. We have increased in number during the past few years until our number is second only to the great organization of Mine Workers. We lead all others, except this one. Simultaneously with our numerical strength we have grown in power and influence. Shall our grand achievements come to naught by placing ourselves in a position where we are a whipping stool for any political party—Democratic, Republican, Socialistic, Prohibitionistic or any other "istic" in control of certain sections of our country?

Here in Erie we have tasted bitterly of the effects of the introduction of politics in labor circles. Ten years ago Erie was in the proud position of being one of the strongest organized cities in the State of Pennsylvania. We had 64 labor organizations affiliated with the Central Labor Union. A movement to get redress for a wrong to any union, either in our own city or outside of it, met with a hearty response. Labor at that time was king. Then came the entering wedge of disruption, "discussion on political questions." Labor put a municipal ticket in the field and 1,047 votes were cast in its favor on the first trial. One year later a labor candidate for Mayor received 3,386 votes. This campaign, with its bright prospects, brought outside talent into our field. Note the result. Our city elections are held in February. An orator brought from Chicago (when he arrived his clothes were threadbare, dirty and old), dumped into our local field, joined the "Laborers' Protective Union" and sent by this organization to the C. L. U. as a delegate. On the first of May this man was elected Business Agent to represent what had grown to be a solid wall of labor lined up to stand together and fight our battles as brothers.

This man, a stranger to all, having a working majority of the central body pledged to politics, soon forged to the front and the inevitable result came sure and swift.

Unions, theretofore solid, began to divide; the line was drawn very close. If you were with the "leaders," you had a voice, if not, you were a nonentity.

The Printers and Cigarmakers, acknowledged to be the brain of organized labor wherever they are known, were the first to revolt, and one year ago, this date, both of these organizations took up the battle. They sent new delegates to the central body, men who were not easily led by "hot air." Other unions followed suit, and on April 6th last the roaches of trades unionism were voted down and out.

The new officers, on taking possession of the books, etc., found a deplorable state of affairs. Where the Central Labor Union should have hundreds of dollars in their treasury they found 8 cents in cash and debts of about $500 unpaid. We had a labor paper, which, though it never proved a gold mine or one of profit, was issued in the interest of labor. This, too, under the reign of these leaders, was absorbed by them, turned into a "Socialist" sheet and run for political purposes alone; issue after issue never speaking a good word for the labor unions; nay, vilifying them whenever any space was allowed them for anything in the line of labor news.

After years of effort we had bought a "Labor Temple," a home for our use. This temple also came under the influence of a so-called club; a speak-easy flourished in its walls; the Treasurer of the Club being the imported orator.

After thus allowing ourselves to be carried away and misled by imposters and demagogues, and after our many mistakes of the three years passed, the situation has now changed. The paper has "busted," and is now owned by a beer trust, the ones who started and established it have reaped their harvest in bitter experience. The Carpenters, who also donated toward its establishment, are no exception.

The Central Labor Union, for the past five months, has made strenuous efforts to redeem itself; the temple, representing a $30,000 investment, has been cleaned and we hope to save it. This is the result of the introduction of politics in the trades union movement in Erie, Pa. May it serve the local unions of the U. B. as a warning not to allow politics, under whatever disguise, to creep into their organization. Brothers, think twice before opening your laws to any discussion of questions of political character.

A Home Erected and Owned by Trades Unions.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

Believing it to be interesting news to the members of the U. B., we desire the publication of the following in an early issue of our journal:

The trade unions of Jacksonville, Ill., have erected a Labor Temple, which is now completed and is the property of their own.

In January last we started collecting the money required for the purchase of a lot, and after having been successful in that, the different building trades did their part of the work in the erection and construction of the building. It is situated one-half block southeast of the public square. Has three stories and a basement, and is of brick. The work of construction was done free of charge, while the trades not connected with the building industry furnished the money for the material. We had to work hard, of course, to accomplish our end. After we had the roof on, there was no idle carpenter or painter in the city. Each night, after supper, we would go to the building and work until 10 or 11 o'clock at night, until we had it finished up and in good shape.

The building is 20x60 feet. The third floor consists of a hall the full size of the building and is occupied by the Trades Assembly. The second floor has two halls assigned to the meetings of the various unions, and the floor has an office 16x20 feet and an amusement, or smoking room, 20x40 feet. The basement is also full size, 20x60 feet, and 8 feet deep, and is used for the storage of boiler, coal and other fuel. The building is heated by steam throughout and illuminated by gas as well as electricity.

Now we have a home, erected and owned by ourselves; we are proud of it and would urge other cities to follow our example.

Plans to Form United Labor Party.

Editor THE CARPENTER:

How is capital formed, how it grew to its present mammoth proportions, and what danger it entails, are questions of vital importance, and should attract the immediate attention of all wage earners.

Ignorance and indifference are the factors mainly instrumental in permitting capital to become what it is to-day—the dominant power.

The idea so prevalent among the wage earners that the government is based on the consent of the governed must be eliminated, and immediate steps taken to establish the premise.

With the first introduction of machinery came the change from a government of the people to a government by machine owners, or capitalists.

The only law known to the capitalist is that of greed, and no consideration will be shown the producer of capital.

The capitalists organize for the purpose of concentrating their power so that it will be the more effective in enslaving, in controlling the government, in enacting laws that will destroy the constitutional rights of the American wage earner.

Is it befitting the toiler to resent and attempt to cast off those shackles, that because of his ignorance and indifference, have become fastened to him?

If the 3,000,000 organized wage earners would depart from the narrow path in which their movement is confined, broaden out, adopt methods of a political nature, the possibilities of increasing wages, shortening the work day, etc., would no longer be a question and the struggles and privations that attend every attempt to promote their interests would become things of the past.

A United Labor Party, representing the interests of the wage earner whose power would become supreme by the casting of a ballot, as compared with the power attained by strike or boycott, with the suffering entailed in promoting the same, certainly must appear feasible.

With 3,000,000 wage earners to inaugurate the party, and the possibility of all wage earners becoming parties to it, because of the more apparent solution it offers for all labor difficulties, its success is assured.

The trade unions must constitute the schools, its members the disciples, in getting converts, and both will unite in formulating a platform that will give general satisfaction to all but the capitalist.

Poking Fun at Employers.

The members of the affiliated Building Trades of Bloomfield and Montclair, N. J., who were locked out several weeks ago by the Master Builders' Association, because they refused to arbitrate their differences, recently went to Bayonne for a shore dinner. The menu card was as follows:

Open Shop Clam Chowder—Nit.
Non-Scab Steamed Clams, with Independent Sauce.

Blue Fish, a la Mode, with Organized Sauce.
Frozen Boss Lobster. Affiliated Chicken.
Delegated Ice Cream, containing the Milk of Human Kindness.

On the reverse side of the card was a piece of poetry entitled, "How Jim Dumps Became Sunny Jim" (with apologies to "Force"). It was as follows:

Jim Dumps was a non-union man
Who worked from day to day;
Each month provisions higher ran,
But Jim got lesser pay.

Employers at non-union Jim Could shout in language coarse;
Yet they such wages paid to him
As would not purchase "Force."

Now Jim has joined the union,
And is full of life and vim;
He is no more to feel the hand
Upraised to threaten him.

His disposition sunny grew,
With pay no longer slim;
His fellow-men, his bosses, too,
Respect and honor Jim.

Jim Dumps, who was a tool of trade,
Obliging a master's whim,
Has now become when union made,

An independent Jim.
The card was sent to the bosses with "compliments."

Labors' Holiday.

"It has been the rule when writing on the subject of Labor's great holiday to recite the history of labor unions and to dwell in perverted language on their struggles and achievements. Back to the days in the desert when dumb and brawny slaves raised and bedded the mammoth stones of the pyramids; thence to the brick fields of Menepthah, where the children of Israel were compelled to make bricks without straw; thence over roads built by its slaves and into the trade-union halls of ancient Rome; thence to the days of the guilds, with their many variations of forms and purpose, and from these to the first of English trade unions, whose meetings were held in secret, and membership in which was almost included in the many capital offenses of that time—back to the labyrinthine passage of history it has been the fashion to carry the reader, that Labor day might find him in the proper mood for its observance.

A sad history, and yet a glorius one, this story of the weak in their common efforts to resist the strong. It encompasses the history of man's industrial and social freedom, and from its pages might be written the account of the beginnings of his religious and political freedom. It is the text-book of civilization! There is no danger that it shall be forgotten.

But what of today!

All around us history is being made. There is that being done which, if we be not vigilant and ever watchful, shall take from us what we have obtained at great sacrifice and our movement set back many years. In our building we have evidently left something undone, for great as our movement is it suddenly finds itself surrounded by enemies in gigantic formation. They are pressing in upon us; every day brings us nearer and nearer a titanic final struggle whose issue no man can contemplate with easy indifference. On their side are unlimited wealth, a subsidized press, controlled courts, corrupted legislatures and Peabody's potential and active.

From the police captain who urges his men in time of strikes to club and spare not, to the judge with his ever-ready anti-labor injunction, and from him to the military satrap who declares "To hell with the Constitution!" there is an array of strength and influence that we cannot blind ourselves to. A wave of Parryism sweeps over the country. Wherever laws are made or administered there it breaks against the doors like an angry sea. Even candidates for public office, high and low, are silenced, and dare not speak a friendly word for those without whose millions of votes they cannot hope for election.

No need to go back, we reiterate, for history bids fair to repeat itself. Upward slowly through the centuries have we climbed and now we find that our progress is to be checked. Then why look back? Rather let us look about us, and then look upward and forward, and go on.

But enough. What is to be done. That is the question. It is plain that we have failed somewhere. We have raised wages, shortened the workday, and in many other ways have raised the standard of living. But as American workingmen what have we done to protect our legal rights? What have we done to have a direct voice in the making of our legislation? When in Congress have we had one who could speak for us, one of our own? How many have we had in the state legislatures who wore the cap of labor?

Whenever we have had need to ask for legislation, and that has been almost every day, our torpidity has obliged us to come cap in hand, daring to raise our voice hardly above a bondsman's key. Those to whom we have addressed our petitions, our memorials and our arguments knew that it was our votes that made them; but in their sleeves they laughed at our self-imposed helplessness. They knew that they could refuse us anything, and that when they should come again to seek our suffrages we should have forgotten. Coming they filled our ears with promises, and immediately afterward denied us the substance. For a time we waxed indignant and fumed and spluttered over what we were going to do; but those who deceived us knew us better than we knew ourselves, and so the farce has gone on with sickening monotony.

But bull-pen governors and courts, that trample the Constitution under their feet in their hatred of us must be answered. The political servitude into which we have led ourselves we must leave behind. The Israelites who quit the land of bondage had a Moses. We have none. But we must not wait for the coming of a Moses. Let him who has deceived us and comes among us again with fawning smile and beaming eye be marked that each may know him. And let all others of his kind who come asking our votes for the first time with promises quite as fair as his be not trusted. In this fair land of ours there are 12,000,000 working men, those who work with their hands. Are there not among all these, men who we can trust! Do they not feel as we do, work as we, and hope as we; and have not many of them proved their trustworthiness in hundreds of ways?

LET US ALL STRIKE—this time at the ballot box. While the opportunity is before us, any other striking would be as fighting the air. Rome was not built in a day, no more than liberty comes with wishing. While we have the votes, we are at present without the necessary organization and agreement to obtain the fullest possible return for them; but in many places this fall we can make our strength felt, and thus lay a good foundation. Here an enemy can be punished, and yonder a friend rewarded. But through it all we must lose no chance to send to the legislatures men of our own kind. Not that of "Workingmen's Candidates," whom politicians set up as a decoy, but men whom we know to be clean and able; not parasites or fakirs of any kind.

If as American workingmen we make the most of the opportunity before us, we can then go on welding our forces into a great political power, conscious of its strength and jealous of its rights, and in a little time have not only personal representation in the legislatures but also upon the floor of Congress. This will not solve the labor question; but it will help us to fight off our enemies, who would solve that question by deciding it for themselves. They will rage against our taking any part in politics that many mean that we are no longer to throw our votes away, and they will send their agents among us to warn us against the "folly" of such course. But they it was who taught us this lesson. They have gone into politics, and in such thorough manner as to control and dominate completely. They are no longer satisfied with a "third house" although they still maintain this political asset. In their campaign against us they have not scrupled to employ every means of a political kind, and if we do not meet them squarely upon the political battlefield, where the contest would be more nearly equal, on the industrial we must fail. The time is here for us to act, not along old lines, but in the way outlined here. But, if with a full consciousness of our position, we are to be led like so many sheep to the slaughter, we should not cry out when we feel the knife."—From the Bricklayer and Mason.

Porto Rican Notes.

Porto Rican architecture and Porto Rican edifice construction are of a character to greatly interest and amuse the American whose life work may be bounded by these professions in his native land. Tourists will search the island in vain for specimens of high art and clever design in either stone or wood, but at the same time they will be well repaid for what they have seen by the way on their trip. It is a fact that both architecture and building have received a wonderful impetus since Uncle Sam raised his flag here, but because of many peculiar climatic and geological conditions, the American builder learns many a useful lesson from his Spanish predecessors, although he may at first disdain to again become a student.

This is a land of earthquakes and hurricanes, and no matter how beautiful a lofty front elevation may appear on paper, the practical construction of the building must take these two important contingencies into consideration. It is true, there is not a hurricane every week nor an earthquake every month, but both these unpleasant visitants come frequently enough to compel their remembrance and recognition when plans are drawn. It is this that the American architect is forced to learn, although it grates against his professional sensibilities to sacrifice grace, beauty and convenience to safety. Spanish builders learned the bitter lesson centuries ago, and the manner of construction in all of the cities of the island shows that experience had due weight.

Architecturally there is nothing really wonderful to look upon throughout the entire island, be it church, cathedral, private residence or government building. The design—when there is any attempt at design—is an imitation of composite architecture. There are innovations in the building line, however, which gain for the island several points in novelty, even if there is nothing to dilate upon in the way of beauty.

About the most noticeable odd thing to the man from the States is the practice in the construction of houses, to encircle the frame skeleton with a heavy chain. This chain is grooved in the uprights at the corners, and the joining links welded by a smithy on the spot. Thus the Spanish builder bids defiance, as far as he can, to both hurricane and earthquake. When the house is erected on a hill, the transverse beams at the foundation are chained to parallel beams laid in trenches and packed with cement. Speaking of cement, the Porto Ricans for years have blended wood and cement work wherever feasible. It is a common thing to see a cement base constructed about the grounds of a house of the better class, into which wooden posts are mortised, and along these fences slatting nailed.

Porto Rican architects, while admitting the superior convenience and design of the dwellings and schools erected by American builders, maintain that they must fall just as soon as the first earthquake or hurricane strikes the island. There was an earthquake of five seconds' duration in the Lares district on July 2d, and the native builders have been shaking their heads ominously ever since.

By order of the old Spanish government, houses near the bay front were compulsorily restricted to one story. The custom house is but one story. The reason given for this rule was that in case of a siege the enemy's shot aimed at the San Juan fortifications, would do no damage near the wharves. Houses over one story in height might have been hit, as they would have been within the line of elevation reaching from the attacking ships to the fortifications of Morro Castle and San Cristobel on the heights.

Within the limits of the cities of Porto Rico, almost to a house, the dwellings are of some kind of stone. Cement surfaces are in evidence everywhere; the front, side and rear elevations being plastered with this material over rough stone of the kind frequently used for foundation work in the States. In rural districts frame or wooden houses are seen. The architecture of some of the latter is puzzlingly ornate. Every order is visible and painted to resemble every pigment of the rainbow. The peon or laborer lives in a little shack he constructs very much after the order of a hay rick, elevated a few feet on posts.

There is no such thing as a house in a city without a balcony, nor in the country without a porch covering the entire frontage. Plaster ceilings are unknown, from the governor's palace to the humblest habitation. Exposed beams are painted all hues. There is no wainscoting. Sash windows with glass are a rarity. The windows are practically all doors. The wood and joiner work is of the heaviest character, as though intended to resist a siege. Steel ceilings have been tried since the American occupation and found to increase the temperature by holding the intense sun heat. The governor's palace and the government buildings are architecturally severe. If anything, they are Corinthian in order, although there is very little of the columnar and much of the balustrade from ground to roof. The material is partly a composition stone and partly a sort of sandstone, only a true white and much harder.

Contractors of the United States would be driven to madness if Porto Rican customs prevailed there. A contract with a penalty is treated with elastic tolerance. Six months is taken to finish a three months' contract. "Manana" or to-morrow is the perpetual promise. There is always something wrong that is not the contractor's fault—if you are to believe what he says. And what are you going to do? Make a contract with another man and he repeats the performance. It only takes one or two trials and the American kicker submits to the Porto Rican inoculation. He may get into the "Manana" habit himself through very despair. Lumber soaked by the rain, because not sheltered by the contractor, is deemed a sufficiently good excuse to suspend work for a week. There are a multitude of other reasons that would be the pinnacle of absurdity up North, but which seem to go here. Of course, American methods will eventually prevail, but the time will be long, the kicking will be constant, and the patience of the United States contractor often on the verge of exhaustion before the new era sets in. —The National Builder.

THE GENESIS OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF CARPENTERS.

BY GABRIEL EDMONSTON, FIRST GENERAL PRESIDENT.

O SAY that the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America had its birth at Chicago in August, 1881, would be strictly correct.

But the rapid stride in the industrial development of our country, the increased facilities of travel and the advantages held by the employer were for a decade previous pregnant signs of an industrial upheaval that was to mark a new era for the workman.

This march of progress would ultimately have forced the unification of our craft, even though the men who formed that first convention had never existed. It is not my purpose to disparage their efforts. They deserve the honor and credit of being the chosen representatives of the combined intelligence of the journeymen carpenters as expressed by organization. They felt by actual experience the evils bearing on their chosen avocation and, rejecting the propaganda of the anarchist, directed a peaceful, lawful mode of altering and amending the conditions of employment.

There are but few of the delegates to that first General Convention of the carpenters now living: J. D. Allen, T. P. Doran, L. F. Lincoln, L. E. Pake and J. C. Sheider. Their testimony is worth preserving. A few more years and that source of information will be gone.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America has achieved a proud history during the past twenty-three years, and it is to be regretted that the record has not been systematically recorded at the General Office. Our present General Secretary when called upon for information is too often compelled to answer "There is no record on file in this office." It is with the purpose of reconstructing the past history as far as I may be able that I have assumed this task at the request of the General Office at a time when my physical condition demands quiet and rest. I would wish to tell the story of the carpenters' struggle of 1880-81 in a manner that would impress the younger element with the fact that what has been fought for and won by great sacrifices is worth preserving.

GABRIEL EDMONSTON, First General President

Prior to the formation of "The Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America" the condition of the journeymen was wretched in the extreme. The country was slowly recovering from one of our worst financial panics. Interest was ten per cent. per annum*, money was scarce and trade stagnation was the general complaint. Wages were so far below the cost of a decent living that the most skillful carpenters were often reduced to the point of beggary. The hours of labor were long. The introduction of the piece-work system, together with the constantly diminishing amount of yearly employment, owing to the multiplied use of machinery, was slowly but surely sapping the manhood of our craft. Chattel slavery had lately been abolished. In its place the wage slave toiled under the lash of necessity without even the redeeming feature of the former system. His master (now the wage system) was no longer compelled by law to provide him with food, clothing, shelter and medical attention when accident or the infirmities of age rendered him no longer profitable. He now was allowed to become a public charge, or suffer the humiliation of burdening his offspring with his care in helpless old age. However much his employer might sympathize with him, and I can recall many noble acts of charity covering such cases on the part of bosses, it was not businesslike to keep an unprofitable hand.

The condition of the boss carpenter was not so far superior to that of the journeyman as might be imagined. He also was forced by the lash of competition to resort to methods that he knew were ruinous in the end. The lien laws of that period were either entirely wanting or so unjustly defective as to discourage the honest, reliable contractor and to encourage dishonest practices. It was a matter of no importance to the owner who contemplated building whether the wages were paid or the materials stolen, so that he got his work done at the lowest possible bid irrespective of the character of the bidder. The boss was making nothing and the journeyman was doing the work for barely enough to keep him in working condition. Many large contractors of that period were either forced into bankruptcy or so heavily loaded with debt as to impair their credit to a point where recovery was impossible. Added to these burdens of our trade was the stupidity of the subservient journeyman carpenter, who thought he could hold his job and command wages without the aid of a union. Let us see if he did.

In the fall of 1880 when wages were nominally $2 per day (in Washington, D. C.) the journeyman was required to work "three-quarter time" by reason of the shortening of the hours of daylight, hence his wages were reduced to $1.50 for one day's labor. Piece work even under a voluntary drive netted him less than $1 for his day's work. Even this latter amount was accepted and the workman excused himself with that old saw "a half loaf is better than no bread." Doubtless his patient wife and helpless children also accepted the meagre fare as the will of God and at the same time wishing that her better half had something of the man in his makeup and not accuse the Almighty of His shortcomings.

The bosses, individually, could do nothing. The situation demanded that the journeymen should assert their position as important factors in the business of home builders as well as home makers for their families; should assert their position in the social compact and demand that the way to honest, respectable citizenship should be open to them as well as to the professional or commercial class. This they did and the results shown at this date is surprising. It is now possible for the journeyman carpenter to own his own house, to live better, to educate his children and allow them to develop on natural lines, and, thanks to the eight-hour work day, to have time to read the papers and keep himself posted on matters of interest. Within his reach is also the secret of success if he diligently seeks it. I will add, however, that it is my opinion that it is not found in any form of gambling enterprises, but rather step by step, little by little; small, systematic savings doggedly persisted in bring the best results. The bosses are also now making something. Their financial standing is an important item in considering the award of contracts. The percentage plan of doing work is slowly making headway against the old style of trying to get one hundred dollars' worth of work done for ninety in cash. People who have the means to build now understand that their property is liable for every day's labor spent and every foot of material used in its construction.

No fair-minded boss carpenter can deny that the formation of the Brotherhood of Carpenters is responsible for the bettered condition of our trade, affecting both himself and the journeyman. His profit now on the $3.50 hand is double what it was in 1881 and his prediction that the trade union demands would entirely stop building enterprises has not proven true.

So far we have won our fight for better condition with crude weapons, but prehistoric man in the neolithic age carved the way to civilization with his chipped stone implements. Trade unionism in America is still in its infancy, and the thinking men in its ranks are earnestly seeking a better mode of settling grievances than by the strike. Conciliation and arbitration has already led to a better understanding between employer and employee with a net result of good to both.

I have dwelt somewhat largely on the conditions affecting our trade immediately preceding the formation of our national union in order to impress as forcibly as possible on the younger element of our order that, what was won by great sacrifices is not only worth maintaining at any cost, but to them belongs the task of carrying forward the project to its ultimate conclusion. The home builders must take the front rank in the battle for wages.

cussed the means of getting one. They might have had a stereotyped prayer from the Knights of Labor prayer-book, if it had fitted the case, or they could have suppressed the national spirit and sent over to the old country for their plan and thus become the tail of the English kite. They did neither. The three St. Louis unions with a large German-American element, took the initiative by appointing a "provisional committee" April 24, 1881. This body organized by electing Gustav Luebker Chairman and P. J. McGuire Secretary. I regret that I dorsement of the Christian minority. It grew so cold that we had to get out at each stop and skirmish for wood to keep the car warm. The day previous being warm, we sat at open windows, and the soft coal used in the locomotive made a visible impression on the passengers. Soap and towels on a day coach at that date were not thought of by the railroad.

Arriving at Chicago early the second day, we were met by a reception committee and conducted to the homes assigned to us. After changing our complexion with soap and water and

The roll call showed thirty-six delegates from eleven cities. There were "fourteen unions with a membership of 4,672, as shown by reports of delegates," on the second day's session. Gustav Luebker represented Indian-

The cut shown is the only group of delegates that could be gotten together after the convention closed. The first line standing, beginning on the right, is Gorg, Goodwin, Wind, Oberdeck and Walton. The line sitting, beginning on the right, is Matthieson, Edmonston and Gregg. I may be mistaken in some of these names, but of Gregg and Walton there can be no dispute.

At the opening of the year 1881 organization among the carpenters was confined to purely local affairs in a dozen or more large cities. It was in these gatherings that the larger view of the elevation of our trade took firm root. The complete unification of our craft was the objective point. The tendency then, as it still remains, was to subdivide our trade. There was the carpenter, the stair builder, the framer, the cabinet maker, and the mill hand. To this classification has since been added the floor layers. Next I suppose will be added the jam-setters, the trim-setters and the door-hangers, which will completely wipe out the trade that Christ once honored. The complete unification of our craft means that every man who works with the tools of our trade sufficiently well to command wages is a carpenter and joiner to all intents and purposes. He must submit himself to the jurisdiction of our organization or antagonize it to his own injury, as well as his fellow-workmen. This view of the situation was taken at the start and was substantially embodied in the constitution adopted at Chicago in 1881, and needs no comparison or arguments in this article to support its complete justice.

The men of 1881 were not out courting with their grandmothers' love letters to guide them. They wanted a national union of carpenters, and dis-have not a full list of the names of that committee, as they should be perpetuated in our organization. Their first step was, after consulting the two Chicago unions, to issue a small four-page 8x10 sheet called the "Carpenter," in which they published a call for a convention of organized carpenters to meet in Chicago August 8, 1881, for the purpose of forming a national body. It was also announced that the Chicago carpenters would house and feed the delegates free of cost to the unions represented. This they did in a style that was suggestive of the famous Southern hospitality. The big pot and the little pot were put on the fire, the best blue-edged plates and the newest table linen were brought into use. The good wife worked extra hours without additional pay to contribute her share toward the success of the enterprise. The Washington Union was put to very little expense, as their delegates took advantage of a rate war between the railroads and secured round-trip tickets to Chicago for nine dollars each. Brother Dave Gregg and myself, to save our Union the expense of sleeping-car fare, rode the twenty-six hours in the day coach. At nightfall the mercury dropped suddenly and there was no fuel in our coach. The remarks of the dozen or more passengers on the management of the railroad were forcible, but received no in-partaking heartily of the good things provided for us we went to the hall, 192 Washington street, which was in the upper story of a large warehouse, stored with flaxseed.

The Convention was called to order at 3 p. m., August 8, by Gustav Luebker, of St. Louis, Chairman of the Provisional Committee. The address of welcome was delivered by Brother Wm. D. Black, of the Chicago Unions. A temporary organization was affected by the election of the following officers: Chairman, J. P. Goodwin, Chicago; Vice-Chairman, A. Oberbeck, St. Louis; Secretary, J. R. Smith, Cincinnati. The following were elected as a Committee on Credentials: J. M. Kerr, Detroit; H. B. Kuhlman, Cincinnati; T. P. Doran, Chicago; J. M. House, Buffalo; J. G. Gorg, St. Louis. After a short recess they reported the following as entitled to be seated as delegates:

Cleveland, Donald McIntosh.
Indianapolis, Gustav Luebker.
Kansas City, John E. Walton.
Philadelphia, John D. Allen.
Buffalo, J. M. House, J. C. Scheider.
Detroit, J. M. Kerr, I. N. Evans.

apolis by proxy, but could not report any number of members.

The convention elected the following committees: Rules, McGuire, Comfort, Stollberg, Edmonston, Evans; Permanent Organization, Scheider, Miller, Luebker, Wind, Lincoln, Gregg, Allen.

A recess of a half hour was taken, when the Committee on Rules reported. The Committee on Permanent Organization reported, for President, J. R. Smith and R. W. Comfort. After the second ballot Comfort was elected.

The second day's session opened at 9 a. m., Goodwin in the chair; the remaining officers, as recommended by the Committee on Permanent Organization, were elected and installed. The officers elected stood: President, R. W. Comfort; Vice-President, John Ritter; Secretary, P. J. McGuire; Assistant Secretary, Thos. P. Doran; Sergeant-at-Arms, Richard Stateman. The Provisional Committee of the three St. Louis Unions submitted their report. On motion the delegates reported the condition of trade, number of members and items of interest as occurred to them. Upon resumption of regular order the Convention elected the following as Committee on Constitution: Allen, Smith, Gregg, Kerr, McGuire, Walton, House, Goodwin, Luebker. Adjourned until 2 p. m.

The afternoon session was called to order by President Comfort. The fol-

Adjournment for the day.

Wednesday (third day's session) was called to order by President Comfort. Committee on Constitution reported progress and asked for further time, which was granted. Committee on Finance reported that they had audited the accounts of the Provisional Committee and recommended that $57 be refunded the St. Louis Unions when the treasury was in a condition to do so; also that the Secretary be paid a salary and devote his entire time to the duties of his office. The Carpenter, to be the property of the Brotherhood and the official organ, printed in English and German and published in New York City, edited by the Secretary. Report of Committee on Constitution was read. A resolution was adopted instructing the Secretary to correspond with the carpenters in Canada with a view of bringing them into the Brotherhood. Adjourned until 2 p. m. Reconvened, but owing to the uncompleted work of committees adjourned until 8 p. m.

The Convention met at the appointed time and took up the report on Constitution. The Convention spent considerable time in the selection of the name, and finally settled on The Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

Thursday (fourth day's session)
called to order at 8 a. m. by President Comfort. The consideration of the report of the Committee on Constitution, which continued until 12:30. Adjourned until 2 p. m. Convention reassembled at 2 p. m., President Comfort in the chair. Report of Committee on Constitution was resumed, finally adopted and the committee discharged. Committee on Resolutions reported resolutions favoring shorter hours of work, recommending that no distinction be made in the hours of work in winter and summer; demanding uniform lien law, making a lien a first mortgage to secure labor first and material second; favoring the formation of Building Trade Leagues; demanding the abolishment of piece work; endorsing the call of the Terre Haute Convention for a universal Labor Congress to be held at Pittsburg on November 15, 1881. (This Labor Congress met at that time and formed the Federation of Trades, now

The American Federation of Labor.) Committee was discharged. The Convention fixed the salary of General Secretary at $15 per week.

On motion the Convention proceeded with the election of officers for the ensuing term of one year. Comfort, Allen and Edmonston were voted for.
Edmonston receiving 18 votes, Comfort 14, Allen 2. Gabriel Edmonston was declared elected and installed. For Vice-President, Ritter, Oberbeck and Henderson were the nominees. The ballot stood Ritter 14, Oberbeck 10, Henderson 8; no choice. Second ballot gave Ritter 19, Oberbeck 14. Ritter was declared elected. For Second Vice-President, Oberbeck and Black were nominated. Black received 19 votes, Oberbeck 14. For third Vice-President Oberbeck was elected. For Secretary, McGuire and Smith were nominated. Ballot stood McGuire 21, Smith 11. P. J. McGuire was declared elected. The Convention then fixed, by ballot, upon Philadelphia as the place of the next Convention. On motion, J. D. Allen was elected as the representative to the Pittsburg Convention.

President Edmonston appointed the following organizers:

Chicago, R. W. Comfort, J. P. Goodwin.

New York, John Ritter, Jacob Schneider.

Buffalo, J. C. Schneider, J. M. House.

Kansas City, John Beasley, J. E. Wal-

Cleveland, D. McIntosh, Jos. Buddinger.

Detroit, J. M. Kerr, J. N. Evans.

Washington, D. C., Edward Wayson, John Henderson.

Amid three ringing cheers for the Brotherhood, the first annual convention of carpenters adjourned sine die at 9 p. m. August 11, 1881.

The work of the Convention was done, and it remained to be demonstrated if the weakling was to survive the lack of nourishment provided.
It seems to have been a desire of the majority to build a cheap National Union so that it might not bear too heavily on the locals before they became satisfied of its paramount importance. A per capita of five cents to the General Office was expected to pay the salary of the General Secretary—$15 per week, publish "The Carpenter," pay a death benefit of four hundred dollars, a wife's benefit of fifty dollars, and the per capita to the Federation of Trades. The dues were not to be less than twenty-five cents per month, and the initiation not less than two dollars. If any trades unionist can point out where so cheap a National Union ever lived longer than a single month I would be glad to know the fact. It demonstrates to my mind the determination of the carpenters to get together and keep together, in spite of the most adverse faults of the Organization. The convention was divided into two factions; one part wanted a strictly protective union, and the other desired a benevolent body, leaving the protective features to the locals. They afterward became converted to the compromise features as they now exist. It did not then seem important as to what became of the man's body after the life had been starved out of it by a pit-iless system. I was for a fight for more wages and shorter hours of labor. The prospects of a pauper's grave had no terrors for me if these were denied me while living. In my younger days the enticements of the road and the life of a tramp seemed far preferable to selling my labor for less than it cost me to support my family.

Shortly after the close of the convention the General Secretary was selected to attend a convention of the Socialists that was held in Switzerland, if my memory serves me right.
Before he left he wrote to me from St. Louis that he had employed Gustav Luebker to perform his duty until his return, which occurred some months after. I wrote to St. Louis and became satisfied that Brother Luebkert, while unpopular because of his rampant Socialism, was thoroughly honest and trustworthy and I acquiesced in his selection as Secretary pro tem. Whenever it was necessary I wrote to delinquent locals to forward their per capita to Brother Luebker in order that The Carpenter should appear on time. Brother Luebker filled his place in a satisfactory manner and edited the paper without imposing his hobby on the Brotherhood.
The absence of Brother McGuire, however, made the duties of General President particularly onerous. I was obliged to work ten hours each day and had to sit up sometimes long past midnight writing answers to letters that were brought by the double handful in each mail. The honor of the position was being dearly bought at this price and I determined to allow some one else try it. At the Philadelphia Convention the following year a majority of the delegates were instructed to vote me a second term. Of this I was informed by a delegate who knew of it, but I could not, in justice to myself, serve another term. Neither has any succeeding General President accepted a second term until Brother
W. D. Huber was re-elected at Atlanta.

Brother John D. Allen did not attend the convention at Pittsburg when the Federation of Trades was organized, but he was elected at the second convention, which met in Philadelphia in 1882, to succeed me. This convention also selected me to represent them in the convention of the Federation of Trades. In this capacity I served for eight consecutive terms, filling the offices of Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer until retired by the election of P. J. McGuire as my successor.

It was while our late General Secretary was on the Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor that the Amalgamated Woodworkers applied for a charter. Our representative at first objected to granting the request, as it would result in a divided jurisdiction in our trade. This objection was afterward withdrawn by him and the charter granted by the American Federation of Labor. I can account for this change on the part of McGuire only by supposing that he was hypnotized by the diplomacy of Thomas Kidd, of the Woodworkers.

The growth of the National Union in its earlier years was slow, owing to several causes. First, the opposition of the church, without distinction as to sect, to all forms of trades unions. Second, the rivalry of the Knights of Labor, which grew suddenly into public favor and threatened the utter extinction of trades unionism on natural lines. The American Federation of Labor was then too weak to help the carpenters, except by giving them its moral support. It was weak in representation from the building trades and powerless to enforce the autonomy of an affiliated trade. Hence, it will be seen that the carpenters had to fight their own way to success.
Third, the great disparity between organized and unorganized carpenters, which was probably, in 1881, less than 4 per cent. of the trade, was very disheartening. In 1886, when the effort was made to establish the eight-hour work day and resulted in a compromise on nine hours, the non-union carpenters began to see that their assistance would have assured the success, which came later.

Now, in conclusion, allow me to re-capitulate in brief. Two of the more important results gained were, first, a general advance in wages from $1.50 a day to an average of double that amount; second, shorter hours of labor, from ten to eight. The credit for these great reforms in industrial pursuits must be given to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters. I challenge contradiction on this point. Another great benefit to our trade was the abolishment of the piece-work system. There has been realized an improved condition of the whole trade without the distinction of employer or employee. The amount of sick benefits and death claims to widows will doubtless far exceed the amount paid for strike benefits.

wages in an inverse ratio to interest; when interest is high wages are low, when in-holds good.

Two Remarkable Articles.

BY HAL SCRYVER.

ERNEST POOLE'S articles in the July and August numbers of "The World Today"—the one on "How a Labor Machine Held Up Chicago and How the Teamsters' Union Smashed the Machine," the other, entitled, "The Disappearing Public"—merit the attention of all thoughtful students of the labor question.

In the first named article Mr. Poole narrates a very remarkable and very instructive episode in recent trade union history. He tells his story very clearly and, as it appears, very fairly. The story is too long and complicated to be even summarized here. The "machine" consisted in a pact between the leader of the Teamsters' Union and a professional "settler of labor disputes." The business of the one was to insinuate himself, by hook or by crook, into the management of strikes of all sorts, after which the other, on payment of a sufficient fee from the employers, arranged to have the strikes called off. Enormous sums of money were thus extracted from the business men and, minus what had to be paid to a few "lieutenants," were divided between the two ring leaders—the "conciliator," apparently, getting much the larger share. The teamsters' organization was used simply as a tool—as a "jimmy" or "sandbag"—and was quite successfully used for about three years, till its members woke up and saw through the game. The union was a new one, which had grown up rapidly at a critical moment, whose members were inexperienced and too trustful. This union was dragged or pushed into strikes in all other trades, so that other unions came to depend upon it and could be betrayed when the price had been paid to the machine.

To us the most significant thing in the whole story is the way in which it exposes the essential dishonesty of the capitalist system and contrasts the timid and unscrupulous greed of the employing class with the instinctive honor and courage of the working class. For a while the business men were, with few exceptions, willing to keep this disreputable pair in their pay in order to corrupt and weaken the unions, it was the Teamsters' Union itself, supported by other labor organizations, when they had had time to realize what was going on, that rose up and "smashed the machine." The corruption, we may say, came into the labor movement from above, from the example as well as the direct influence of the "eminently respectable citizens," and it was exposed and driven out by an impulse from below, from the rank and file of the workers.

One other significant point may be noted: In throwing over the machine, the union did not lose the fighting spirit or abandon the aggressive methods (such, for instance, as the sympathetic strike) which had been abused by the corrupt leaders and perverted to their evil purposes. The vitality of the labor movement is well illustrated—its power to correct its own mistakes, repudiate its misleaders, punish its traitors, fight out its own internal questions to a finish, and yet keep up a vigorous fight against the common enemy.

Mr. Poole's article in the August number is an excellent reply to the ignorant or subsidized journalists, college professors, preachers and others who, on the occasion of a great labor conflict, always set up a howl about the injury done to "the disinterested public." It exposes, too, the fallacy of the Civic Federation scheme, which presupposed the existence of a "public" apart from the employing class and the wage-working class. This "public," Mr. Poole maintains, is a myth—or, at least, is rapidly disappearing.

The American people consists of about 15,000,000 families. Of these, about 7,000,000 are farmers or farm laborers; about 7,000,000 are wage-workers in factory or shop or mine or railway; about 1,000,000 are owners, large or small, of factories, shops, mines, and railways, and employers of wage labor. Of the second group, about 3,000,000 are already organized in trade unions and the rest are generally in sympathy with them, are joining in large numbers, and have interests identical with theirs. On the other hand, the employers are also rapidly organizing and taking up a policy of bitter antagonism to the whole labor movement.

Mr. Poole does not say much of the agricultural population. But it may be remarked that at least half of them are wage-workers, whose natural interest is with that of the industrial employes in any movement that tends to improve the conditions of labor.

If there is any "disinterested public"—aside from a part of the lawyers, doctors, artists, and preachers—it can consist only in the farm owners. And even they are divided into two classes—the smaller portion being exploiters of labor and naturally falling in with the capitalist class, and the larger portion, mortgage-burdened and trust-ridden, whose true interest—immediate as well as ultimate—is with the militant wage-workers, could they but think together and see it.

The appearance of two such articles of these of Mr. Poole's in a high-class popular magazine is an encouraging sign of the times. Equally so is the appearance of Miss Tarbell's articles on the Standard Oil Company and Mr. Steffen's on Corruption in "McClure's;" of Mr. Walling's on the "Open Shop," and similar subjects in the "Independent," and of Mr. Lawson's on the Copper Trust in "Everybody's." The people are evidently thinking on such questions more earnestly than ever before, else the publishers would not give us such good reading matter.

Sowing the Wind.

BY MARGARET SCOTT HALL.

NO individual feels responsible for the extreme conditions of the industrial situation, yet no one denies their existence.

The problem of class conflict is becoming a grave and threatening one. "What a man sows that he shall also reap." Results prove that this is also true of combinations, trusts and organizations. Concentrated capital has much responsibility in the bitter differences that so frequently agitate the peace of employer and employed.

Oppression and resentment are evident on all sides. Oppression is not content to rule without making its power felt; it is well satisfied when its victims writhe under the unjust regulations imposed; when they groan under the advance in prices of life's necessities; yea, oppression smiles with contempt at the misery and privations of the poor.

Somewhere the responsibility must rest. The wind has been sown, and the harvest will sooner or later ripen into the whirlwind. Oppression grinds the faces of the poor without mercy and hoards up riches while humanity suffers. If blood and tears are the price we have paid for a capitalist aristocracy—if the nation's wealth and power have been acquired and concentrated at the expense of her people's agony, the stain of injustice will be washed out in universal misery, and the ill-gotten spoils will be dissolved in blood and tears.

Pauperism is a reproach to any rich and powerful nation. It is estimated that in the United States 15,000 persons possess fortunes of over $300,000, yet pauperism, ignorance, destitution and depravity increase everywhere! Sowing the wind; reaping the whirlwind.

The problem of continual clash and conflict between labor and capital is recognized as the gravest of impending disasters. In the correct solution of this problem every citizen of the United States has a personal interest. From the lowliest sufferer of extreme conditions to the richest rulers of money and markets—all have a personal interest in the well-being of the country.

This is a day of concentration. Organization and counter-organization in capital and labor strive furiously with each other.

The church, too, has its share of responsibility in helping to solve the great industrial problem. But some say the church has betrayed her trust, and lost her influence over the working people. Religion is not mocked, but held in reverence by many toilers, who declare that experience has taught the poor man that church institutions must be sustained by dollars and cents, and his membership is only desirable in proportion to the cash value of the dues demanded. His soul has been estimated by the length and weight of his pocket book, and if he realizes the need of a Savior he must grope alone to find Him.

The church is beginning to realize that something is vitally wrong in its relation to the masses. If the church has sowed the wind, the time of reaping is sure to come.

What men learn through experience, in bitterness and humiliation, are the lessons hardest to unlearn. The fraternal orders and labor organizations supply the sympathy and the standard of Christianity, according to the toiler's opinion, more fully than the church. We would not criticize, but indifference or carelessness must inevitably bar us from any society, and whether the discrimination is real or imaginary, the effectual barrier shuts the masses out of the congregation. In calling attention to the attitude of the people toward church relations, it is well to remember the lack of spirituality that characterizes all organization. We can not impose all of the responsibility on capital. The labor union has its share to do in the solution of the great problem that is up to the nation for solution, and though the church is accused of being for the rich, we believe that Christ, the laborer, will be with the poor and oppressed in the cause of justice. Then labor's cause being a righteous one, let labor Christianize its organizations, and in His name press forward in the progress of unionism. Because others are sowing recklessly, without thought of what the harvest shall be, is only the better reason labor should watch lest it fall into the same error. The great syndicates, by oppression and opposition, have taught the people the necessity of organization. But contention is not Christianity. When organized labor and organized capital accept Christ as their model of righteousness they will begin to make their religion practical, and bring its principles into their business relations.

Then peace will settle all the discord, and notwithstanding human nature that will always keep up a certain amount of antagonism between the two elements, the industrial problem may work itself out satisfactorily. When we cease to sow the wind we need no longer fear a reaping of the whirlwind.

"Nothing is ever settled until it is settled right."

Organized labor may yet require both politics and religion as co-operating agencies in the solution of vexed questions. When that day comes, may labor cast all regard for party preference aside and prove the invincible strength of union by the labor ballot. Party may some day be repudiated for principle, but over all may a true Christian spirit of justice and mercy predominate, and at last may organized labor's victory be complete.

Where the "Open Shop," or non-union, condition prevails the well-disposed employer is forced to come down to the level of his parsimonious and unprincipled competitor. Where the employment of trade-unionists exclusively prevails the sweater is forced up to the level of the fair employer.—Coast and Seamen's Journal.

Kickers.

BY FRANK DUFFY.

It is generally conceded on all sides that there are certain individuals in this world known as "kickers," and they well deserve the name. They rebel against any new change, innovation, idea or improvement. They object to everything put forth, whether it is right or wrong. It has become habitual with them, and is now part of their nature. We find them among the rich and the poor, among the employers and the employees; in the banks, shipping houses and colleges; in religion, politics and organizations, and, in fact, in all shades and walks of life. It is a pity that it is so, and yet they are sometimes of inestimable value to us. Their objections set us thinking whether we are right or not, whether we are honorable in our intentions, and whether our desires would lead to the most good for all.

What I object to most is the "chronic kicker." The man who kicks for the most trivial cause, who is never satisfied, and who could not be suited even if we agreed with everything he proposed. We find such men quite prevalent in labor organizations. Why it should be so with them I can not understand, when we know that these same labor organizations stand for the uplifting of the masses, the education of the poor, the protection of the home and the regeneration of the human race. They find fault with everything and with everybody. They discourage the well-meaning man until he becomes so disgusted with their actions that he only attends the meetings of his union at intervals and finally drops out altogether. What we want is men of common sense and sound judgment, who will not stand on technicalities—who are willing to give and take and deal liberally with everybody as they come along. It is true we have our kicking matches—both internally and externally, when we could be otherwise using our time to a more profitable advantage. The end gained does not always repay us for the time lost and often results in an injury to both sides.

I once heard a story which I take pleasure in herewith repeating in connection with this article: Not long ago two young fellows visited a certain town and started out to paint it red. After hours of enjoyment and conviviality they made for the depot with the intention of going home, but when they arrived there the train had gone and there was nothing for them to do but remain over night. They accordingly went to a hotel and asked for beds. The night clerk informed them that the only beds he had were both in one room, and if that would suit they could have them. They agreed to accept this proposition and were shown to the room by the porter, who left them at the door. Just as they entered the room a puff of wind blew out their lights and not wishing to disturb the house they undressed and got into bed. For a little while there was silence, which was presently broken by Jack exclaiming: "Say, Dick, there's a fellow in my bed;" and Dick replied, "There's another in mine, and I will kick him out; I don't care who he is." "So will I," exclaimed Jack. For about fifteen minutes there was a general scrimmage under the bed clothes, followed by a brief period in which nothing but the laborious breathing of the two could be heard, when Jack yelled out: "Say, Dick, I've kicked my fellow out," upon which Dick responded from the floor: "Well, you have done better than me; my fellow has kicked me out." Just then the night clerk came along to investigate the cause of the disturbance, when it was found that they had both got into one bed in the darkness and employed their kicking extremities on each other.

The Subject of Organization.

BY MARGARET SCOTT HALL.

They are slaves who fear to speak
For the fallen and the weak—
They are slaves who dare not be In the right with two or three.

ORGANIZATION is a live topic. Its influence has made itself acknowledged all over the country. The necessity of the times drove the toiler to seek this mode of self-protection.

Organization has grown to be a powerful controlling element in all industrial life.

Its continuous struggle for better conditions, its alternate victories and defeats, even its family rows, or, in other words, the difference of opinion that has seethed red hot in the ranks of organized labor, its determined resistance of oppression—all proves beyond question the remarkable development of unionism. Organization meets the demand of modern progress, hence it is not so much a fad as a necessity—the natural result of modern requirements.

It is exceedingly gratifying to the friends of labor to note the wonderful progress, both in "quality and quantity," unionism has made.

"Idleness is a sin and labor is a duty." Organization is the safeguard, the brotherhood, protecting labor from becoming the prey of indolence and avarice. Personal motives or selfish interests are usually the basic principles of dislike to the labor union.

Disapprobation and denunciation of the union generally comes from a source that fattens on monopoly and been accustomed to dictate its own terms to labor, preferring to hold in serfdom the untutored class its past methods have chained in worse than slavery's ignoble estate. Those who would abuse the cause of labor we would find on investigation, are in some way lining their own pockets at the expense of the poor—are either the operators or the hirelings of monopoly—picture him if you can. A creature, biped, sent out by capital and the educated leisure class to offset the scab of the labor sore! It is a royal thing to labor and it is an honorable course to demand a reasonable share of its results; it is a commendable endeavor that, leaving plenty for the master, would lift the man above penury.

A laboring class that sinks lower into poverty and degradation year by year, forcing little children (irrespective of sex) into mine and mill and sweat shop to meet the expense of a pitiful existence and supply the insatiate craving of those whom they serve—a laboring class that gropes hopelessly on in the dense cloud of ignorance and coarse vices of the slums. Such a class is a reproach to any nation. Labor unionism strives to save American liberty from the disgrace of sustaining such a class. The mistaken financial policy of the present time is to build up fabulous individual fortunes and reputations for noble philanthropy by subsequent donations to charity. Unionism strives against the increase of pauperism and corresponding necessity for charity, by giving labor a chance to improve its own condition.

Unionism would create a wage system that would save something over the expense of a scant existence for the laborer that when sickness or other disaster befalls he would not become a mendicant; unionism would raise its toilers to a higher plane of mental, physical, moral and spiritual development, by shorter hours of work and more time for rest and cultivation of such natural faculties as they possess.

Every individual, according to his capacity, has a personal responsibility and influence in the world for good or bad. We can not, we dare not, be careless and habitually selfish because the kindnesses we find to do seem to us insignificant.

God gives us all some small, sweet way
To set the world rejoicing.

Though our influence may count in proportion as a mite among millions, still it shall be directed for good and not evil; for the weak against oppression, and according to the dictates of conscience, always for right—against wrong. Experience has taught the workingman to avoid past errors and look to his own efforts, rather than the employers to formulate plans for the improved condition of his class.

The labor union is the best means to the desired end that has so far been evolved from the chaos of discord over high prices for the necessities of life, and disproportionate pay for work.

No one may plan to revolutionize the world, but through organization, intelligently directed, can not fail to accomplish much for the just cause of humanity's uplifting.

Scientific Philanthropy's Problem.

An atom of physical wreckage—

Battered, ragged, adrift—
Cast up on the scum of life's current,
Seeking kind Charity's gift.
Cold, wretched and penniless, roaming,
Famished and wanting for bread,
An outcast without a home-shelter,
How shall he be clothed and fed?

He has "worked" all the institutions
Over and over again;
He is plainly a chronic pauper,
And likely such to remain;
A poor, stricken, palsied drunkard,
Only a tramp, lost to shame—
Turned away from charity bureaus
"Unworthy"—himself to blame.

He is only a starving beggar,
Facing the wind and sleet;
He has lost his job in the sweatshop,
And has no home but the street;
However, this poor, erring mortal,
Down to the brute level fell,
He is the result of a system
Whose methods drive men to hell.

Condemned for his own degradation,
No help for such tramps as he,
And now as philanthropy's problem
For aye he has come to be;
Afloat on the tide of existence,
Either to beg or to steal,
Hopeless and homeless and pitiful,
Hunting a dram and a meal!

Shall masters e'er cease to be monsters
Who prey on a brother's need?
Shall business men change their methods,
And lose their old lust of greed?
Is it only Utopian folly
To dream of a brotherhood,
Whose righteous pity and justice
Shall rule for the common good?

Our Convention Still in Session.

As this journal goes to press our thirteenth General Convention is still in session in the city of Milwaukee, Wis. In the opening session on Monday, the 19th of September, the committee on credentials reported favorably on and recommended the seating of 450 delegates, which number was increased on the second and third days to a total of 490 delegates representing the various States as follows: Alabama, 7 delegates; Arizona, 1; California, 37; Canada, 2; Colorado, 10; Connecticut, 9; District of Columbia, 7; Florida, 7; Georgia, 4; Idaho, 1; Illinois, 64; Indiana, 24; Iowa, 10; Kansas, 5; Kentucky, 5; Louisiana, 1; Maine, 1; Maryland, 11; Massachusetts, 12; Michigan, 13; Minnesota, 11; Mississippi, 2; Missouri, 24; Montana, 3; Nebraska, 7; New Jersey, 23; New Mexico, 2; New York, 58; Ohio, 29; Oklahoma Territory, 2; Oregon, 1; Pennsylvania, 52; Rhode Island, 1; South Carolina, 1; South Dakota, 1; Tennessee, 4; Texas, 6; Utah, 3; Vermont, 1; Virginia, 3; Washington, 1; W. Virginia, 4; Wisconsin, 18; Porto Rico, 1, and Hawaii, 1 delegate.

The three General Officers each submitted an elaborate biennial report to the convention. Those reports showed that on June 30, 1902, we had 1,193 local unions, with a membership in good standing of 122,568. On June 30, 1904, the number of local unions had increased to 1,793 and the total membership to 161,205 in good standing. Each report contains a clear financial statement, statistical data on strikes and lockouts, approved and disapproved claims, cause of death, etc., and many suggestions and recommendations calculated to conserve and promote the interests of the U. B. and the welfare of the craft in general.

The General Executive Board also submitted a biennial report, dwelling chiefly on their efforts made to avoid strikes where possible, to bring about a concentration of all forces in the wood working industry and their efforts to provide for the greatest possible safeguard around the funds of the U. B.

The convention has voted liberal donations in support of brothers locked out or on strike in New York City, Waterbury, Conn., Cripple Creek, Victor, Trinidad and Telluride, Col., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jamestown, N. Y., and Philadelphia, Pa. Among other resolutions of vital importance the convention unanimously passed a resolution protesting against the atrocities committed by the State militia and Citizens' Alliance in the strike districts of Colorado, and calling on all members to use every honorable means in securing the passage of the Patterson resolution demanding an investigation of the shameful occurrences in Colorado by the United States Senate.

Another resolution passed calls for the appointment of a committee of six to meet with a like committee already appointed by the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners for the purpose of mutually agreeing on Umpire Strasser's award. Our committee to put forth strenuous efforts that dues and benefits provided for in our laws as amended be retained and adhered to by consent of the umpire.

A final and more general review over the proceedings of the convention will appear in our next month's issue.

This Department is open for criticism and correspondence from our readers on mechanical subjects in Carpentry and ideas as to Craft Organization.

Write only on one side of the paper. All articles should be signed.

Matter for this Department must be in this Office by the 25th of the month.

Obtaining Valleys and Jacks for Roofs of Unequal Pitches.

BY W. C. B. RANDOLPH.

THIS plan of draughting two connecting roofs of unequal pitches will be found very simple and easy and can be done quicker than it takes to describe it.

Provide a planed, straight-edged board of sufficient width for your draught, and with a steel square set to the proper figures to give the pitch required for the main house, see line AB, Fig. 1, which is half-pitch.

proceed to another side of the triangle. Suppose that the width of the connecting house is 24 feet, then the run of those rafters will be 12 feet, and we know the rise, which is 8 feet. Set them off, as in Fig. 2, and enclose the figure by drawing the line EF, which is the length of the rafter on the flatter roof, and is found by scaling to be 14 feet 6 inches long, and this is another side of the triangle that we are after.

Begin now as shown in Fig. 3, using the ridge, 8 feet, for one side of triangle, and the length of the newly-found rafter, 14 feet 6 inches, for another side, and now draw the line GH, Fig. 3, which encloses the triangle and gives us the length of the valley, and which is in position. And we have only to space off the jacks the required distance apart and draw them parallel with the line IJ, which is the common rafter on the connecting house or flatter roof, and by measuring you get the right length of each jack.

A bevel placed at the angle between the jacks and the valley will give the side cut of the jacks.

The top and bottom cuts of the val-

Figure 4.

Referring to Fig. 1 we see that the lower ridge strikes the steeper roof 5 feet 6 inches down from the higher ridge, so we erect a perpendicular, 17 feet long, which is the length of the rafter on the steeper house. See line AB, Fig. 1.

Then measure down 5 feet 6 inches and make a mark.

Now we remember that the run of the rafters on the flatter roof is 12 feet (see "run," Fig. 2), so we set this off at right angles to the common rafter, as in Fig. 4, and draw the line KL, which encloses the triangle, and is the same as line GH, Fig. 3. It is the valley again, but showing its position in relation to the right-hand jacks.

Space the jacks as before, and you may now measure each one for the length and get the side cuts by using a bevel, as was done on the other side of the valley.

This completes the operation and a few trials will so familiarize one with the method that it will soon appeal to one as first-rate, being workable for those who know nothing about roof-framing, and is as rapid and accurate as any other way.

Craft Novelties.

BY FRED T. HODGSON.

The illustrations shown at Fig. 1 are taken from "The Metal Worker," and exhibit a method of laying out ornamental shingles, or metal shingles for covering a conical roof, height and diameter of roof being known. The rings show the butts of the courses and the number of courses, so that by a diagram of this kind all the shingles, plates or other covering may be prepared on the ground, and each course taken up and put in place before the next course is started.

Fig. 2, which is taken from "The American Machinist," shows a block in which to rest a flat chisel while turning a piece of some length to a given diameter, if it is necessary to have it very smooth.

Figure 1.

A pattern maker, when holding a pair of calipers in one hand and a flat chisel in the other, gets a scraping cut, but a little block like the cut causes the chisel to lie at an angle and makes a smooth, drawing cut. Chisel and block are to be held together in the hand against the rest as one piece.

* * *

It sometimes happens that a foreman may be called upon to duplicate or make a number of drawings from one original on white paper. When such is the case a device, something like the one shown at Fig 3, may be employed, which is arranged as follows: In place of a drawing board make an open frame of soft wood, into which set a light of glass so as to be flush with the top of the wood. The

In this example the run is 12 feet, or half the width of main house. Now the rise of the connecting roof is given as 8 feet. So we measure up perpendicularly on the rafter of main roof 8 feet and draw the ridge of connecting house, line CD, Fig. 1.

Square up from foot of main rafter and put a check mark at this point on the ridge, and by measuring back to the main rafter it will be 8 feet. Of course it will be understood that the drawing is done to a scale, and probably the most convenient scale is 1 inch to 1 foot, unless the roof is very large so as to take up too much room, and in that case it would be well to take a scale of 1/2-inch to 1 foot.

So, the 8 feet on the ridge is one side of a triangle that is required to enable us to find the length of the valley, jacks and their cuts. Now we ley are 8 feet and 14 feet 6 inches, and its length is 16 feet 7 1/2 inches.

Now Fig. 3 shows the jacks in position for one side of the valley only. The other side is found in another way, as follows:

glass should be larger than the border line of the drawing, but smaller than the whole sheet, so that the orig-fastened by drawing tacks in the softwood frame. The drawing table should be backed up against a window, the inal plan could be placed on the glass curtain drawn down to the drawing and the paper stretched over it and board, to keep out the light, and a mirror or a sheet of white paper placed at an angle underneath the glass, so as to throw the light up through the drawing. Under these circumstances copying can easily be done through paper as thick as patent office board, and it is not necessary for the direct sunlight to strike the mirror; even diffused daylight will answer.

Blue prints are now so universally used that a process of the kind shown seems almost unnecessary, but there are times when such a device may be found useful, and it is fitting that every ambitious carpenter should know of it.

A very convenient chalk-line arrangement is shown at Fig 4, which does its own chalking. Journaled in a frame having a convenient handle, as best shown in the small view, are a line reel and a chalk-holding shaft, geared to be operated together by means of a crank on the line reel shaft. The frame is preferably made in two sections, held together by screws to facilitate placing and removing the shafts. The chalk-carrying shaft has one end threaded and fitted with an adjusting screw, which bears on a disk sliding on the shaft, to clamp a centrally apertured cylindrical piece of chalk thereon. A notched, spur-like projection from one end of the frame forms a convenient means for holding the line after being chalked to fixed point.

The device is patented by J. W. Neff, Buckhannon, West Virginia.

Machines that Think.

In factories and offices, increasing yearly in numbers, are a thousand machines that surpass human fingers and deftness and even outthink the human brain. New ones are constantly invented.

Thus the new machine for decorating crockery puts on the china by a single action, the border patterns and monograms centers, which formerly required a whole process of handwork. The machine is operated by compressed air, and has a maximum capacity of decorating in this manner 120 dozen pieces of crockery in a single hour, with the assistance of two boys.

A new speed indicator has been added to locomotive practice that not only indicates the varying speed of the engine, but automatically applies the brakes when the speed exceeds the established safety limit, thus successfully replacing the "speed feel" of engineers.

To do away with guesswork in office and shop management, and to find out the real amount and value of each and every different kind of labor expended on a given piece of work, there is a machine which makes a permanent record by card printing not only of a single period of time, but also of an indefinite number of periods. This record shows the number of hours and minutes put on the job, and also the time of day when the job was started. When the job is done the totals of labor costs are entered on the outside of the envelope containing them, together with the record of the material used. Each record is entered on the factory books for permanent reference.

The sewing of buttons on shoes and on garments is no longer done by hand in modern factories. There is a machine that sews 5,300 buttons on garments in nine hours—or more than eight expert sewers could possibly do in the same time. This machine requires no expert operator. A boy or girl runs it.

And in one insurance office, where it was formerly necessary for a force of clerks to copy names on reference cards to be filed in various places, one clerk now writes the name on a single card with the metallic ink, clamps it in a holder with a number of blank cards and flashes an X ray through the packet. Thus by a single motion one man writes, or rather prints, all the cards.—World's Work.

A Japanese House.

A Japanese house is the simplest thing in the world, consisting as it does of a post at each corner and a roof. One may say it is all on one floor. And in the daytime it is all one room, if it is a small house. The number of bedrooms in it depends on the number of bedrooms the owner requires. They are divided by night by paper shutters fixed in grooves like the divisions of an old-fashioned workbox. There are no doors or passages. Your bedroom acts as a passage, and when you want a door you slide back the nearest panel. Two sets of shutters go around the outside. These outside shutters cannot be slid in the same promiscuous fashion as the other. Each is held in its place by the next and the last is secured with a bolt of wood. There are plenty of Japanese houses which when secured for the night would hardly stand a drunken man leaning against them. An Englishman's house may be his castle—a Japanese's house is his bedroom, and his bedroom a passage.—Carpentry and Building.

No Tramps in Germany.

To-day the lot of the laboring man in Germany is in many respects better than that of ours. The German State recognizes the right of every man to live—we do not. When the German laborer becomes old and feeble the State pensions him honorably. In Germany the laboring man can ride on the electric cars for two cents—we pay five. German cities have public baths, public laundry establishments, big parks, free concerts and many other features which soften poverty—although they do not remove it. The corollary to this is that the Emperor permits no tramps to terrorize his highways. The police are organized for rural patrol as well as city work, and every loafer is stopped and made to give an account of himself. In England vagrancy has been a public nuisance for generations—with us it has become, of late years, almost a public danger. Germany has no tramps. The man who is without work in Germany finds no inducement to remain idle. A paternal government sets him to such hard work that the would-be unemployed finds it decidedly to his interest to seek some other employment as soon as possible.—National Magazine.

Ist es noch ratsam Verträge

— mit —

Arbeitgebern einzugehen?

II.

Unsere vorangegangenen Ausführungen in dieser Frage lassen sich dahin resumieren, daß Verträge zwischen Arbeitgeber und Arbeitnehmer für beide Theile vortheilhaft sein können, wenn man es mit deren Einhaltung ehrlich meint, jedem das Seine zuerkennt und leben, und leben zu lassen, gewillt ist. Daß aber der Kampf den die Arbeitgeber- und Bürger-Vereinigungen gegen die organisierten Arbeiter inszeniert haben, unter einer Aegide, und in einer Weise geführt wird, die offen und deutlich zeigt, daß man die Wünsche der Arbeiter nicht mehr berücksichtigen will und daß überall da wo sich die Unternehmer-Verbände eingenistet haben, Verträge werthlos geworden sind.

Die vereinigten Unternehmer behaupten durch ihre Organisation nichts mehr und nichts weniger zu bezwecken und zu erstreben, als ungehinderten und friedlichen Geschäftsbetrieb. Sie schreien und zeternd über Einmischung der Gewerksvereine in ihre Angelegenheiten, welche Einmischung bekanntlich darin besteht, daß die Arbeiter verlangen, und es als ihr gutes Recht beanspruchen, den Preis ihres Arbeitsproduktes und die Arbeitsstunden selbst zu bestimmen.

Thatsächlich sind es nicht die Arbeiter, welche sich in die Angelegenheiten der Arbeitgeber einmischen wollen, sondern umgekehrt. Die Arbeitgeber möchten nicht nur ihre eigenen, sondern auch die Geschäfte der Arbeiter besorgen, und zwar in einer Weise die ihrer Profitgier den weitestens Spielraum gewährt. Sie möchten den Arbeitern Lohnrate und Arbeitsstunden nach Belieben vorschreiben.

Das Gebahren des Unternehmertums im Verlaufe des letzten Jahres sollte allein schon genügen die Arbeiter zu überzeugen, daß die Gepflogenheit Verträge einzugehen, heute fast allgemein ein nutzloses, und wie wir später sehen werden, sogar ein für sie schädliches Verfahren geworden ist.

Dies wurde uns in letzter Zeit, in unzweideutiger Weise, durch verschiedene richterliche Entscheidungen demonstriert, in denen den Verträgen jede gesetzliche Gültigkeit, unter der Begründung abgesprochen wird, daß dieselben nur im Interesse der Mitglieder der betreffenden Organisation eingegangen worden, Nicht-Mitglieder von dessen Vorteilen ausschließen und diese ihrer bürgerlichen Rechte berauben.

Dieser und ähnlicher Verzäpfung richterlicher Weisheit, hat nun kürzlich Richter Adams des Appellations-Gerichtes des Staates Illinois die Krone aufgesetzt, indem er in einer Entscheidung über die verlangte Aufhebung eines Inhaltsbefehles den sogenannten geschlossenen Shop, (Union-Shop,) als eine verbrecherische Institution erklärte. Nun wird in Arbeiterkreisen erwartet, daß diese monströse Entscheidung von einer höheren Instanz umgestoßen werde, sollte dies aber nicht geschehen, so wird in Zukunft ein Arbeiter oder Arbeitgeber des Staates Illinois, der in einem Vertrage, welcher den geschlossenen Shop vorzieht, als Partei figurirt, sich einer verbrecherischen, und damit strafbaren Handlung schuldig machen.

In einem anderen Falle, der sich in St. Louis, Mo., abspielte und Anfangs August seinen Abschluß fand, erhoben die Eigentümer einer Holzbearbeitungs-

Fabrik gegen den Distrikt-Council unserer Bruderschaft eine Klage auf Schadenersatz, unter der Begründung, daß der Council durch Eingehen von Verträgen mit anderen Firmen den Klägern, (die sich geweigert hatten Unionregeln in ihrer Fabrik einzuführen), mehrere Contrakte entzogen habe, wodurch ihnen einen Verlust von $40,000, die Summe des beanspruchten Schadenersatzes, entstanden sei.

Diese Klage wurde am 5ten August auf Grund des Nicht-Vorhandenseins irgend welchen schriftlichen Vertrages abgewiesen. Wäre der Distrikt-Council von St. Louis und seine Geschäfts-Agenten nicht so klug gewesen, von einem schriftlichen Vertrage mit den Union-Firmen abzusehen und sich mit einer mündlichen Vereinbarung, über zu beachtende Arbeitsregeln, zu begnügen, so wäre die richterliche Entscheidung jedenfalls für den Distrikt-Council ungünstig ausgefallen.

Trotz alledem sind wir der Ansicht daß wir über die Frage, ist es noch ratsam Verträge einzugehen, nicht über Bausch und Bogen, sondern von Fall zu Fall urtheilen sollten.

Dieses Land ist groß, und es gibt noch viele Städte und Orte, oder auch Industriezweige, die von der Unternehmer-Organisation noch unberührt geblieben sind und vielleicht unberührt bleiben. An solchen Orten und in solchen Industriezweigen mag es heute noch, wie früher, ratsam sein Verträge abzuschließen. Mit ehrlichen und rechtlich denkenden Arbeitgebern sollten wir auch fernerhin in Unterhandlungen treten und Vereinbarungen zu treffen suchen, durch welche Betriebsstörungen vermieden und unserer Organisation unnötige Geldausgaben erspart bleiben.

Wir sind ferner der Ansicht, daß da, wo es noch ratsam und zweckentsprechend erscheint, Verträge einzugehen, die Distrikt-Councils oder die Lokal-Unions, wo nur immer es die Situation erlaubt, die Bestimmungen eines Vertrages unserer Executiv-Behörde zur Bestätigung unterbreiten sollten.

Die Vorteile eines solchen Verfahrens, das übrigens in anderen Gewerksvereinen längst üblich ist und sich dort bewährt hat, sind mannigfache. Der Executiv-Behörde wird dadurch Gelegenheit gegeben ein Wort mit zu reden; die Entfernung etwa anstößiger, und die Einschaltung günstigerer Bestimmungen zu veranlassen.

Nebrigens ist einleuchtend, daß ein Vertrag von beiden Parteien viel mehr respektirt wird, wenn derselbe die Bestätigung einer Executiv-Behörde der Gesamt-Organisation erhalten und diese gewissermaßen die Verantwortlichkeit für die Vertrags-Bestimmungen übernommen hat.

Außerdem erwarten wir, daß die kürzlich permanent organisierte Baugewerks-Allianz (Structural Building Trades Alliance) in Bälde in ein Stadium getreten sein wird, welcher es ihr ermöglicht auf die Beziehungen, zwischen den mit ihr affilierten Organisationen und ihren Arbeitgebern einen Einfluß auszuüben. Wir hoffen, daß die Baugewerke baldigst in der Lage sein werden, den organisierten, einheitlich vorgehenden Bau-Unternehmern und Fabrikanten eine ebenso einheitliche, schlagfertige und kompakte Allianz gegenüber zu stellen.

Doch, wenn wir auch dies erreicht haben, haben wir noch nicht das gethan, was die gegenwärtige Situation und die Pflicht der Selbsterhaltung von uns verlangt. Wir haben in früheren Artikeln schon häufig darauf hingewiesen, daß uns die bestehenden ökonomischen Verhältnisse so wie so, abgesehen von dem Vernichtungskampf den das Unternehmertum gegen uns führt, unvermeidlich auf politisches Gebiet drängen. Oder wollen wir noch länger müßig zusehen wie uns unsere Bürgerrechte eines nach dem andern in willkürlicher Weise entzogen werden?

Im englischen Theile dieser Nummer finden unsere Leser eine Entscheidung des Richters von Butler County, Pa., welche jeden Zweifel und jedes Schwanken in dieser Frage beseitigen sollte.

In diesem Falle hatte eine Scab-Firma ebenfalls eine Schadenersatz-Klage gegen unsere Local-Union in Butler und den Distrikt-Council von Pittsburg, Pa., angestrengt. Beide wurden zur Zahlung der Summe von $1,800 an die Kläger verurtheilt, und in der Entscheidung des Richters wird den Verklagten fast alles verboten, was die Thätigkeit und Wirksamkeit eines Gewerksvereins einbegreift und die Staatsgesetze jedem Bürger gewähren. Sie dürfen eine Scab-Firma nicht boykotten, ja nicht einmal bekannt geben, daß zwischen ihnen und einer Firma Differenzen bestehen; sie dürfen Niemand auffordern, seine Arbeit bei einer Union Firma machen zu lassen; Die Benutzung und Gewährung unseres Union-Tabels, welches doch im Staate Pennsylvania registriert ist, ist ihnen untersagt. Gegen Nicht-Union-Material Stellung zu nehmen, Mitglieder wegen Arbeitens bei einer Scab-Firma zu bestrafen, ist ihnen ebenfalls verboten u. s. w., u. s. w. Es ist nur zu verwundern, daß der Richter unseren Mitgliedern in Butler und dem Pittsburg Distrikt, nicht auch das Versammlungsrecht entzogen, ihnen nicht das Tragen unserer Abzeichen verboten hat; daß er ihnen überhaupt noch zu athmen erlaubt.

Wenn es einmal so weit gekommen ist, so sollten wir doch meinen, daß endlich die Zeit gekommen sei, wo sich ein jeder denkende Gewerkschaftler sagen muß, daß wir den Uebergriffen feiler Richter und Stadt- und Staats-Beamten, Einhalt bieten und ihnen ihr unsauberes Handwerk legen müssen. Dies kann nur geschehen, indem sich die Arbeiter von den politischen Parteien, die die Richterämter und Beamtenstellen besetzt haben, los-sagen; unabhängig, als Klasse, das politische Feld betreten und sich die politische Macht erobern! Folgen wir dem, in der September-Nummer des "Bricklayer and Mason" ergangenen Rufe: "Lasset uns Leute aus unseren eigenen Reihen in die Gesetzgebungen wählen!" Und fügen wir auch hier bei: "und alle Richter und öffentlichen Beamten die nur kapitalistischen Interessen dienen, dahin schicken, wohin sie gehören!"

Es wäre endlich an der Zeit diesen Schritt zu wagen, es ist Gefahr im Verzuge.

Die beste Sparcasse ist die Gewerkschaft.

"Selbsthilfe und Sparen," so schreibt der "Jugendliche Arbeiter" in Wien, so heißen die großen Helfer, die man der proletarischen Jugend anpreist, und alle Besehler sind voll von Geschickten solcher Männer, die es vom armen Jungen zum reichen Mann gebracht haben. Dabei verschweigen die Prediger, daß zum Emporkommen erstens viel Glück und zweitens viel Hartherzigkeit gehört, indem man andere ausbeutet. Nachdem nun nicht ein jeder einen Haupttreffer machen oder eine reiche Frau kriegen kann, nachdem auch nicht jeder zum Ausbeuter das Zeug hat, wird allen Jünglingen das Sparen als wahre Goldgrube empfohlen. Daß viele Sparer ihren Körper schädigen, indem sie ihn schlecht näh-ren, daß arbeitslose Wochen die Ersparnisse von Monaten fressen, davon schweigt die Geschichte. Eine Sparcasse aber gibt es, die auch wir eifrig empfehlen, wo sich das Geld höher und sicherer verzinst, als bei der besten Bank, und diese Sparcasse heißt Gewerkschaft. Die Wahrheit dieser Sätze kann man aus einem Bericht der amtlichen "Labour Gazette" in London erkennen. In England ist das Gewerkschaftsleben stark entwickelt, daher haben die Gewerkschaftskämpfe folgende praktische Erfolge aufzuweisen gehabt: In den Jahren 1896 und 1897 erzielte etwa eine halbe Million Arbeiter je eine halbe Million Mark der Erhöhung der Wochenlöhne, im Jahre 1898 erkämpfte eine Million Arbeiter eine Million Mark wöchentlich an Erhöhung, im Jahre 1898 erhöhte sich der Lohn von mehr als eine Million Arbeiter um fast zwei Millionen Mark und im Jahre 1900 erkämpften eine Million Arbeiter einen Mehrbetrag von wöchentlich 3-3 Millionen Mark. Hieron entfallen auf den einzelnen 3-46 Mark; für das Jahr macht das eine durchschnittliche Erhöhung der Einnahmen um fast 170 Mark, eine schöne Rente, die erkämpft wurde. Der von den Gewerkschaften in diesen fünf Jahren erzielte Mehrlohn beträgt nahezu eine halbe Milliarde Mark. Die Gewerkschaften sind wahrhaftig die besten Sparcassen, denn das Sparen geschieht hier nicht auf Kosten der Gesundheit des Arbeiters, sondern auf Kosten des Unternehmerngeldbeutels. Dabei sind andere Auszahlungen dieser Sparcasse, wie Rechtsschutz, Arbeitslosen- und Reiseunterstützung und vieles andere noch gar nicht gerechnet. Sein eigener Feind ist also der Arbeiter, der nicht seiner Gewerkschaft beiträgt.

"Glück auf," Organ der Berg und Hüttenarbeiter Oesterreichs.

Ueber den Aufschwung der Organisation der Bau-Arbeiter Oesterreichs, schreibt die "Wiener Arbeiter-Zeitung:

Die Organisation der Bauarbeiter veröffentlicht jedes Halbjahr einen Ausweis über ihre Mitgliederzahl. Seit ist der Bericht über den Stand vom 30. Juni erschienen und da erfährt man, daß die Organisation in den letzten sechs Monaten einen ganz ungeheuren Aufschwung genommen hat. Noch vor einem halben Jahre zweifelte mancher, ob es möglich sein werde, die Bauarbeiter zu organisieren. Der Hinweis auf die mächtige Organisation in Deutschland wurde damit beantwortet, daß eben die Bauarbeiter in Deutschland "andere Leute" seien. Und nun zeigt sich mit einem Schlage, daß auch die österreichischen Bauarbeiter eine große Organisation zu gründen vermögen. In der Provinz geht es auch jetzt vielfach nur langsam vorwärts, aber in Wien bildet schon der Verband der Bauarbeiter eine ganz imposante Macht. Man braucht nur die Zahlen der drei letzten Ausweise zu vergleichen. Am 30. Juni 1903 hatte der Verband der Bauarbeiter in ganz Oesterreich 4344 Mitglieder (darunter 3412 Maurer), in Wien gehörten nur 1270 Bauarbeiter dem Verband an. Am 31. Dezember 1903 war die Zahl der Verbandsmitglieder auf 4066 gesunken, von denen 3073 Maurer waren. In Wien waren 1322 Bauarbeiter organisiert. Und nun kam der plötzliche Aufschwung. Am 30. Juni 1904 gehörten dem Verbands 14,924 Mitglieder an, darunter 12,313 Maurer. In Wien allein waren 7037 Bauarbeiter, davon 6015 Maurer organisiert. Es ist also in einem halben Jahre die Zahl der organisierten Bauarbeiter in Wien von 1322 auf 7037 gestiegen. Seit dem 30. Juni ist die Mit-gliederzahl in Oesterreich noch um weitere 3000 gestiegen und der größte Theil dieses Zuwachses entfällt wiederum auf Wien. Daß sich auch in der Provinz in einem halben Jahre die Zahl der Mitglieder verdreifacht hat, ist eine Bürgschaft dafür, daß der Aufschwung der Organisation nicht nur eine vorübergehende Folge des großen Kampfes war, sondern daß endlich die Bauarbeiter den Werth der Organisation erkannt haben und daß die Organisation auch weiterhin solche Fortschritte machen wird. Jedenfalls können die Vertrauensmänner der Bauarbeiter stolz sein auf die Arbeit, die sie geleistet haben.

In Aggersdorf wurde Anfangs August zwischen dem Bund der Zimmermeister und der Arbeiterorganisation folgender Vertrag abgeschlossen:

Der Minimallohn beträgt vom 25. August an statt 3 Kronen 20 Heller, 3 Kronen 60 Heller; jene Arbeiter, welche bisher über 3 Kronen 30 Heller erhielten, erhalten jetzt 4 Kronen. Der Mindestlohn beträgt für Hilfsarbeiter 2 Kronen 70 Heller. Ueberstunden werden mit 12 Prozent des Tageslohnes gezahlt. Die Zulage für nach Wien arbeitende Zimmerer beträgt 60 Heller, für Vorarbeiter 4 Kronen. Wenn auch der Erfolg nicht gerade übermäßig groß ist, so ist es bei der kurzen Zeit des Bestandes der Organisation immerhin ein ihr hoch anzurechnender Erfolg.

Zwischen denen etwa zwei Monate lang ausgesperrten Zimmerergehülfsen in Prag und dem Arbeitgeber-Verbande kam es am 2. August zu folgender Vereinbarung: 1. Die Meister gewähren einen Minimallohn von drei Kronen 60 Heller mit 15- bis 50-prozentigen Zuschlägen für Wasserarbeiten. 2. Es wird eine Arbeitsvermittlung errichtet. 3. Alle Arbeiter werden nach Maßgabe der Wiederaufnahme der Betriebe wieder aufgenommen. 4. Es wird eine Kontrollkommission errichtet, die über die Einhaltung der Vereinbarungen zu wachen hat. — Diese Vereinbarung hat aber nur provisorische Geltung bis zum Ende dieses Jahres. Ueber die definitive Vereinbarung soll die Kontrollkommission sofort berathen. Zugleich mit der Aussperrung wurden auch alle Streiks der Zimmerer als beendet erklärt.

Der 37. Jahreskongreß der englischen Gewerkschaften trat am 5ten September in Leeds zusammen. Es waren 450 Delegaten anwesend, die zusammen einundneinhalb Millionen organisierte Arbeiter vertraten. Das Parlamentarische Comité unterbreitete einen umfangreichen Bericht, welcher sich theilweise auf die Thätigkeit des Comité's in dem Kampfe gegen die Schutzoll-Politik Chamberlain's bezog, an dem sich dasselbe energisch betheiligte. Ueber die von dem Comité im Parlament eingereichte "Trades Disputes Bill" die bestimmt ist die famose Taff Vale Entscheidung null und nichtig zu machen, wurde ausführlich berichtet. Durch diesen Gesetzesentwurf soll den Gewerkschaften das Recht des Streikpostens gestehen, wieder zugesichert werden. Die "Bill" wurde in zweiter Lesung vom Parlamente angenommen, aber dieser Akt nicht publiziert, so daß die Bill in der nächsten Sitzung nochmals eingebracht werden muß, um Gesetzeskraft zu erlangen.

Ein internationaler Tabak-Arbeiter-Kongreß fand im Anschluß an den Mitte August in Amsterdam abgehaltenen Internationalen Sozialisten-Kongreß statt.

Belgien, England, Deutschland, Schwe-

den, Dänemark, Holland und Luxemburg, lauter Länder in denen die Tabakindustrie kein Monopol des Staates ist, waren durch Delegaten vertreten. Ein Vertreter der französischen Tabakarbeiter war nicht anwesend, da deren Organisation bis jetzt nicht zum Anschluß an das Internationale Sekretariat zu bewegen war. Aus dem Berichte des Sekretärs ging hervor, daß in allen Ländern in der Tabakindustrie eine Krise herrscht. Der internationale Unterstützungsfond hatte 27.668 Franks Einnahmen und 10.454 Franks Ausgaben. Laut den Berichten der betreffenden Delegaten sind in Deutschland von 104.500 Tabakarbeitern 18.271 organisiert; in Holland von 20.000 3.800 und in England sind von 5.000 bis 6.000, 3.800 organisiert. Der Kongreß nahm eine Resolution an, in welcher er es ablehnt, den Mitgliedern zu empfehlen sich einer bestimmten politischen Partei anzuschließen, doch wird in der Resolution erklärt, daß nebst der reinen Gewerkschaftsbewegung auch die politische Bewegung, die sozialdemokratische Politik notwendig sei, an der alle Fachgenossen Theil nehmen sollten. Außer den Tabakarbeitern hielten auch die Metalarbeiter, die Verkehrsarbeiter, Holzarbeiter und Handlungsgehülfsen, im August, zu Amsterdam, Kongresse ab.

Auf dem Kongreß der Bergarbeiter, welcher in der zweiten Augustwoche in Paris stattfand, war Großbritannien durch 45 Delegaten, die 549.500 Bergarbeiter repräsentierten, vertreten; außerdem die Sonderorganisation von Durham und Northumberland, welche Gegnerin des Achtstundentages ist, durch 3 Delegaten. Deutschland sandte 13 Delegaten für 580.000 Mitglieder, Frankreich 7 Delegaten für 190.000, Belgien 9 Delegaten für 130.000, Oesterreich 1 Delegaten für 120.000 und Nord-Amerika 2 Delegaten für 500.000 Mitglieder. Der Kongreß erklärte sich unter Anderem für einen gesetzlichen Achtstundentag für alle Bergarbeiter, Einfahrt und Ausfahrt mit einbegriffen; und ebenfalls für einen gesetzlichen Minimallohn. Der von den deutschen Delegaten eingebrachte Antrag, die Errichtung eines internationalen Sekretariats betreffend, wurde zurückgelegt, um die diesbezügliche Entscheidung anderer internationalen Kongresse abzuwarten.

Die drei, in Großbritannien bestehenden Carpenter-Organisationen, die schon vor etwa zwei Jahren behufs Verschmelzung in Unterhandlung traten, welche aber resultatlos verlief, haben die Vereinigungs-Frage neuerdings wieder aufgenommen und man beabsichtigt jetzt auch die Cabinetmachers und andere Holzarbeiter ebenfalls zur Mit-Verschmelzung heranzuziehen, um so eine starke, einheitliche Organisation aller Holzarbeiter zu bilden.

Die Gewerkschafts-Bewegung in Serbien begann erst im Jahre 1901. Serbien, besonders Belgrad, hat viele Arbeiter die im Auslande gearbeitet und dort die Bedeutung der Gewerkschafts-Organisation erkannt und schätzen gelernt haben. In Belgrad befinden sich die Hauptquartiere vierundzwanzig verschiedener National-Organisationen die in allen größeren Städten Zweig-Vereine haben.

Ein gewohnheitsmäßiger Versammlungsschwärmer ist wie der überschüssige Ballast eines Schiffes den man über Board wirft, damit das Fahrzeug seinen Kurs verfolgen kann.

Ueber japanesische Gewerkschaften

bringt die Beilage der „Münchener Allgemeinen Zeitung“ sehr interessante Mittheilungen. In Japan bestehen zum Theil noch alte, aus der Feudalzeit stammende künstlerische Organisationen, denen sowohl Arbeitgeber wie Arbeitnehmer angehören. Die bis in's 15. Jahrhundert zurückreichende Gilde der Holzschnitzer in Tokio umfaßt 300 Meister und 1500 Arbeiter. Die Leitung der Arbeiterabtheilung besteht aus 21 Delegierten, die gemeinsam mit der Meisterabtheilung die Lohnsätze bestimmen, die zum Theil zur Unterstützung der Arbeiter bestimmten. Die Interessen der Arbeiter gegenüber der Meisterschaft zu wahren haben. Die Mitglieder der Arbeiterabtheilung haben ein Recht auf Arbeit: die Disziplin soll eine so vortreffliche sein, daß es möglich sei, „innerhalb einer halben Stunde die gesammte Arbeit der Holzschnitzer in Tokio aufhören zu lassen.“ In ähnlicher Weise sind die Maurer, Schmiede und Bergwerksarbeiter organisiert.

Bemerkenswerth ist eine Vereinigung unqualifizierter Arbeiter, der Reiskulis in Tokio, die aus 1500 Mitgliedern besteht. Ihr sowie der Organisation der Köche wird eine ausgezeichnete Organisation und Disziplin nachgerühmt. Die Köche zum Beispiel kontrollieren die „Herrschaften“, und wenn unberechtigte Entlassungen vorkommen, „so kann die Herrin nunmehr mit absoluter Sicherheit darauf rechnen, keinen japanischen Koch wieder in Dienst zu bekommen.“ Ueberhaupt wird die Solidarität der japanesischen Arbeiter als charakteristisch hervorgehoben. Ein vor Kurzem ausgebrochener Streik der Schiffszimmerer von Yokohama, die Lohnerböschung forderten, wurde vor Allem dadurch gewonnen, daß die zugereisten Schiffszimmerer wieder abgezogen, als sie erfuhren, daß ihre Kollegen streiken...!

Von modernen Organisationen der industriellen Arbeiterschaft, denen schon jeder künstlerische Charakter fehlt, nennen wir die Baumwollspinner, deren Lage als eine sehr schlechte dargestellt wird. Die Arbeiter werden vom Bande bezogen und haben dafür dem Agenten für die Vermittlung zu zahlen. Die Arbeitsverträge werden auf drei bis fünf Jahre und länger abgeschlossen. Die Löhne, die theilweise auf dem Truchsystem beruhen, sind sehr gering, die Arbeitszeit lang. Sonntagsruhe gibt es keine. Bei Krankheit wird halber Lohn vom Minimum gezahlt, bei Berufungslücken eine Entschädigung von 50 Mark.

Als großer Uebelstand wird die zahlreiche Beschäftigung von Kindern unter vierzehn Jahren bezeichnet. In der Baumwollspinnerei gehört die größere Hälfte der Beschäftigten dem weiblichen Geschlecht an. — Die Organisation der Eisenbahnbedienten und Arbeiter verdankt ihre Entstehung einem Streik der Lokomotivführer und Heizer von Tokio. Auch hier bewirkte wieder die Solidarität den Sieg der Streitenden. Es gab, trotzdem keinerlei Organisation bestanden hatte, keinen Streikbrecher. Das Direktorium mußte abtunken, und die Bedienten gründeten nun nach dem Muster der englischen Trades Unions eine Vereinigung, die 2500 Mitglieder zählt. Besonders verdienstvoll wirkten für die modernen Organisationsbestrebungen der Abgeordnete Shimada und der Theologe Katayama. Wie es in dem Berichte heißt, soll sich für die Frage der industriellen Arbeiterschaft auch die Regierung interessieren, namentlich für den Erlaß eines Fabrikgesetzes zur Regelung der Einrichtungen und der Arbeit in den Fabriken. Die japanische Regierung ist selbst eine beträchtliche Arbeitgeberin; sie beschäftigt circa 130.000 Arbeiter, die aber vorberhand von der sozialpolitischen Einsicht noch nichts zu spüren bekamen, denn der Bericht bemerkt dazu, „daß die Arbeitskraft im Allgemeinen noch in einer sehr starken und selbst billigen Anforderungen gegenüber zu starken Weise“ ausgenutzt wird.

Elefanten als Holzarbeiter.

Wir entnehmen der deutschen „Holzarbeiter-Zeitung“:

Ueber die Arbeitsleistung der indischen Elefanten erzählt C. Werther in seinem soeben im Verlag von Hermann Bätel in Berlin erschienenen Buche, „Deutsche Streiflichter, folgende interessante Einzelheiten: „Die Hauptarbeitsträfte bei der Industrie der Holzbearbeitung in Indien sind Elefanten. Daß ein Elefant ein kluges und geduldiges Thier ist, weiß man ja auch in Europa; wer ihn aber einmal bei der Arbeit sieht, wird sicherlich seine Erwartungen übertroffen finden. Die schweren, am Strande lagernden Baumstämme, zu deren Transport pro Stück vielleicht 30 bis 40 schwebende Kulis nöthig wären, nimmt der Elefant mit dem Rüssel auf seine Stoßzähne und spaziert damit, wie einen Spazierstock balancierend, nach dem Sägewerke, wo er sie fein säuberlich in Reihen niederlegt. Dann kommt sein Bruder und trägt sie einzeln nach einer Maschine, von der sie zu viereckigen Balken geschnitten werden. Darauf wartet wieder einer, um sie mit dem Rüssel auf einer Holzbahn der Länge nach vor sich herzuführen, bis ein viertes Elefantenthier sie aufhebt, um sie ordentlich zu quadratischen Thürmen aufzuschichten, wo sie von der durchziehenden Luft getrocknet werden. Von den schon trockenen Balkenthürmen holt der brave Rüsselträger sie einzeln wieder herunter; die Balken, welche zu Brettern und Bohlen geschnitten werden sollen, trägt er nach der betreffenden Maschine, legt sie dort sorgsam mit dem Kopfende voran vor das Meißel, genau senkrecht zu diesem, wobei er mit dem Rüssel so lange hin- und herschiebt, bis die richtige Lage hergestellt ist, dann gibt er noch einen Schub und die Maschine fängt an zu arbeiten; andere Balken trägt er nach der Kreissäge, läßt sie zu zwei oder mehreren Stücken schneiden, genau vorher mit dem Rüssel den Schwerpunkt und die Mitte ausbalancierend. Und so weiter. Eigentlich macht der Elefant diese Arbeiten allein, denn der Mahut, der auf seinem Halse sitzt, gibt ihm nur die allgemeinen Direktiven an, indem er ihm gelegentlich einmal etwas in der Elefantensprache ins Ohr flüstert und ihm dabei mit dem eisernen Hammer auf den Schädel haut. Das letztere ist für Meister Dickschädel nichts weiter als ein harter Wind, daß jetzt etwas los ist, so etwa, wie wenn man leise auf die Schulter tippt. Im übrigen beschäftigt sich ein kluger Elefant nicht immer mit ein und derselben Angelegenheit, sondern er hat natürlich verschiedenelei studirt und wechselt in seiner Thätigkeit je nach Wunsch ab. Besonders gebildeten Sägemühlenthürmen ist auch eine gewisse Eitelkeit nicht fremd und sie haben sich die Posen des Photographierens angeeignet, wie ich gute Gelegenheit hatte, zu beobachten: mitten in der Beschäftigung des Hinausschiebens eines Balkens auf den Holzhurm hielt auf eine diesbezügliche Bemerkung des Mahuts, die auf elefantisch vermutlich „bitte, recht freundlich“ bedeutete, der Kameramandiblat inne, dreht den Kopf herum und lächelte mich so lange liebenswürdig an, bis er das bedingte Knipsen vernahm. Der Elefant ist zwar theuer — je nach Begabung bis zu M 27.000, aber er hält auch lange, meistens länger als die Fabrik. Doch er hat freilich einen Nachtheil, er vermehrt sich nämlich nicht in gezähmten Zustände. Man kann ihn daher nicht züchten, sondern muß stets von neuem wilde Elefanten einfangen. Wie mir der Chef der größten englischen Holzschnitzmühle von Mac Gregor & Co., in Mangun, sagte, über treffen die Elefanten an Geschicklichkeit bei weitem die indischen Arbeiter, denn bei diesen käme es öfters vor, daß sie sich Arme, Beine und dergleichen Dinge an den Maschinen abschnitten, aber noch niemals habe sich ein Elefant erheblich verletzt, trotzdem die Thiere auf den schmalen Gängen zwischen den Maschinen sich bewegen, vorsichtig ein Bein vor das andere legend. Außerst selten passiert es ferner, daß ein Elefant wieder wild wird oder den Roller bekommt, welcher Fall freilich für gerade in der Nähe befindliche eine unangenehme Ueberraschung bildet.“

L'Exposition de St. Louis.

Nous venons de visiter la ville et l'exposition de St. Louis. Nous avons admiré ses merveilles, constaté une fois de plus tout ce que l'intelligence humaine, et tout ce que la classe ouvrière a contribué pour créer cette fête du travail et de la paix, et nous restons presque abasourdis de ces grandeurs. On y voit des machines de plusieurs milliers de force matrices, comme il y a des merveilles en fait d'objets d'art et de science accumulés. On distribue des prix, des médailles d'or et d'argent; les jurés du concours décernent les récompenses aux plus méritants, et l'univers proclamera que tel ou tel maison a le plus grand mérite.

Et pourtant, qui est ce qui a créé toutes ces belles choses? L'argent seul n'a certainement pu bâtir ces palais, ces machines et merveilles de toute sorte; l'argent seul n'a jamais pu ouvrir et mouvoir les millions de cervelles humaines, les millions de bras laborieux qui ont contribué à faire cette ville féérique près de St. Louis.

Où est la récompense pour tous ces chefs d'oeuvres, pour las classe productrice, pour tous les artistes aussi bien que pour les simples ouvriers et manoeuvres, qui sont les exécuteurs de cette sublime idée, rassemblant tout ce que le génie humain a su accomplir jusqu'à ces jours?

Vraiment, ils ont été récompensés bien mal. Une grande exposition attire beaucoup de monde; cela fait augmenter les loyers. Le prix des vivres se double sans qu'on puisse apercevoir une augmentation des salaires. Parmi ceux que la construction d'une exposition de cette grandeur fait accourir, se trouvent bon nombre de travailleurs manuels, qui espèrent tous trouver une occasion de faire quelque mois de travail bien rémunérés. Loin d'obtenir ce qu'ils désirent, causent-ils une concurrence fâcheuse aux ouvriers résidents sur place, et quand la fin, avec son inévitable, échec financier arrive, ils augmentent le nombre de cette réserve des sans travail, qui, tout en faisant les délices du patronat, sont la terreur des ouvriers qui, comme eux, se trouvent à la recherche d'une occasion pour gagner du pain pour leurs familles. Pendant ces temps, la ville ou l'état augmentent les taxes directes et indirectes, pour payer les énormes déficits que ces foires internationales occasionnent et comme le peuple en général paye toutes les contributions, il se trouvera forcé de payer celle-là aussi bien que les autres.

Nos camarades de St. Louis sont en ce moment en train de passer par cette mauvaise expérience. C'est par milliers qu'ils se trouvent sur le pavé et l'hiver approchant rapidement, l'horizon n'est pas bien rose pour ces infortunés que le mirage trompeur a attiré sur la place de St. Louis.

Mais ce ne sont pas seulement les travailleurs de la ville exposant qui ont souffert de ces entreprises plus ou moins hasardeuses. Les villes environnant ces centres s'en ressentent également. Les habitants de ces villes environnantes vont visiter l'exposition à leur tour et chaque dollar qui est emporté de la petite ville, et retiré de la circulation général pour entrer dans les poches de quelques-uns, soit de grands entrepreneurs, d'hôteliers, ou voir même dans la caisse municipale ou gouvernementale. Tel commerçant qui aura commandé un costume neuf chez le tailleur, ou acheter une ameublement pour embellir son appartement doit se contenter du vieux, usant l'équivalent en argent pour couvrir ses frais de voyage. Nous nous souvenons encore fort bien d'une exposition universelle, que l'on se proposait d'installer en France, à Paris même. C'était quelques années après la guerre et la Commune, et comme l'on cherchait à apaiser un peu les dissatisfactions de la classe ouvrière, l'on proposa d'établir cette exposition au cour de Vincennes, en continuant jusqu'au bois de ce nom. Jusqu'alors, on avait bâti les expositions au Champ de Mars, c'est à dire du côté des quartiers riches. Le bois de Vincennes se trouvant au delà du faubourg St. Antoine, quartier ouvrier par excellence, on voulait lui faire une grande faveur, en établissant un flux de passagers à travers ces quartiers. Mais les travailleurs plus sensés et surtout mieux avisés en matière économique que les propagateurs de cette idée protestèrent de la façon la plus vive contre cette tentation d'augmenter les vivres et le loyer dans leurs quartiers et les quartiers riches eurent l'honneur de posséder l'exposition tant convoitée.

Nos expériences tant à Chicago qu'à St. Louis, nous ont prouvé que les ouvriers parisiens avait raison.

ALPHONSE H. HENRYOT.

Le Mouvement Syndical en France.

La Fédération des Menuisiers.

Tout comme les charpentiers, les ouvriers menuisiers français ont pensé que leurs intérêts seraient mieux défendus par une fédération ne groupant exclusivement que des travailleurs de la même catégorie que par une fédération réunissant indistinctement tous les travailleurs du bâtiment. La vieille question, toujours controversée, de l'organisation par industrie ou par métier a été résolue par eux en faveur de la dernière de ces deux formes. La création remonte à l'année 1902. C'est donc une des plus jeunes organisations centrales et c'est à sa jeunesse même qu'il y a lieu d'imputer le peu de développement qu'elle a pris jusqu'alors; mais étant donné le nombre des syndicats de menuisiers, il est certain qu'elle est appelée à prendre une importance toujours croissante.

Le Congrès que la Fédération vient de tenir à Paris réunissait 28 délégués représentant 32 syndicats. Il examina tout d'abord la question de la protection du travail national, le chômage poursuivant rapidement une marche ascendant dans la corporation par suite de l'introduction en France de bois oeuvrés à l'étranger à des prix rendant toute concurrence impossible et cela grâce à l'exploitation intensive des femmes et des enfants dans les pays importateurs. Il fut décidé l'envoi d'un délégué au Congrès international de l'industrie du bois, qui doit se tenir prochainement à Amsterdam, avec mandat d'exposer la situation ainsi faite aux travailleurs français et de chercher en commun les moyens d'y porter remède. Relativement aux grèves, le Congrès, sans statuer d'une manière nette et précise sur les droits des grévistes, laissa au comité fédéral le soin de les soutenir selon les ressources de la Fédération.

Après s'être prononcé affirmativement sur la nécessité de créer un journal corporatif, il décida d'engager une campagne auprès du Parlement dans le but d'obtenir la consécration légale du repos hebdomadaire. Puis il protesta contre les rabais consentis par certains entrepreneurs les quels finissent toujours par retomber sur l'ouvrier sous forme de diminution de salaire, et décréta la mise à l'index de ceux qui commettraient de pareils abus.

Comme je l'ai déjà dit, la Fédération des menuisiers est une organisation nouvelle, donc en pleine formation. Il est certain que l'ordre du jour de ses futurs congrès sera plus nourri et que, l'expérience aidant et s'appuyant sur une force éprouvée, la Fédération y abordera des problèmes plus complexes et saura y trouver des solutions capables d'apporter des améliorations à la condition des ouvriers menuisiers.

La Justice et Les Ouvriers.

J'ai déjà indigné le grand mouvement qui s'est produit il y a quelques mois chez les travailleurs de l'industrie textile dans le but d'assurer l'application intégrale de la journée de 10 heures. Engagée sur un grand nombre de points du territoire, la lutte n'a pu être décrite ici que sous un aspect sommaire et général, laissant de côté les multiples détails du combat dont un grand nombre cependant étaient dignes de fixer l'attention tant par la nouveauté des procédés de résistance ou d'attaque mis en oeuvre par les deux adversaires que par le leçon qui s'en pouvait dégage. Mais la récente décision d'un juge d'instruction vient remettre violemment en lumière l'un de ces épisodes et rappeler une fois de plus aux ouvriers qu'entre eux et la justice il existe un abîme qui n'est pas près d'être comblé.

Neuvilly, dans le Nord, est un petit centre de tissage où l'exploitation patronale a atteint des bornes inimaginables. L'omnipotence du patron y était autrefois sans limites et les salaires rabaissés à un niveau inconnu partout ailleurs. Malgré cette déprimante situation économique les ouvriers avaient, il y a quelques temps, jeté les bases d'un syndicat, qui, aussitôt né, servit de cible aux coups du patron. A la fin de l'année dernière cet état d'hostilité latente dégénéra en guerre ouverte à la suite de la déclaration de la grève. Les patrons menacèrent alors de cesser définitivement leur exploitation. Le 31 janvier au cours d'une manifestation, des pierres étaient lancées contre la maison du directeur du tissage et presque au même moment, un incendie s'y déclarait qui la détruisait complètement. "De l'aveu même du maire de la localité, l'accident est dû à une lampe allumée." Une enquête fut immédiatement ouverte par la justice et l'on procéda à l'arrestation de quelques ouvriers que l'on relâcha quelques heures après, les preuves faisant entièrement défaut. Et la grève poursuivit son cours pour se terminer le 8 avril par un arrangement. C'est là que se plaça un véritable coup de théâtre. Le lendemain, alors que tout semblait avoir repris son cours normal, le village était cerné par d'importantes forces militaires et 27 ouvriers et ouvrières étaient arrêtés sous l'inculpation d'incendie d'une maison habitée, d'être possible de la peine de mort! Le 16 mai, 12 nouvelles arrestations, étaient opérées et l'enquête menée dans des conditions de partialité révoltante, les magistrats ne semblant que poursuivre un seul but, l'assouvissement de la haine patronale, ne reculant pour cela devant aucun moyen, depuis l'intimidation jus qu'au raceolage de faux témoins. Sous la pression de l'opinion publique, dix-huit des inculpés étaient mis en liberté provisoire, les autres restant incarcérés. Enfin le parquet de Cambrai vient de clore son instruction en renvoyant 12 des accusés en cour d'assises sous l'inculpation d'incendie volontaire et les 25 autres en police correctionnelle pour bris de clôture. Voilà donc quatre mois que sans l'ombre de preuves la justice, mise au service du capital, retient des travailleurs sous les verrous! Tout permet d'espérer que le jury saura donner à cette retentissante affaire la seule sanction qu'elle comporte: l'acquiescement pur et simple de tous les prévenus.

Crimes Patronaux.

A Cluses petite ville de Savoie spécialisée dans les travaux d'horlogerie, des événements non moins grave viennent de se dérouler qui vont permettre de constater si la justice a la main aussi lourde, quand cette main s'abat sur des patrons, d'autant mieux qu'il ne s'agit pas ici de faits non prouvés et improuvables, mais bien de véritables assassinats accomplis sans provocations aucune et perpétrés dans des conditions de sang-froid inimaginables. A Cluses, c'est l'éternel histoire qui recommença; un patron tout puissant et apprimant ses ouvriers de toutes les façons. Ceux-ci constituent un syndicat et commencent la résistance. Sur ces entrefaites arrivent les élections municipales. Les ouvriers ont alors l'audace d'opposer une liste ouvrière à la liste patronale sortante. A l'élection, les ouvriers sont battus. Ce succès ne donna pas entière satisfaction aux patrons qui pour punir les ouvriers d'avoir librement exercé leur droit de citoyen sous une république, renvoyèrent sept d'entre eux des ateliers. Immédiatement, leurs collègues se solidariserent avec eux et la grève suivit son processus ordinaire. Au cours d'une paisible manifestation, le cortège des grévistes défilait sous les fenêtres de l'usine en chantant "l'Internationale," quand tout à coup, sans qu'aucune provocation de leur part ne vint troubler la quiétude des patrons des coups de feu partirent de l'usine laissant trois morts sur le carreau à la première décharge. C'étaient les trois fils du patron et un ingénieur qui, de parti pris, commettaient un pareil forfait. A plusieurs reprises, ils tirèrent sur la foule désarmée, blessant une quarantaine de personnes! Le premier moment de stupeur passé, les ouvriers, fous de rage, se ruèrent sur l'usine en brisant tout. Quelques heures après elles n'étaient plus qu'un immense brasier. Les assassins, que la troupe arracha avec peine aux fureurs des grévistes, furent arrêtés et conduits en prison. Une enquête est ouverte et il faudra bien cette fois, que la justice aille jusqu'au bout. Mais voyez comme dans ce cas là elle est plus capétive! Alors que depuis des mois les inculpés de Neuvilly sont gardés sous les verrous sans preuves d'aucune sorte, l'in-

Le Mouvement Syndical en France.

(Suite.)

génieur qui était avec les fils du patron a été relâché, sa complicité, disent les juges, n'étant pas suffisamment établie. C'est toujours la même histoire. Inutile d'ajouter que ces faits ont soulevé la réprobation générale chez les travailleurs de toute les corporations, d'autant mieux qu'à Casamène, près Besançon, un fait analogue s'est produit presque à la même date, un patron blessant un ouvrier d'un coup de fusil. Je doute que ces moeurs nouvelles finissent par s'acclimater en France, autrement il n'est pas douteux qu'elle entraîneraient de terribles représailles.

Paris, le 3. aut, 1904.

La Confederation Generale du Travail.

Le confédération générale du travail, qui va tenir son Congrès à Bourges du 12 au 17 septembre, fut fondée à Limoges en 1895. Chacun de ses congrès, a depuis sa naissance apporté des modifications profondes à sa constitution et pour beaucoup il ne semble pas qu'elle soit encore en possession de sa charte définitive. Composée principalement au début de fédérations de métier et d'industrie elle se trouve aujourd'hui formée par la réunion de deux fédérations bien distinctes; l'une constituée par les fédérations corporatives, l'autre par la fédération des bourses du travail. Ce fut la solution donnée à la question de "l'Unité ouvrière" examinée au congrès de Montpellier en 1902. Les deux sections jouissent d'une autonomie complète et ont chacune à leur tête un secrétaire différent. Leur budget est également bien séparé et la réunion de leurs deux comités forme le comité de la confédération générale du travail. A côté de ces deux sections fonctionne le "comité de la grève générale" chargé de faire de la propagande en faveur de ce moyen d'action, que plus d'un considère comme le suprême accoucheur de la société future, toute de justice, d'harmonie et de paix.

Au cours des deux dernières années, le nombre des fédérations adhérentes à la confédération générale du travail est passé de 30 à 52 représentant 1,792 syndicats au lieu de 1,043 il y a deux ans. On point de vue financier, les recettes, durant la même période, se sont élevées à 18,370 fr. 25 (y compris l'encaisse de 6,488 fr. enregistrée au précédent congrès). Dans ce chiffre, les cotisations des organisations adhérentes figurent pour 11,076 fr. 35. Les dépenses se sont élevées à 18,013 fr. 10. C'est donc, entre les deux congrès, un déficit de 5,131 fr. l'avoir se trouvant ramené à 1,357 francs. La confédération possède un organe hebdomadaire, le journal la "Voix du Peuple," qui tire à 5,790 exemplaires.

La Fédération des Bourses du travail, qui constitue l'une des sections de la confédération, fut créée à Saint Etienne, en 1892, dans un congrès qui réunissait 10 Bourses du travail. (Je dois à mes lecteurs une courte définition de la Bourse du travail: C'est tout simplement une union locale de syndicats de diverses professions, laquelle groupe généralement presque tous les syndicats ouvriers d'une même ville.) La Fédération des Bourses a fait de rapides progrès depuis sa fondation. Elle comptait 83 Bourses en 1902; elle en annonce aujourd'hui 110, groupant 1,349 syndicats. L'encaisse, qui était de 1,220 fr. 55 au 30 juin 1902, se trouve ramené à 713 fr. 85 au 31 mai 1904, les dépenses (12,720 fr.) ayant été supérieures aux recettes (12,213 fr. 30).

Je rendrai compte du congrès de la confédération dans un prochain numéro du CARPENTER.

Congres International des Mineurs.

La Bourse du travail de Paris vient d'offrir l'hospitalité au quinzième congrès internationale des mineurs. L'Angleterre, l'Allemagne, l'Autriche, la Belgique et la France y avaient envoyé des délégués. Pour la première fois les Etats-Unis s'y étaient fait représenter par deux délégués. Le congrès tout entier a fait un chaleureux accueil à ces nouveaux venus dans le mouvement international et leur a manifesté sa sympathie en confiant à John Mitchell la présidence d'une des séances du congrès. Quelques journaux socialistes ont publié quelques "interview" du délégué américain et les déclarations de Mitchell ont été commentées avec un vif intérêt dans tout le monde du travail. A la suite d'intéressantes discussions, le congrès a voté diverses résolutions concernant la journée de 8 heures, l'établissement d'un minimum de salaire, la retraite pour les ouvriers mineurs et l'inspection des mines par les élus des ouvriers. Il a également invoqué l'intervention des Parlements dans la lutte contre le "ver des mineurs," cette triste maladie qui fait tant de victimes. La création d'un secrétariat international a été décidée en principe, mais sa réalisation ajournée quelques fédérations n'étant pas actuellement en mesure de verser les cotisations nécessaires à son fonctionnement. Ce sera l'oeuvre du prochain congrès qui se tiendra à Liège de donner la vie à ce nouvel organisme. John Mitchell a été désigné pour représenter les Etats-Unis au Comité international des mineurs.

Les Travailleurs.

Les travailleurs du textile, qui ont si vivement mené la bataille au mois d'avril dernier pour l'application de la journée de 10 heures, viennent de se réunir en congrès. Leur fédération compte actuellement une centaine de syndicats groupant près de 30,000 membres. J'ai déjà dit les conditions déplorables dans les quelles sont astreints de travailler les ouvriers textile. Cette situation a fait l'objet d'un long et minutieux examen de la part du congrès, lequel a pris quelques mesures destinées à renforcer l'organisation, notamment en décidant sa séparation absolue de tout parti politique et la création d'une caisse de grève alimentée par une cotisation mensuelle de un centime par fédéré.

"Yankee" Automatic Drill No. 44.
With Adjustable Tension.

Of all the automatic or hand drills in the market up to the present time there has never been one that has been entirely satisfactory for general use. The trouble has been that no one strength of spring in these tools would be satisfactory in both soft and hard woods, or for the large and small drills furnished with the tool. The best that could be done was to use a spring of average strength.

In this new Yankee drill known as No. 44, just placed on the market by North Bros. Mfg. Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., this difficulty has been overcome by a device to adjust the tension of spring, making it weaker or stronger according to requirement of character of wood to be drilled and size of drill to be used.

The cap on top of drill has a screw attached to it, by revolving which the spring is made longer or shorter, thereby making the spring weaker or stronger. The spring is held at desired tension by a small bolt or lock which engages in the cap and is operated by a small knob on side of handle.

To adjust the spring pull down the bolt on side of handle, turn the cap on end of handle to the right for heavier tension for hard wood or larger drills, or to the left for lighter tension for soft woods or smaller drills. Turn cap to position so the bolt enters opening in cap, to hold it from turning while using the tool.

To open magazine in handle containing the drill points, hold the drill with the chuck end up, and unscrew nut above handle, and all the drill points will be in sight, thus enabling the user to quickly select and remove drill point required.

To insert the drill points, hold the drill with chuck end up, turning sleeve on same to right as far as it will go. Insert drill point so it catches at bottom of chuck and will not turn, then turn sleeve to left until drill point is held solid.

Are You Dissatisfied?

Every man who has ambition is dissatisfied; not necessarily disgruntled or discouraged, or a malcontent, but dissatisfied because he wants to go higher. This is the right kind of dissatisfaction—it is the sign of a man who will make progress.

It is the mission of the International Correspondence Schools to help the man who is dissatisfied—the man who wants to better himself.

Thousands of ambitious carpenters and wood workers, aided by the I. C. S. system of training by mail, have been able to advance in place and salary. Many have been able to change their occupation, taking positions in their chosen profession. The accounts of the rise of some of our students read like romance.

A Very Successful Architect

While employed as a carpenter at $2.50 per day, I enrolled in the Complete Architectural Course. Within six months I had made such progress that I was able to accept a position as Building Superintendent, which was obtained for me by the Schools. I have opened an office here, and I am pleased to report a very satisfactory business. My income is much larger than ever before.

HARVEY BRAKEMAN, Architect,
First National Bank Bldg., New Kensington, Pa.

The I. C. S. system of training by mail teaches mechanics the theory of their trades; helps misplaced people to qualify for more congenial work; and enables young people to commence work at better salaries than if they started without training.

An I. C. S. Diploma is an evidence of ambition and honest effort as well as a certificate of thorough training. These are qualities sought and appreciated by employers.

What we have done for others we can do for you. Decide today to better your condition—then let us help you.

Mark an X before the position that interests you, fill in the coupon and mail it to us. We will send full particulars and our book, "1001 Stories of Success," which gives the names, addresses, and advancement of over a thousand of our students in all parts of the world.

Lamp Chimneys.

To prevent lamp chimneys from cracking, wrap each chimney loosely but entirely in a cloth; place them together in a kettle, and cover with cold water. Bring the water to a boil, continue the heat ten to fifteen minutes and then cool off. By this tempering they are toughened against all ordinary lamp heat.

MT. VERNON, N. Y.—We are making a desperate fight here against the open shop, and would request all union men to stay away until the difficulty is settled. We are O. K. with the independent bosses, but all the association bosses are unfair.

* * *

ST. LOUIS, MO.—We again must remind migrating carpenters of the fact that there is no opportunity for securing employment in this city at the present time, nor for some months to come. The number of idle men is enormous and many of them are completely stranded. Brothers, be sensible, and keep away from St. Louis, Mo.

* * *

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—Although twenty-five per cent. of us are idle all the time, the contractors and real estate sharks are advertising for men with a design, of course, to flood the city with labor. Migrating brothers should bear in mind that we have more carpenters here than work and that San Diego is a good place to stay away from.

* * *

CHARLOTTE, MICH.—Traveling brothers should think twice before coming to this place at this season. We are overrun with carpenters, union and non-union men. Our present agreement nearing its expiration, we shall soon have to adopt a new wage scale and business being very slow, we would request carpenters to keep away until further notice.

ALAMAGORDA, N. M.—Business in this vicinity is greatly depressed and carpenters are getting their share of the result. There is work only on a few small jobs and with the exception of two, all our members are walking the streets. Migrating carpenters are requested to steer clear of this locality, as their coming here would have a tendency of making tramps of resident brothers.

LONGVIEW, TEX.—Owing to a controversy between our local union and the Longview Cotton Oil Co., caused by their refusal to hire union carpenters on their building, we would request traveling brothers to give this locality a wide berth. The building mentioned is the only job in town at present and union men are walking the streets, while scabs are at work in the mill and said building.

* * *

ST. LOUIS, MO.—On August 3d, Judge Hough, of the Circuit Court, denied a temporary injunction in the suit of the Chas. A. Olcott Planing Mill Co. to restrain the former President of our D. C., Reinhard Fuelle, and other members of that body from boycotting the plaintiff and for interfering with his business. The court was also asked to declare our D. C. an illegal organization, which was equally denied.

* * *

CLEARFIELD, PA.—Carpenters coming here in search of employment are certainly choosing the wrong place, and would do better to go elsewhere. Work has been slack all through winter and spring and even this moment the outlook is gloomy indeed. We would request traveling brothers to remain away from Clearfield; we have more men here than there is call for and a good number of our members idle.

* * *

TEXARKANA, ARK.-TEX.—We are engaged in a bitter struggle for the establishment of our 35 cents an hour scale. Several of our contractors came over and signed up like men, but there are some who are stubborn and refuse to concede to our demand. These, the leading one of them being J. M. Brown, are now advertising for carpenters and traveling brothers are warned not to be misled. Stay away from this vicinity for the present.

BEFNETTSVILLE, S. C.—We have added two new members to our roll. A number of our boys working out of town, we meet on Saturdays to afford them the opportunity to attend our meetings, which generally are splendid ones and all hands are glad to meet. We are composed of that kind of material. We are no idlers, have some good workers, and we enjoy reading our journal, THE CARPENTER, each month. Our members are all at work and kept busy. Many good wishes for the brothers of the U. B.

GERMANTOWN, PA.—Thursday evening July 28, will long be remembered by L. U. 122. On that evening our lady friends presented the L. U. with a beautiful banner and our members and friends had gathered together in celebration of the event. Bro. Wm. J. Philepe, an ex-member of the G. E. B., gave us a brief history of the U. B. Bro. Heaney entertained us with his graphophone and the remainder of the evening was spent in short talks and merrymaking; ice cream and cakes were passed around freely and all present had a splendid time.

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.—In giving a brief outline of the local conditions we are sorry to say that we were compelled to place the race track here on the unfair list. We have tried all honorable and fair means to come to an understanding with the managers, but failed, and therefore had to call our men off. The race track people have advertised for men in Little Rock, Ark., St. Louis, Mo., and several towns in Texas, and as a result numbers of men are here stranded. Trade is very slack at this time. Carpenters contemplating coming here would do well to first investigate conditions and avoid disappointment.

* * *

WESTCHESTER, N. Y.—We had a little misunderstanding in regard to that part of our by-laws which provides for our wage scale. Our by-laws not being in print, the validity of these provisions was questioned and not observed by some of our bosses. After having been advised by the G. P. that our new by-laws, they having been submitted to and approved by him, had to be lived up to, whether in print or not, we insisted on the enforcement of our wage scale, which is 30 cents an hour, with the result that the delinquent bosses discharged their men at 5 p. m. and rehired them next morning, all agreeing to pay the union scale. Four of our brothers lost three days' work, the rest lost no time at all.

SHERMAN, TEX.—Our local union is in a better financial condition than ever before. We have a five years' lease on the finest union hall in North Texas. It was fitted up at the cost of $355.00, and our entire indebtedness will be liquidated by the end of the year. After that we shall have a neat little revenue coming into our treasury every month. We are now assisting our brothers from Denison, who are out for the eight-hour day, by shoving all the work we can into their hands, and for this reason would request all carpenters to remain away from Sherman, Tex., until further notice. We are ourselves preparing for an attempt to secure the eight hours next spring and there are more than enough carpenters here to do all the work between now and that time.

* * *

VICKSBURG, MISS.—Things look much brighter now than a month ago. Those of our members who, during our trouble with the master builders, remained in town, are all working, while those who left will return shortly and assist us in firmly securing regained ground. We recently held a meeting with the other trades for the purpose of making arrangements for the Labor Day celebration, and we are glad to say that all have learned a lesson from last year's occurrences and this year no discrimination will be made between black and white. Prompted by a feeling of gratitude and appreciation for the liberal donors we desire to publicly acknowledge receipt of the following contributions towards our defense fund during our struggle: Bricklayers' Union No. 2, Vicksburg, Miss., $10.00; L. U. 1348, Brookhaven, Miss., $36.00; L. U.'s Greenville, Miss., $10.00; L. U. 1706, Yazoo City, Miss., $28.50.

ANNA, ILL.—As we have never seen any report from L. U. 788 in THE CARPENTER, we will let the brothers know that in the State of Illinois there is a place called Anna. We have had a hard time of it here, the members for a while seeming to lose faith in our movement. But we are glad to say that Bro. S. G. Cunningham, the General Organizer, visited us and gave us a talk and our membership has manifested considerable interest in the organization ever since. We took in two new members last night and received more applications, while others have expressed a desire to join. During Bro. Cunningham's stay in this city we held a mass meeting which, though not very largely attended, had good results. Work is rather scarce here at this time and the prospects not very bright; nevertheless L. U. 788 is not dead yet and not going to be very soon.

HARTSHORN, I. T.—Our official paper comes to us regularly, and now we have ourselves to ask for a little space in its columns to let the outside world know what has been done or doing in this town. In the first place we desire that Hartshorn be placed on the dull list, and we would ask traveling brothers to give this place a wide berth. The Government Townsite Commission has closed down all work preparatory to selling the property in this town. Some of the buildings under construction are standing in the weather, some with only ground part completed, while some are as far advanced as only lacking the roof. Behold! the great Townsite Commission ordains that all work shall cease, and, presto, chango!—from a city of activity we are lowered to one of idleness. As far as carpenters are concerned only those working for the Rock Island and Coal Co. can boast of having employment. Please advise carpenters to stay away.

COLUMBUS, O.—We are actually overrun with men from outside points. From the influx of carpenters to this city it would appear that traveling craftsmen are under the impression that Columbus is a Paradise for carpenters. Such is not the case—many of the new-comers strike the business agent as soon as they land, expecting that he may have a job for them, and many are disappointed. We have resident carpenters enough to do all the work (and some to spare), and we believe that home talent is entitled to first place. Contractors are already trying to take advantage of the situation by offering wages at a lower scale. We earnestly request brother members to steer clear of this city at this time. Pay no attention to advertisements, as they are only calculated to mislead and flood our city with idle men. It is hard to keep our home men employed and many will be walking the streets before snow flies.

The Building Trades Lock-Out in New York.

One of the most serious labor conflicts that New York ever witnessed is the lockout of the men of the building trades ordered by the Employers' Association. The arbitration agreement forced on the building trades about a year ago, having been flagrantly and repeatedly violated by members of the association, the various organizations represented in the Building Trades' Alliance recently repudiated the agreement and declared it no longer of binding force.

The Board of Governors of the Employers' Association learning of this action, notified the unions that unless they lived up to the arbitration agreement and send their men back to work on those jobs where the agreement was violated by the employers and the men had struck work to get redress, a lockout would be declared against them. The unions decided not to send their men back under the terms of the existing agreement, and on August 5th the lockout followed, involving most all of the principal building trades. While the lockout was in progress the Employers' Association passed resolutions to the effect that if the union men do not return to work on August 22 the members of the association shall proceed on the strike jobs with such mechanics as will agree to work under the conditions of employment on Aug. 1st and governed by the aforementioned agreement. The unions having been unable to get results through this medium of employers' arbitration, and looking forward for terms whereby their interests may be securely protected, are determined to defy the ultimatum of the association as well as the restrictions dictated by them for many months past. The Building Trades' Alliance, the central body making the fight, and which the bosses refuse to recognize, has filed evidence with the District Attorney showing the Employers' Association to be an illegal combination in restraint of trade, preventing men from pursuing their vocation without being blacklisted or locked out. While this official has declared the evidence produced insufficient to sustain the charges, the employers are following their old tactics, trying to create dissension and discord among the men and disrupt the organization. With this design they had the President of the Building Trades' Alliance indicted on a charge of extortion in two instances, to which the accused pleaded not guilty. The bosses are now holding out all kinds of inducements to the individual men, making all kinds of promises to get them to sign the old agreement and resume work, but without any visible effect. The number of members of the U. B. involved in this struggle aggregates about 2,000, the bulk of our men being employed by independent bosses.

We hope that our New York brothers who, as this journal goes to press, are out nearly four weeks, fighting gallantly for their just rights, will be successful in holding their position and win out.

Wanted: Robert Williams.

Robert Williams, who was in Ogden, Utah, in 1890 and a member of the U. B. of C. and J. of A., will be imparted important and valuable information by communicating with

L. J. REEDER.

2653 Madison Ave., Ogden, Utah.

Look Out for Him.

BEAUMONT, TEX.—We would caution the brothers all over the country against one G. D. Patterson, who was engaged in the planing mill and wood working business in this city and left for parts unknown, owing several of our members for labor. He had his machinery loaded on the cars pretending that he was going to move to another part of the city. But he has skipped out of town and presumably out of the State. Please give this space in THE CARPENTER, and advise brothers to be on the lookout for him.

All matters for publication in The Carpenter and all advertisements must be in the hands of the General Office not later than the 25th of the month in order to appear in the following month's issue.

Stick to the Union.

The great capitalists of this nation have started out to throw workingmen out of employment and reduce wages in order that they can smash unions. If we had no failings ourselves, we would not take so much pleasure in finding out those of others.

To the Delegates Attending the Thirteenth General Convention of the U. B. of C. and J. of A.

The undersigned being deeply interested in the placing of our society in the front ranks of trade organizations begs your indulgence of what follows. I fully understand the magnitude of your mission as legislators, and can appreciate your desires to advance the general interests of our grand organization. On these lines it appeals to me that we can not have the ideas of too many of the worthy followers of the principles of unionism, and it should be considered not only a privilege but a duty as well to interest ourselves in the exercise of what intelligence we may possess in aiding the work of devising ways and means whereby the minimum of perfection may be attained that the power and influence of the U. B. may be capable of standing any test it is put to. Let us not be deceived for we are now on the eve of troublous times, and to be able to successfully withstand the pressure brought to bear by the combatant influences we are forced to work on lines of perfecting our machinery to avoid all grating and jarring, or as near this as circumstances will permit. With this in mind, I take the liberty of suggesting a few matters that appeal to me as deserving attention, and will present as proposition No. 1: The need of a greater sympathy with the labor interests as to-day organized, that we may show by our acts the unselfishness of the membership of the U. B. in standing by the cause that can only be successful through a cementing of the forces in one grand movement where the interests of one are the interests of all. We have arrived at the age where we have as combatants a force of capitalists who are skilled and scientific in generalizing their movements against the interests we represent. The ablest brains that the world produces are bought up and used by these combines and trusts to further their interests and extend their possibilities on the lines of concentrating the country's wealth. They deny to labor a recompense above the bare existing state and the workers in their undignified condition of division within the ranks as organized, contending one with the other on matters that should come within the scope of ordinary intelligence to settle and settle without the possibility of appealing to passion or prejudice. The lack of harmony within the ranks of organized labor is undoubtedly its greatest weakness. "In union there is strength." Divided we fall is as true to-day as it ever were, and to me it would appeal that this truism should be ding-donged into the brains of the members of the labor movement from the A. F. of L. down. The principles of the Parryites and similar organizations are that an injury to one is the concern of all. If this is considered good and necessary to these antagonistic combines that are built to disrupt the labor influence, why should the organized workers depart from this same principle and deprive themselves of this same power considered so essential to this other form of organization? The reason is plain; those of us acquainted with the workings of the movement appreciate the power vested in concrete form of amalgamation, and while there is an admitted weakness with the forces as organized it represents but part of the defect. It is apparent to every observer that the things that are done and the way of doing them are not but partially satisfying. We don't get what we know belongs to us on conditions that prescribes to our liking, but rather what we can get subject to the dictates of the opposing influence. The character who robs labor of its dignity in this particular is the doubting Thomas whose position is that of being on the outside acting in the capacity of a reactionist and is responsible not only for retarding progress but as subjecting his class to the indignities before referred to. So it behooves us in considering a remedy for this retarding influence to consider as Proposition No. 2: the matter of perfecting organization as applying to the unorganized men of our craft. The present administration, it is safe to say, has held this principle in the foreground as one of the needs to a successful term of office, and they are to be commended for the showing made when the meager resources at their command be considered. When we contrast the old methods of permitting organization to care for itself and the years under this reign that were anything but fruitful to the interests represented with that of our present methods of first attention to perfecting our growth and results achieved, the wisdom of the administration is apparent and commendable. We have exercised our science as builders with gratifying results in these last few years and with a further consideration given to this foundation work we can build a comfortable as well as a profitable abiding place for the craftsmen throughout for all times to come.

In Proposition No. 3 I desire to present another principle of the organization that should be changed to our growing needs, and that is what is known as our trade protective policy. In the present state it does not protect, nor is it satisfying to at least that part of the membership who occupy positions in our movement that require radical action or who are subject to the employers' weapon, the lock-out. Considerable discontent exists among the members on this matter. Ways have been devised to overcome this weakness at our former conventions, but have lacked the support of the rank and file, probably from a lack of an understanding of the effect produced by this deficient system. They have repeatedly refused to concede to the organization any part of the gains made possible therefrom. This would lead to the belief that the discontented ones should at least be consistent by either changing the system or submitting to its defects without comment. My version of the situation is that while the apathy referred to represents the past I feel that our present or future need not be gauged by it. Age improves the knowledge of men, and so our members must see that this system is economically wrong on many grounds, but especially injurious from the fact that the up-to-date employers' associations generally have the knowledge of our condition down as fine if not finer than has the average member within our ranks, and knowing our financial weakness it naturally stimulates their opposition on the grounds that a contending army lacking ammunition is a force easily defeated, and so this deficiency not only prolongs the contention but usually results in a defeat of the side unfinanced. Not only that, but the donations as furnished through general office are expended to the purpose of not being in sufficient quantity to assure success, with the after effect of making future movements doubly expensive and much harder to master on the grounds of stimulating the opposition and abusing the confidence and trust of our members, and besides this, a waste of our meager finances. It is a truism that the best financed trade unions have the fewest strikes. On the principle, says the Bridgeman, that a bully never tackles his match, but always a weaker fellow. The strong are left in peace. We need strength of this kind if our dignity as an organized force is to be maintained. I personally feel that a fund of at least $1.00 per capita should be held in reserve for defense purposes, and continued on similar laws as used by Cigar Makers' International Union. This fund might be accumulated by the paying in of a quarterly tax of 25 cents per member, the details to govern and continue the said fund would be an easy matter, providing the membership would sanction its accumulation.

Another plank that needs modernizing is what is known as our representative plank. There is no principle that appeals to the American people as that principle that represents equality on the matter of representation and taxation. It was the abuse of this principle by King George that produced the American revolution which resulted in the verifying of the position of the protestors, and so handed this principle down as a sacred thing to be cared for and operated in all American institutions; no special favors shown to the strong that operates to the detriment of the weak, and this principle in justice should apply to the U. B. There is perfect equality on the taxation end and as both of these principles weigh equally in the scales of justice, both should receive precisely the same treatment in their operation. In justice we can't afford to take from our membership anything that legitimately belongs to them. It is safe to say that at none of our conventions is a majority representation present, the delegates attending varying from 200 to say 400, calculating this number on the basis of one delegate to a single local there would be but four hundred locals represented, or a one-quarter representation of the unions. It is possible that the membership representation might be a little higher from the fact that it is only the numerically strong unions that can afford the privilege of representation. But some might say that the membership have the right of referendum. True, but only in accepting or rejecting by section the legislation emanating from this minority wing of the society. If we as an organized force believe in the principle of majority rule, then it is time we ceased abusing the principle. It may be said that all unions are equally privileged under the present laws. Yes, but unfortunately all are not financially conditioned to assume the privileges. It therefore appeals to me that the present system while possibly satisfying in the ages past, is not in keeping with our present needs. There is much of the work that is now done in convention that could be done with a greater degree of profit and justice through the referendum vote of the membership. Through a change of this character the time between conventions could be lengthened and our laws amended to conform with the experience produced on this line by other national crafts organizations. By doing this we would cut out the election of officers and delegates and bring the general convention down to a basis of being a purely legislative body, and in my judgment that should be its only function. To me the time given to convention sessions is not sufficient to do justice to this matter and work out the details necessary to the change. It might, therefore, be of advantage to submit the whole question to a special committee, say one from each of the districts. Allow the said committee to act in their individual capacity and permit them to collect information and promulgate ideas, submitting the same in a report to the General Office not later than January 1, 1905. Then to have the matter as submitted referred to the G. E. B. in conjunction with the G. P. and G. S., they to go through the matter as a whole and select what to them is considered best to the interest of the U. B., after which the G. S. be instructed to present the work as compiled to referendum vote of the membership. The columns of THE CARPENTER might be opened up to ideas on the subject. I trust that I may be pardoned for the time consumed in presenting the matter herein contained. The subject matter appeals to me strongly as the changes needed to place the U. B. in an up-to-date position. Understand in submitting this I do not do it on the basis of criticism of our past—I would rather be understood as commending the good that has been done. A retrospect of our work is satisfactory. But influences are at work to reduce our opportunities and retard the general progress. Future amelioration will only come through vigilance and scientific handling of the craft's interests. To you we leave their development, with the hope that your judgment may be inspired to do the things needed to insure permanency to our grand Brotherhood.

No Convict Labor Employed by Ohio Tool Company.

About a year ago we wrote to each of the Carpenters' Unions, denying that we employ convict labor, a report having been circulated to that effect.

Notwithstanding this, we learn that some are still under the impression that we still use convict labor in the manufacture of our iron and wood planes, chisels, drawing knives, auger bits, etc.

We beg to say that we do not employ convict labor in any way, manner or form, and that any reports to the contrary are false.

A Uniform Working-Card to Be Issued By General Office.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

In view of the practice in vogue in many localities of District Councils or local unions charging members from other districts for a working card, while at the same time they are equipped with and have paid for one in their own local union, I wish to suggest a plan which if approved of and adopted by our next convention would put a stop to these unfair and unjust proceedings, and as I believe, will do justice to all concerned.

Members generally would not object to paying for a working card in the district in which they are working, but they do object when compelled to pay also for a card in the local union of which they are a member. As a result it is almost an impossibility to make members belonging to an outside district pay for a card without using extreme measures. They think that the organization is trying to get every cent it possibly can from them, and we should endeavor to vanquish this bitter feeling by making provisions in our General Constitution for a uniform working card to be issued by the General Office and by not recognizing any other.

Going further into the details of the plan, I would suggest: First, that the General Office issue a uniform working card to be furnished the local unions at the price of 25 cents per month, said amount to constitute the monthly per capita to the General Fund.

Second—Every local must charge its members 25 cents per head and month for a quarterly working card to be issued at the first meeting night of each quarter.

Third—Any member working in a district other than his own must pay for a working card in said district and shall not be charged for a card in the district where he is a member.

Fourth—In a district where a D. C. or a L. U. employs a Business Agent the latter shall note the names of all outside members working under the jurisdiction of the D. C. or L. U. and at the next meeting hand them over to the F. S. of D. C. or L. U. The F. S. shall, at the end of each quarter make out a statement, giving names of outside members and length of time they have been working in the district and forward same to the F. S. of the different local unions to which these members belong. Should any member have paid for the working card in his own local union, the F. S. of same shall remit to the D. C. or L. U. under whose jurisdiction the member has been working, 25 cents for each month in payment of working card.

Fifth—If a member has been working 16 days in an outside district he shall pay the monthly rate of 25 cents to the D. C. or L. U. of said district; if he has been working less than 16 days in the outside district, the D. C. or L. U. issuing the card shall retain the full amount for that month.

Sixth—A fine of not less than two dollars shall be imposed on any F. S. of any D. C. or L. U. failing to promptly make out a correct statement of names of outside members and time worked in district and forward same to the local unions to which they belong, together with all just claims, within thirty days after the expiration of any quarter.

Trusting that the membership will take up this working card question and settle it for good and all time, I remain fraternally,

A Brotherhood Sanitarium.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

By request of L. U. 264, Boulder, Col., we publish the subjoined report of a committee appointed by the local union for the purpose of devising ways and means for the establishment of a Brotherhood Sanitarium:

To the Officers and Members of L. U. 264, Boulder, Col.:

Your committee appointed to take preliminary steps in an endeavor to have a sanitarium built and located at Boulder, Col., to be the property of the U. B. of C. and J. of A., and to be governed by such laws as the organization may adopt and to be under the control of the G. E. B., beg leave to submit the following report:

The plan of establishing a sanitarium for the free treatment of brother carpenters or their dependent ones afflicted with lung trouble, deserves to be commended. Your committee believes that an assessment of one dollar per member of the U. B. will bring an amount of money sufficient to purchase ground, erect, equip and furnish suitable buildings for the accommodation of one hundred and fifty patients. We further believe that an annual assessment of 50 cents per member would furnish the U. B. with a sufficient sum for the maintenance of the institution and would cover the expenses incurred in its management.

We do not believe there is a man in the U. B. who would not be willing to pay an assessment to be applied to such a cause, and therefore offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That our delegates to the thirteenth biennial convention of the U. B. of C. and J. of A. be and are hereby instructed to bring before said convention a preamble, as may be required, setting forth the usefulness of a Brotherhood Sanitarium and the advantages derived from such an institution and to use all honorable means to have same submitted to the members of the several unions, so they may be enabled to vote for or against the plan of establishing this sanitarium.

In advocating this plan L. U. 246, Boulder, Col., is solely guided by a spirit of humanity, realizing as we do, together with the great majority of American people, that the "white plague" (tuberculosis) is undermining the constitution of the people, thereby producing an inferior race. We also realize that the members of the U. B. and their dependent ones are not exempt from this dreadful disease and that when afflicted few of them are provided with the necessary means to secure medical attention and care, and to select surroundings cheerful and bright, with plenty of fresh air and sunshine, the great essentials for the relief and convalescence of sufferers. Thousands of the latter are coming here every year and many, very many, are benefited thereby.

The less fortunate, however, those of small means, who are coming here in the expectation to find something to do that might enable them to earn a living, but meet with failure, become discouraged and destitute. And when poverty and sickness combine it is not difficult to see the end, which is often a suicide's grave.

Hoping that the brothers will give this matter the attention it deserves and that the local unions will instruct their delegates to our next convention to vote in favor of submitting the question of establishing a Brotherhood Sanitarium to the membership of the U. B., we remain, yours in brotherhood,

The Plan of Owning Our Office Building.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

In an article published in THE CARPENTER about a year ago, I offered some suggestions as to ways and means of securing a building of our own for our headquarters. Whether the idea is a popular one or not, I can not say, but having in the meantime noticed three or four articles in our journal on the same subject, you will kindly allow me once more to say that in my judgment the owning of our own headquarters has become a necessity. Our Brotherhood will soon have completed its twenty-fifth year of existence and still we are paying rent for the rooms occupied by the General Office. I deem it about time for our membership to give this matter their earnest consideration, to study it over and see if we can not do away with the paying of rent.

In my previous article I suggested as a means to raise the necessary funds for the procuring or erection of such a building the levying of an assessment of one dollar per head upon our membership until the required amount was obtained. Now I must confess that last year's experience has convinced me of the unfeasibility of this method. I find that the taxing of our membership for any purpose is sure to create more or less hard feeling, for the poor carpenters are already burdened too heavily. And though the taxing in this instance would be for a good cause, one that the U. B. could be proud of, I now believe that it would be more advisable to first test the feeling of our membership in this respect. If the brothers think that we can stand the pressure then let them come forth and say so in THE CARPENTER, or through their local unions to the General Office. I hope the General Officers will take a hold of this matter and give us an idea of about the size and cost of a suitable building. Let us have a house of our own that will bring us an income instead of continually causing a stream of expenses against our treasury. Hoping that the plan will meet with popular favor and the subject more freely agitated in the future, I will wait and listen patiently and attentively to all the brothers may have to say. Fraternally,

F. E. MADISON,

Disapprove of Umpire's Plan of Amalgamation.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Local Union 657, Sheboygan, not having been heard from for a long time, we wish to let the brothers know that we are still up and doing.

At a special meeting held on July 22, we took up the decision of Umpire Strasser on the amalgamation of the U. B. with the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters, and came to the following conclusions:

The decision is unfavorable to a local union of our size—of about 100 members. With the percentage allowed a local union under our present laws, we can just meet the local expenses and nothing to spare, but under the provisions laid down in Strasser's decision our expenses would, in our estimation, considerably increase, as their application or enforcement would necessarily require a salaried officer. We also find that under our present system, figuring on 15 cents weekly dues, we are deriving more benefit than we would under the plan of amalgamation.

This plan, if adopted, would also prevent us from any manifestation of our solidarity with other organizations. It would be an impossibility to assist other unions in distress, unless we assess our members especially for the purpose, while at present our local treasury permits the rendering of assistance to other unions without levying any special assessment on our membership. We further claim that the plan when in operation will render it far more difficult to organize new local unions and gain new members.

It is the sentiment of L. U. 657 that in order to enable us to pay $1.00 per day to members involved in any duly authorized strike or in any lockout, the General Constitution of our U. B. be so amended as to provide for a monthly per capita to the General Office of 30 cents instead of 20 cents.

With the intent to stimulate discussion on these subjects, we desire the publication of the above statement in THE CARPENTER. Hoping that the local unions will give the matter their careful consideration, we remain, yours fraternally,

CHAS. SHIRMEISTER,

Monetary Benefits Unite and Hold.

To the Editor of The Carpenter:

These benefits, and these alone, build up and keep in existence all insurance orders.

It is sometimes said that there is nothing in a name, and again it is said that a name is significant.

The latter saying in general is true and the former untrue. I assume that when the founders of the A. S. of C. and J., as well as the founders of the U. B., were selecting a name for their respective organizations they held that a name was significant and indicative and chose accordingly.

The first word of each organization indicates the object, UNITY—unity of the workers in a particular craft for certain specific purposes, and as an inducement to unite and maintain unity certain monetary benefits were provided by each, but the A. S. of C. and J. provided more and different benefits than the U. B., and herein lies its power to unite and hold its membership and to more successfully conduct a strike when it enters upon one.

I stop right here to say that I am not claiming that these financial features, or any others, increase their membership, for, for obvious reasons not necessary to state in this article, the A. S. of C. and J. does not increase its membership as fast as the U. B.

After an organization is started two things are essential to its success and its very life:

First—To increase its membership.
Second—To retain its membership.

The A. S. of C. and J. has been more successful in the latter than in the former.

The special benefits referred to are named in the following statement prepared for me by the Secretary of the Denver branch (about 230 members), which shows the amount paid by it from January 12th, 1903, to January 11th, 1904:

Superannuation (3 members).....	$ 453.60
Unemployed	196.62
Sick	286.05
Strike	25.37
Accident (partial)	175.00
Tool	146.60
	$1,283.24

I want to say here that I am not boasting the A. S. of C. and J., but I simply want to show that a change in our financial system is necessary to hold our members after we get them, and that a plan is arranged in Strasser's Report, which I hope will be approved by our next convention.

Organized Labor Must Be Conducted on Most Improved Business Methods.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Dear Sir and Brother—In the July edition of THE CARPENTER, under the caption, "High Initiation Keeps Them Out," appears an article signed by G. Toyne, President of Local Union No. 815, San Francisco.

In this article Brother Toyne does San Francisco, as well as organized labor in general, and our Brotherhood in particular, a great injustice. Bro. Toyne is not from San Francisco, neither is 815. Brother Toyne speaks among other things of the $1 per month cost of unionism, as well as the Saturday half holiday, and then endeavors to point out what a good thing it is for the non-union man who can work Saturday, and other days, while union men cannot.

He also speaks of the large number of non-union men, consequent upon high initiation and high dues in San Francisco and Oakland.

Now, Bro. Editor, while it is a fact that the non-union man may, if he wishes to, work ten or twelve hours a day, all night even, Sundays and holidays if he wants to, does Brother Toyne consider that a sufficient inducement for the union men to work also? Is that the way we must act in order to further reduce our hours of labor, much less enforcing generally the eight-hour day and the half-day Saturday? I guess not.

There are non-union men in San Francisco. There are plenty of them in his own district, Oakland. Some few years ago they were in San Francisco, but to-day, Brother Toyne, with a fine-tooth comb and a half a dozen search warrants, could not find in all San Francisco as many non-union carpenters or other mechanics engaged in the building business as there are members in his union, 815, of Haywards; and if THE CARPENTER for July is right, that local has 39 members in good standing..

Now, what has caused the change in San Francisco? What inducements were offered the non-union men that compelled them to join the union at $20, when they refused at $2.50. Was it a vacillating policy, scheme or theory, such as that suggested by Brother Toyne's article?

No, Bro. Editor, the policy that did the work in San Francisco can do it elsewhere, if inaugurated in the same manner as we established it and conducted it here. The bringing about in 1895 of a Building Trades Council which many years ago prohibited any man engaged in the building business working with other than union men, is alone responsible for the change. The fighting for six months and six days, and the ultimate winning of the eight-hour day, and union conditions for our Brotherhood millmen; the paying them during that time $6 per week and pickets $9 and $12 per week, as well as building, equipping and operating one of the best and largest mills in the country (the Progressive Planing Mill Company, organized under the laws of our State). The unions owning every share of stock, worth in January, 1901, when the Council began operations, $5 per share, now $7.50, and paid $1 per share in dividends. Also the publishing of a paper of its own. All told costing many thousands of dollars, all of which, less $4,200, was put up by this same San Francisco Building Trades Council, through its affiliated union men. This is what brought the change and what is going to keep it.

It is high time that this sympathetic, wishy-washy, happy-go-lucky policy, indicated in Brother Toyne's article regarding organized labor be dispensed with. It is not only wrong, but absolutely repulsive, and must prove disastrous to all organizations dependent upon such flimsy means of support.

Organized labor the country over, in all its departments, in order to be successful, must be conducted in accordance with the most improved business methods. When the labor movement is conducted on strictly business lines, to the exclusion of sympathy, prejudice, passion or hate, then and not until then will it be a success, indicative of that which crowns all other legitimate institutions.

Speaking for organized labor, if I may be permitted to, I desire to say that if we are to win fair conditions from our employers, backed up as they are in many instances by corrupt combinations of employing corporations, we must prepare ourselves for the battle. We must be able to fight, and that means that we must occupy a position which will enable us to support and care for our members while the fight or controversy lasts.

In other words, when it is necessary to call men out, or to cease operations, we must be able to take care of our members who have thus laid down their tools. As we are now financially conditioned, it is easy for any and all corrupt combinations of contractors and others to beat us. We have little or nothing back of us, only our numerical strength, and the good wishes of thousands, which strength under said adverse conditions must necessarily prove our weakest point. Few, if any, small establishments have the "nerve" to fight the powerful trusts of to-day. Why? Because they are not strong enough and cannot afford to fight; and so it is with organized labor. We, from a momentary standpoint, in all our Brotherhoods, have little or nothing behind us. We strike for our rights, all equity and justice on our side, but because of distress among our members, and no treasury to relieve the same, we have to in a large number of instances give in. The employers know our weakness, and invariably play on it.

In our Brotherhood our President, Secretary and Treasurer, and the other officers being among the best and most able in the country, would, in the face of such a financial condition maintaining in our organization, be powerless in the premises. And the same is true of organized labor generally. What, then, ought organized labor do? Bro. Editor, each Brotherhood ought to finance itself so that it could safeguard the interests of its members.

Our Brotherhood, with one hundred and eighty or ninety thousand men, whose rights must be defended, no matter where they are, should have, in order to do so, a treasury of at least one and a half or two million dollars. This treasury can be very easily raised, and that in a manner that will not disturb even the poorest of us. That done, the scabbishly inclined employer or combination of employers will hesitate and think a thousand times before attacking a local union or a district behind which stands hundreds of thousands of men with a treasury of that kind to support them. As it is with our Brotherhood, Bro. Editor, so it is with all others, and I repeat, organized labor must be financed because, while it has done a wonderful work for the wage earner, it has much more to do, and because of what it has done, the non-union man has no right to object to the payment of the initiation and dues of to-day; and he will not object if he knows, as he certainly must, that to do so means loss to him.

The way to accomplish this is through organization on business lines, which, as I have pointed out, means to do something instead of talking about it, and the sooner we, the members of organized labor, get down to practical business, the better for all concerned.

Trusting, Bro. Editor, that I have not encroached too much on your valuable space, and that the day is not far distant when our Brotherhood, as well as all others, will be placed on a financial basis where they can do business through the most improved business channels, and like all other institutions having vested property as well as citizenship rights, be able to protect them, and with best wishes for the success of our Brotherhood, as well as organized labor in general, I have the honor to remain,

Yours very fraternally,

P. H. MCCARTHY,

Member Local Union No. 22, San Francisco, and President Building Trades Council of San Francisco and California.

High Initiation Fee Drives Thousands From the Union.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

I have just read in the May CARPENTER, Bro. T. W. Roberts' article on "Why They Don't Join Our Organization," and I indorse all he said. But there are other reasons. While the Constitution says, "Beneficial members shall pay not less than 50 cents per month, and semi-beneficial members not less than 30 cents per month," (a difference of 20 cents), I have known a case where the union gave $5.00 per week sick benefits to beneficial members on a 65 cents per month dues, and charged semi-beneficial members 40 cents per month and would not allow them any sick benefits. Some refused to join, and some working there refused to bring clearance cards because they could get sick benefits in their home union. But I think the greatest trouble is in the unions charging $15 to $25 initiation fees. Such high fees drives thousands from the union. Some because they will not submit to being fleeced, and many because they can not afford it. But in every case they make an enemy to the union who is ready to go and take strikers' places. And who can blame them? If a man comes and wants to be one of us, and is willing to pay a fair price, and we set a price out of reason we deserve his ill-will. Some unions set a $25 fee and then write to neighboring unions, begging them to put their price up so other carpenters can not join them, and then come to the high-priced union by clearance card. Trying to hog the whole thing. Where is any justice, love of humanity, or unionism in such a course?

Sir, it is to the union's interest to have every carpenter in the United States and Canada in the unions. Then when we have a strike the surrounding country would not be full of non-union men to rush in and take our places, as is the case to-day. And I am sorry to say in many cases they have been forced to remain non-union men through the selfishness of some high-priced union. I hope to see the next national meeting of our order declare that the initiation fee shall be $5 in all unions.

Let us make it easy for all carpenters to join our order, so we can get in all where we have a union, so every carpenter going into an unorganized section will go preaching unionism instead of cursing the unions for their selfishness in keeping other men out with their high fees. Fraternally,

The Digressive's Predicament.

Dear Jack:

Our church is split in two factions, the "primitives" and the "progressives." The latter have a fine church and organ, as well as all modern improvements. The former denounce all "machinery" or vain devices as of the devil. The primitives call the progressives, the DI-gressives, and so the war goes on. I have tried my best to help both sides, and with what success is told in

THE DIGRESSIVES' PREDICAMENT.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow," Sang the good old preacher, but he got it too low.

Then, hemming and hawing and blinking his eyes,

He gave the old tune a considerable rise; But not being up on musical lore, He actually got it worse than before; It wouldn't do now, it was no use to try, And some one suggested "It's a leetle too high."

The scene was so trying, the strain was so great,

I felt myself called on to set matters straight;

So I took out my fork, gave it a whack on my shoe,

As I'd often seen teachers in singing do, And finding I'd got the old thing about right,

I lit out to singing with all my might "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow, Praise Him all creatures here below."

But I found I had got my foot in it somehow,

For instead of singing they kicked up a row.

The brethren they twisted their necks a la stork,

Some gazing at me, and some at my fork, Some giggled, some grinned, some looked at the floor,

And some took a sneak at the vestibule door;

But these were not saints in good standing, you see—

Just every-day, go-as-you-please sinners like me.

I stared at the people, I stared at the pews, I stared at the lamps with their dirty flues, 'Till my eyes fairly ached in their burning sockets, And the thirty-five cents in my breeches pockets Got hotter and hotter—to give me a tip— But I did not know whether to take membership,

To get out of the scrape, or cut and run— I really did not know what I had done.

When a good old sister with a wart on her chin,

And a face as beautiful as home-made sin, Looked at me thro' glasses as big as a bowl,

And tearfully said—God bless her old soul—

"You pore sinful creetur, you DI-gressive one."

Then—I blush to confess it—I turned tail and run.

I stepped on myself as I tore thro' the crowd,

Which sat horror-stricken, for I swore out loud,

Not because I was frightened—please understand that—

But I grabbed up a bonnet instead of a hat, And having no time to look in a glass, I'm afraid that I looked very much like an ass.

As I said, I didn't know just what I had done,

But an idea struck me at last as I run, And little by little I figured it out,

And guessed what they had made such a blamed fuss about.

They say that the instruments old David made,

On which the primitive Levites played, Are traps and snares devised by the devil

To catch the unwary—their heads may be level—

And they cannot be holy where such tempters are used;

"They won't sit still and see the good Lord abused

In any such manner, they're not quite so green

As to grind out their prayers on a hand-made machine."

Now that's why the old preacher scowled at my fork,

With his head jammed down in his neck like a cork,

And that's why the brethren sat silent and still

As I sang out alone with such hearty goodwill;

And that's why the sisters rose up as one man

In eager defense of the "primitive" plan, And made it so plain that something was wrong

With my way of singing, not with the song, That then I got rattled, as one might say,

And I've fired that fiendish old fork away.

The worst scab is the union scab. He is the man who is benefited by union wages, but who smokes scab cigars, chews scab tobacco and wears scab clothes, and never pays for a union paper. Such a man should be fired out of the union, because he is a hide-bound hypocrite, and of no benefit to the organization. Union men can afford to pay more for label goods. The label enables them to make more and they should always see that the label is on articles used by them, as well as by all other members of their craft.—Ex.

Quarterly Report of General President, Wm. D. Huber.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 1, 1904.
To the Members of the General Executive Board—Greeting.

In making this, my last quarterly report for the year ending June 30, 1904, I desire to call your attention to the magnificent growth we have attained in that time. New Local Unions have been organized; membership of the old ones has been increased, and we can well be proud of the outcome of the strikes that have been forced upon our members in the open shop demands of the Employers' Associations, and of strikes of other causes, where our brothers have been forced to make the stand for Union Principles.

Proud I am of the bold stand that many of our District Councils, Local Unions and members have taken against this method of the employers in trying to inaugurate not only the "open shop," but to make Union shops non-union.

Our members have stood the test so far, without losing in any single instance in this fight for their rights and just demands. Many localities have been assisted by you, and some yet need further assistance, which I feel assured you will grant when needed.

The members involved in their struggles should receive all the encouragement possible, as the "open shop" question must be met with a firm and determined stand upon our part.

More mills have been organized this year under the banner of the Brotherhood than any other year in our history.

The strikes that have taken place have, as a rule, been successful this spring, and the outlook for the future success of our Organization is very encouraging.

Our staff of Organizers is second to none—all have been doing good and grand work, not only in building up our Brotherhood, but also in advocating the true principles of the Trade Movement, which will assuredly be the means of further advancing its interests in the future.

Seventy-two new Local Unions have been organized since April 1st, 1904, and quite a number of A. W. W. Locals have voluntarily surrendered their charters in that Organization and become affiliated with this U. B., and more of them are asking on what terms they can be admitted to our Brotherhood.

I feel that the time is not far distant when we will have one Organization in this country of the men working at the wood-working industry, whether he be a carpenter, machine hand, or cabinet maker. We have been working to bring this about for some years, and the prospect for the ultimate success of our endeavors along those lines are certainly encouraging.

May we in the future meet with the same success as we have in the past, and I believe that this can easily be accomplished by our officers and members taking the proper interest in the affairs—the success of the Brotherhood. Respectfully submitted,

WM. D. HUBER,
U. B. of C. and J. of A.

Quarterly Report of First Vice-President, T. M. Guerin.

Greenwich, Conn., July 1, 1904.
To the G. E. B. of the U. B. of C. and J. of A.:

Brothers—I beg leave to submit the following report for the quarter ending June 30th, 1904:

I left Indianapolis on June 4 for Collinsville, Ill., where our men had made a demand for fifty cents a day increase in wages. I conferred with the L. U. and contractors, and the latter finding that the majority of the members were offered work by fair contractors at the increased rates, they conceded to the demands, though with poor grace. The success in this instance is due to the way the members keep after non-union men coming to the locality. Each and every member is a business agent in himself, and they are rewarded by the desired results.

From Collinsville I went to Topeka, Kans., where I found the L. U. in poor shape. They just having elected a business agent, I spent a few days with him visiting the different jobs. There was plenty of work in town, but the membership is lacking of backbone; they seem to be afraid to ask non-union men to join the union. The few good workers in the town are discouraged and the L. U. wants the General Office to appoint and pay for a Business Agent for them. According to latest advices received from Topeka, the local Business Agent had been called off by the L. U.

From Topeka I left for Kansas City, Mo., and stayed with our men thirteen days. The city not being half organized, Bro. Hughes, the organizer, was sent along with me on my tour of inspection. We covered the ground very well, as the increase in membership of the Kansas City local unions will show. All during my sojourn in this city Bro. Hughes developed remarkable activity in the effort to stimulate the interest in the organization of the craft, and Bro. Briggs, old Bob and others were doing efficient work. I believe that the existence of but one L. U. in Kansas City has greatly retarded the progress and growth of our organization, and the formation of two additional local unions since last spring has furnished an opportunity to many of our craftsmen to join who heretofore refused to do so on the ground that the L. U. was too big, the location of the meeting hall too remote and the attendance of meetings too great an inconvenience. I visited the three local unions and advised them to form a D. C., which I am pleased to say they did before I left the city. On April 26 this body adopted district by-laws providing for two additional Business Agents, which was a wise measure indeed for such an extensive district. With competent Business Agents in the field, the work mapped out for them by me will undoubtedly be carried to success and a thousand members may be added to their fold in a short space of time. On April 18 I instituted L. U. 1285, Kansas City, with some 23 members; members of other Local Unions being present at the occasion in good numbers. Greater activity will certainly be displayed here in the future.

I stopped off at St. Louis, Mo., and attended the meetings of L. U.'s 1100 and 578. Both were in a healthy condition and doing remarkably well, considering the many trials they had to endure ever since the preparations for the World's Fair began. The employers in that city are trying their best to ruin our organization. I have been present at several hearings before a commission appointed by the court to take the depositions of our Local Officers. The Business Agents had to appear before them most every day, so our men indeed had their hands full. A large mill owner has brought suit against the St. Louis D. C. to show cause why their officers should not be indicted for boycott, and an injunction was issued by the United States Court. Our men having acted within their legal rights, I have no fear of the outcome of this affair, but the defense in this case will incur a large amount of expenses, which I know the D. C. cannot well afford to pay at this time. Considering the conditions prevailing in a city where a World's Fair is held, the G. E. B. should give these law suits the utmost care, and I believe it to be in the best interest of the U. B. for our next Convention to make some provisions to meet these court injunctions.

On my way East I stopped off at Philadelphia, called at the D. C. meeting and had an interview with our attorney regarding matters in that city. From thence I went to Cohoes, N. Y., having been advised that a strike was on in that locality. On my arrival, however, I found that the men and their employers had come to an understanding the night previous. So I took myself to Schenectady, N. Y., where some difficulty had arisen on the Barney job involving our L. U. and the Trades and Labor Council. After going over the matter with all parties to the controversy I made some recommendations, which were acquiesced in by our L. U. and the matter adjusted. I then proceeded to Stamford, Conn., and attended the meeting of our L. U. Arrangements having just been made for the holding of a mass-meeting the week following, with a view to revive the movement in that city, I enlisted as speaker on that occasion, left for New London, Conn., and returned to Stamford that week.

In New London I went over the ground with the Secretary of the L. U. and only obtained mere promises, but as the building trades unions there had started a local body of the Structural Building Trades' Alliance and intended to place a business agent in the field, they will no doubt build up their organization shortly.

I also visited Waterbury, Conn., where our men were out on strike against the open shop since May 1st. Most of our members there have left the city and are employed elsewhere for better pay than they received at home and presumably many of them will never return, much to the regret of the employers, who will thus have lost reliable and competent help which they will not be able to replace in a hurry. At this time of writing there are about 40 of our members still idle and I can say that our entire membership in Waterbury is determined to resist any attempt at the introduction of the open shop. I have learned that each of the employers is under a $250 cash bond not to sign any agreement with the union, which shows that the leaders of the Conn. Employers' Ass'n have no faith in their own members. Had they any just cause to fight the unions it would not be necessary to prevent a desertion of their ranks by compelling their members to put up a cash bond. Under the circumstances it is not at all surprising that the employers' Ass'n is meeting with great difficulties in collecting this cash bond from their members. The terms of the bond are worded in such a manner that they dare not try to enforce them. They had the lumber yards closed up for several days, but re-opened them again upon the advice of their attorney. And when they did open them they charged 25 per cent. more for lumber to any person not affiliated with the Employers' Ass'n.

A short time ago the business men of Waterbury formed a "Citizens' Alliance," with the object in view, as they then stated, to restrain the trades unions from any interference with their business. The members of this alliance were very much in evidence during the trolley men's strike in Waterbury, and on this issue were before the public almost every day, but when the lumber dealers raised the price of material 25 per cent., and even in some instances refused to sell lumber at all to the citizens, it took only a short while and nothing was heard of the alliance any more. O, ye gods, where are ye prominent citizens? Ye prominent members of the Citizens' Alliance, who wanted to restrain the trades unions that stand for personal liberty, when the lumber dealers through their action upset your beloved pet proclamation of principles. Then we failed to hear a single note of lamentation from these honest, honorable men. Before I left the city we were successful in opening three good shops, employing union men exclusively and paying the advanced scale of wages.

I was called to Greenwich, Conn., to audit the books of L. U. 196, which I found in a fair condition. By following the instructions I gave the L. U. I believe they will get along O. K. When making my report to the meeting they were so pleased that they received it by a rising vote. I then went to Portchester, N. Y., and attended the meeting of the D. C. The organization here is very short of funds, but as the Local Unions are going to raise their dues to $1.00 a month, they will soon be in a position to do more effective work.

This being my last report previous to our Convention, I avail myself of the opportunity to congratulate the General Officers, the members of the G. E. B. and our Organizers on the grand work that has been done in the course of the past two years in the interest of our U. B.

Fraternally yours,
T. M. GUERIN,
First Vice-President.

Quarterly Report of Second Vice-President, R. E. L. Connolly, June 30, 1904.

To the G. E. B. of the U. B. of C. and J. of A.:

BROTHERS—The following is my report for the quarter ending on above date.

The beginning of this quarter found me at Knoxville, Tenn., where I succeeded in organizing the coach shop of the Southern Railway.

The condition of the carpenters of that city who are employed in the construction of buildings is not as it should be, and it appeared to be due to a disposition to pull apart rather than to pull together.

After leaving Knoxville I stopped at Morristown, Lenoir, Harriman and Cleveland, where I had been informed the conditions were good for organizing, but in neither place did I find sufficient work or carpenters to enable me to put in a local and I do not think that a local could live in any of the towns mentioned.

From Cleveland I went to Chattanooga, where I found a good local, also one at Rossville and another at Sherman Heights in the suburbs.

The locals are not making much noise, but they are slowly and effectively organizing the district, have reduced the hours and materially increased the pay.

I visited the different locals, had a good attendance and found them all "doing business."

From Chattanooga I went to Nashville, where I found the organization suffering from a chronic case of inertia, due to a seeming lack of indifference on the part of the members as to their working conditions.

Instead of getting out and hustling to build up their local they seem to be waiting for some one to come and rescue them, but the "rescue" must begin on the inside if it is to be successful and lasting.

From Nashville I went to Hopkinsville, Ky., where the local was to make a demand for better conditions, but owing to a complete stagnation of business the movement was wisely postponed until a more favorable season.

We had an open meeting and a full house and I believe it had a good result.

I returned to Nashville, where I spent a couple more days with no appreciable result, as the "local spirit" is lacking.

From Nashville I went to Franklin and Columbia, Tenn., but neither town had sufficient carpenters to keep a local alive.

I went to Atlanta, where they appeared to have taken on a new lease of life, to assist them in organizing that city. In company with their B. A., I visited a number of non-union jobs, talked with the men and was arranging for an open meeting, or rather a series of them, when I received orders to proceed to Bowling Green, Ky., where the carpenters were out trying to establish better conditions.

Upon my arrival at Bowling Green I got the local together and after reviewing the situation the strike committee and myself visited the various contractors who employed non-union men. We succeeded in straightening out the largest shop in the city, as a majority of his men were members of the U. B.

The unfair contractors offered no objections to our talking to their men, nor to their joining the union, so we got after them on the jobs and also held a public meeting in the courthouse, and succeeded in bringing quite a bunch to our way of thinking.

I believe the strike was premature, and that No. 684 should have gotten the town better organized.

I went from there to Louisville, where I found the city imperfectly organized, to say the least, and the chances of their winning out exceedingly slim. There appeared to be too much local dissension and I was puzzled as to why Louisville would enter upon such a struggle when there was such a preponderance of non-union men in the city.

From Louisville I went to Indianapolis, where I visited headquarters for the first time, and had an opportunity of learning more, as to actual conditions and work of the U. B. during the short time I remained than I could have learned in months in the territory wherein I have spent my entire time previous to this trip.

From Indianapolis I went to Bucyrus, O., and made an effort to organize the town, but met with no success.

From Bucyrus I went to Toledo, where I spent a short while and found the organization in very good shape.

I next stopped at Detroit, Mich., where the building trades were putting up a stiff fight against the open shop, with the chances in favor of their winning out.

The Contractors' Association had merged with the Employers' Association and it was a fight between organized labor and organized capital, and not simply a fight between carpenters and contractors.

The B. A. and myself made an effort to bring about a conference, hoping to be able to adjust matters, but found it impossible to do so unless the "open shop" was first conceded.

This, of course, was impossible, and as all efforts for adjustment proved futile it developed into a question of endurance.

The members in Detroit seemed capable of looking after their own interests, so I left for Port Huron, where I found a good little local getting along all right and we had a good meeting.

I went from there to Bay City, where I again found conditions good, but our members were about to get into trouble by meddling in the jurisdiction question between the bricklayers and plasterers. I advised them to keep hands off and trust that they heeded my advice.

I next stopped at Saginaw and can report Saginaw as all O. K.

From Saginaw I went to Owosso, where I found a small local and considering the conditions of trade it was doing fairly well.

From Owosso I went to Lansing and found it strictly on the bum, and from what I could learn that is its usual condition, and it will require a dispensation of Providence to alter it.

From there I visited Grand Rapids and found a wide-awake movement and good hustling being done to keep things in line.

I went from there to Milwaukee, reaching there just in time to be present at a picnic given by the locals for the purpose of providing means to make things pleasant for the delegates who attend the convention. The picnic was a fine affair, a large crowd being present, and Bro. Duffy and myself made a couple of "talks."

I went to Duluth and had a good meeting with No. 361, and there was also present quite a delegation from No. 755 of Superior.

The locals are in good shape and doing good work.

I next visited Minneapolis, where I found our locals getting along well. They are having a little trouble with one contractor, but have the situation well in hand.

My stay in that city was very pleasant and I was impressed with the business-like way in which they handle matters.

I stopped in Chicago a couple of days and learned while there that a committee from the D. C. had visited Bucyrus shortly after I did, had attempted to organize it and met with the same success that attended my efforts.

I stopped at Memphis and found things moving along smoothly and no trouble in sight.

I then went home and found the prospects growing brighter than when I made my last report.

While work is dull at present the members are holding up in good shape and are fast adjusting themselves to the new conditions due to the pernicious "anti-boycott" law.

With best wishes to all, I am, fraternally yours;

R. E. L. CONNOLLY,

Report of Committee Representing the U. B. at Convention of Structural Building Trades Alliance.

Mr. Wm. D. Huber, General President, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

Dear Sir and Brother—We, the undersigned committee, appointed by you to attend the first convention of the Structural Building Trades' Alliance of America, held in Room 370, Denison Hotel, Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 8th to 12th, 1904, beg leave to submit the following report:

On Monday, Aug. 8th, 1904, at 10:00 a. m., the convention was called to order by Vice-President Frank Duffy (President George P. Gubbins being absent at the hour mentioned).

The representatives of six National organizations were in attendance, namely:

1. Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America.
2. United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers of the United States and Canada.
3. Hod Carriers' and Building Laborers' International Union.
4. United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.
5. Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' International Association.
6. International Association of Steam Hoisting Engineers.

President George P. Gubbins, of the International Association of Bricklayers' and Masons' Union, appeared on the floor of the convention and informed the delegates that the vote cast by the bricklayers for affiliation was very small according to their membership, and was against affiliation, but he stated they would resubmit the question for another vote. The bricklayers, therefore, took no part in the proceedings of the convention.

The Operative Plasterers' International Association was not represented. The following letter will explain:

"Mr. Wm. J. Spencer, Secretary S. B. T. A. of A.:

"Dear Sir and Brother—I am sorry to state that we will not be represented at your convention, now in session. The question of being represented was submitted to the Executive Board of the O. P. I. A., with the result that the feeling that the convention of the O. P. I. A. would be in September it would be advisable to submit the matter of affiliation for final action to the convention. The vote of the different locals on affiliation was 3,285 in favor and 1,855 against. This could not be considered a representative vote, as it is less than half our total membership.

The officers of the O. P. I. A. are in favor of the movement, and I feel safe in saying that it will be carried at the next convention.

Trusting that your deliberations will be toward elevating and bettering the conditions of the various crafts in the building trades, and wishing the Alliance success, I am, fraternally yours, (Signed) W. A. O'KEEFE,

"Secretary-Treasurer."

A communication was received from the U. B. of C. and J. of A., requesting the indorsement of the registered label of their organization, was read, and by motion made and seconded the request was unanimously concurred in. "A request being made by John Mangan and James Cummings, representing the National Association of Steam and Hot Water and Power Pipe Fitters and Helpers, for the privilege of the floor of the convention to explain their position, it was, by motion, granted.

They took up considerable time. Upon their retirement a motion was made, seconded and carried that the good offices of this organization be tendered to bring about a settlement of the differences between them and the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers of the United States and Canada, but that no further action could be taken by this organization until the National Association had formally made application for membership.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON GRIEVANCES AND APPEALS.

We recommend to proceed to perfect and institute our Alliance as laid down in our adopted Constitution. We also recommend that the question of jurisdiction be held in abeyance until such a time as the Board of Governors deem it advisable to take up this question. We would further recommend that the National officers of the affiliated organizations take up the question of establishing local alliances with the local officers and show them the importance of what is meant by such organizations. All of which was concurred in by the convention.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON JURISDICTION AND GRIEVANCES.

First—We recommend to proceed to perfect and institute our Alliance as laid down in our adopted Constitution.

Second—We recommend that the question of jurisdiction be held in abeyance until such time as the Board of Governors deem it advisable to take up the question.

Third—We recommend that the National officers of the affiliated organizations take up the question of establishing local alliances with the local officers and show them the importance of what is meant by such organizations.

The report was received and concurred in and ordered filed.

Mr. P. H. Scullin, Secretary and manager of the National Industrial Peace Association, was granted the floor of the convention in reference to establishing harmonious relations between employers and employees, and after Mr. Scullin made a lengthy explanation on the subject, the convention, by motion duly seconded, indorsed his plan of arbitration.

The committee on Constitution reported a number of changes necessary to obtain better results in order to perfect the Alliance, and was concurred in by the convention, and all such changes will be sent out for a referendum vote of the affiliated organizations.

The following resolution was read and adopted:

WHEREAS, The question of jurisdiction over work has caused and is causing continued strife and contention among the building trades, and is a matter that should be permanently settled at the earliest possible moment; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Secretary-Treasurer of the Structural Building Trades Alliance be requested and is hereby authorized to communicate with the General Secretary of each trade affiliated with this Alliance, requesting them to, at their earliest convenience, to furnish him with a complete list of work over which their organization claims jurisdiction; and, be it further

Resolved, That when the S.-T. of this Alliance receives such claims of jurisdiction that he carefully compare the same and should any confictions occur that he notify trades of such confictions, requesting them to meet at the earliest possible moment and endeavor to adjust said differences. Should they not be able to do so harmoniously within ninety days after such notification, the matter will be referred to the General Board of Governors and their decision shall be binding upon all affiliated trades until the next convention of this Alliance; and, be it further

Resolved, That after said claims of jurisdiction have been settled that the S.-T. of this Alliance furnish the General Secretary of each affiliated organization a copy of all such claims of jurisdiction and request said Secretaries to furnish the Secretary of each local union and district council of their respective organizations with a copy of same. Be satisfied with yourself if you will but do not be self-satisfied.

James Brennock.

James Brennock, the subject of this sketch, is a member, and Treasurer for the last eight years, of L. U. 1, Chicago, Ill., and probably the oldest trades unionist in the ranks of the U. B. He was born in 1828 in Ireland, and when he reached his manhood came to America, landing in New York in the early part of 1850. Bennington, Vt., first attracted his attention, and he became a harvest hand at one dollar a day, and then worked in a brickyard for seventy-five cents a day.

Albany, N. Y., was the next scene of Bro. Brennock's employment, where he worked on the Hudson River Railroad, remaining till the next spring, when he engaged in his first strike, occurring on the Albany Water Works, now more than fifty-two years ago. The men were paid seventy-five cents a day, and demanded one dollar, going on strike for the advance. After being out a few days the strike was won and the advance conceded, but at the sacrifice of four of the strikers, who were sent to the penitentiary on the prejudiced testimony of the boss of the gang. In 1854, discovering that there was a demand for mechanics, Bro. Brennock determined to become a carpenter. It was at that time the custom each year to cut wages on the 10th of November and restore them on the 10th of March. On that day in 1858, however, the bosses seemed to forget it. This caused quite some dissatisfaction among the men, and some of them, one of whom, Bro. Brennock, took the matter in hand and organized a carpenters' union. A demand was made for an advance in wages of 37½ cents a day and acceded to. As a result the carpenters from all over the city and vicinity came flocking into the union. Thinking it more advisable and judicious to make the wages in the city uniform, and to compel all bosses to pay the same rate, a movement was successfully entered into to that effect. In fact, three advances at three distinct instances were obtained that same season, and before long no carpenter could work in Albany unless he was a member of the union.

Bro. Brennock came to Chicago, Ill., in 1864 with a traveling card, but found no union there to deposit it. The spirit of unionism had as yet been dormant in that city, as in most other parts of the country, though efforts at organization were made here and there by various crafts; unions were formed only to dwindle or go out of existence again, until a solid and persevering union sentiment was created and became manifest a few years later.

In 1877 Bro. Brennock went to Colorado, but returned to Chicago in 1878, when he took an active part and was instrumental in organizing his craft. A carpenters' union consisting of several branches was formed; this union, at the launching of the U. B. in 1881 at its first convention, held in Chicago, being given the charter number 21. L. U. 1, which has the honor of having Bro. Brennock in its fold, came into existence through L. U. 21 and some of the other local unions consolidating in 1887.

Bro. Brennock is the author of a History of the Carpenters' Movement and Organization in the City of Chicago, published in the Chicago Labor Day Souvenir of 1902, a remarkable document, of great historic value to our Chicago brothers. He has held every position in the gift of his Local Union, except that of President. Though in his 74th year of age, he still enjoys the best of health, his intellect is vivid and bright and his numerous friends, ourselves included, cherish the hope that he may reach the century mark.

Stoddard's Steel Square Pocket-Book.

Dwight L. Stoddard, one of the oldtimers and hard workers of L. U. 281, Indianapolis, the author of many interesting craft problems and other articles in THE CARPENTER, has recently written a book, "The Steel Square Pocket Book," which is published by the Industrial Publication Company, of New York. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

The little book is one of the most practical works ever written for the instruction and guidance of the carpenter. It is very thoroughly illustrated with drawings prepared especially with the author's own pen. (The General Office had the pleasure of seeing the original drawings before they were sent to the publishers.) It is truly an up-to-date book on the steel square. Its size is convenient for the pocket, and it contains an index alphabetically arranged, greatly facilitating reference.

Bro. Stoddard and the book, both, deserve all the patronage they may receive. In fact no union carpenter can afford to be without the little "Steel Square Pocket Book," which may be purchased by applying to the INDUSTRIAL PUBLICATION CO.,

P. O. Box 1852, or 16 Thomas Street,
New York City.

Business Agents' Badges.

The General Office will supply badges for business agents on application of any District Council or Local Union at the price of $3.50 apiece. The badge is a neat design, with U. B. emblem, has enameled lettering, and is very substantial. District Councils or Local Unions requiring badges should send their orders to the General Office.

There will never be general peace and prosperity until all special legal privileges are abolished.

The Open Shop.

BY FRANK DUFFY.

ONE of the most important questions before the American public to-day is that of the "Open Shop." It is attracting widespread attention and at the same time seriously agitating the minds of both employers and employes as to its outcome. It is discussed on all occasions and in every conceivable manner; it has its supporters and its opponents. Its merits are lauded to the skies; its faults and shortcomings are lavishly portrayed.

To understand this question rightly, you may ask: "What is an 'Open Shop'?" It is one in which men are supposed to work side by side in harmony with one another, irrespective of whether they owe allegiance or not to any form of Organized Labor—it is one in which the rights of every employe are equal—or supposed to be equal—at least that is what we are told by the Citizens' Industrial Alliance of America.

The non-unionist, who never attempted to improve his condition, advance his wages, or reduce his hours of toil, has as much standing and as much privilege in an "Open Shop" as a union man has, who spent the best years of his life and many hard earned dollars, that better working conditions might prevail. It is in reality a "non-Union Shop." That is what the employers of labor want, but they have not the audacity to so express themselves; and so, under the cloak of "Open Shop," they attempt to deceive the public in order to gain their ends—the destruction of Organized Labor. They know full well that the broad-hearted, free American citizens would condemn them if they came out open and above board in their declaration of war on Trades Unionists in their advocacy of the "non-Union Shop."

It is, therefore, plainly to be seen that the "Open Shop" means nothing more or less than a "Closed Shop"—closed to Union Labor—where the employer is

"Monarch of all he surveys," where he has the right to hire whom he pleases; pay them what wages he pleases; work them as many hours per day as he pleases under what conditions he pleases.

The "Open Shop" is the most dangerous weapon ever used by the employing class to bring about the complete annihilation of Organized Labor. If such a system should be established in any city it means the decline and final death of the Trades Unions of that city.

With the Unions gone, wages would go down so quickly that we would not know what struck us. We would be like a man in the ring after receiving a blow in the "solar plexus;" dazed and dumbfounded.

With this system in vogue, it would not be long until this free land of ours would be overrun with tramps and paupers, and, in a very short time, be in a worse condition than that of any of the pauperized countries of the Old World.

In fighting the "Open Shops" the Trades Unions of the country are fighting for their very lives—for their existence—for their future continuation. We have always favored arbitration for the settlement and adjustment of any and all disputes as they arose; but on this question there is nothing on our part to arbitrate. We cannot consent to arbitrate a question that involves the life of our organization.

Now matter how devotedly nations hold to the principle of arbitration, they will never consent to arbitrate a question that involves their national honor. Trades Unions likewise, upon whom "Open Shops" are now being forced, may, with equal propriety, refuse to arbitrate, on the ground that they cannot consent to submit to arbitration a question involving their very lives. If we are to be exterminated, as we are so often told, we might as well go now, if that is what refusal to arbitrate means, as to be put out of business at some future date.

We are informed that a long, hard and bitter fight is ahead of us on this question. If such is the case, we might as well refuse right now to work in an "Open Shop," or to submit the question to arbitration.

That is what the members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America have been doing this spring. For this insubordination their employers have gone on strike; or, in other words, have "locked out" their employes—numbering more than twenty-five thousand men—in more than two hundred cities, towns and villages, from ocean to ocean, and from Canada to the gulf.

They selected the Carpenters—the "giant organization" in the building trades—on whom to make the fight. The idea was to whip the "giant" into submission, and it would then only be a short time (according to their way of reasoning) until the other trades in the building industry would lay down their arms and succumb to the inevitable.

They opened fire on us simultaneously during the past month in Detroit, Mich., Terre Haute, Ind., Columbus, O., Des Moines and Burlington, Ia., Pueblo, Colo., Sacramento and Los Angeles, Cal., Memphis, Tenn., Quebec, Can., Springfield, Mass., Freeport and Aurora, Ill., Ilion, Herkimer and Rochester, N. Y., Charleroi, Pittston, Pottsville, New Castle, Sharon, Monaca and New Brighton, Pa., Hackensack, N. J., and several other places, fully expecting to carry out their doctrine of the "Open Shop." In each instance, however, it proved a miserable failure.

On this question the Citizens' Industrial Alliance is whipped to a standstill, and Mr. Parry, with all his braggadocio and persuasive powers of speech and pen, has shown himself to be the poorest general that ever sought renown.

Last February I issued a circular letter to our members, advising them how to proceed if the question of the "Open Shop" should be forced upon them, at the same time counselling them to use discretion and diplomacy in their intended trade movements this year. That letter was looked upon by the employers as an indication of the Carpenters' weakness and of their inability to weather the storm that was then brewing. Our members took the advice given and forced the opposition to show their hand. The results proved the wisdom of the course taken. In every instance so far, we have been the victors. This is another proof of the efficacy of the Trades Union movement.

Our opponents claim that Labor Organizations are unlawful and un-American, and that there are no grounds for their existence as such. They have adopted the policy of the "Open Shop" as a method of putting us out of business altogether. Our constitutionality has been tested time and time again in the courts, and in all cases the decisions rendered were in our favor. Recently the test was made in the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota of the right of a Union man to refuse to work with a non-Union man. After a careful and minute hearing of the case, a decision was handed down that gives to the members of Trades Unions the rights they have always claimed as their heritage and for which they have contended so long. Judge Brown rendered the decision. Among other things he says:

"Labor Organizations, or Unions, are not unlawful, but are legitimate and proper for the advancement of the members and those dependent upon them. The members, therefore, may, singly or in a body, quit the service of their employer for the purpose of bettering their condition, and may, by peaceful means, persuade others to join them; and as a means to that end may refuse to allow their members to work in places where non-Union Labor is employed."

Seriously considering this entire matter, two questions naturally arise:

1. What effect has the "Open Shop" policy on the industrial world at the present time? and,
2. What effect would it have if in operation as the employers of labor desire it?

To the first question the answer is plain, clear and definite. It has no effect whatever. It created a little ripple on the surface, but that has passed away.

To the second question the answer of Charles Wright—an employe of D. M. Parry, who was charged before Judge D. Whallon in the Police Court of Indianapolis on May 6th, 1904, with deserting his wife and children—is sufficient. His answer was: "I did the best I could. I work for the Parry Manufacturing Company; I work hard but do not make much. Sometimes I draw $6 or $7 on pay day; and after I pay my helper I have $5 or $6 left."

"Times are better now, and I have more work than I had last winter. Then I often had but $3 left after the helper was paid, and there have been pay days when there was only $1.50 in my envelope. I do piece work—sometimes there is little to be had."

This is an example of the "Open Shop" system. Is it any wonder then that Trades Unions oppose it on any and all occasions, or does it come as a surprise to many that we deliberately refuse to arbitrate such a question? We may be wrong. We believe we are not. We leave it to others—outside of the Citizens' Industrial Alliance—to judge.

The Rich Man's Dream of Heaven.

Old Dives, captain of finance,
On a silken couch reclined,
For that evening at a banquet
He had sumptuously dined;
Now he rested from his duties
And the rich man slept and dreamed—Saw himself through space transported
To a realm of bliss it seemed.

Truly was his soul elated
That's life's course, so smoothly run,
Had at last so smoothly ended,
And eternal joy begun;
Well within the golden city
He beheld the great white throne,
And among the saints around it
Many millionaires he'd known.

No one there was low or common,
They were strictly all first class,
"Just and righteous stewards" chosen
Who once ruled the lab'ring mass;
And they claim used no oppression
To increase their own rich store.
Yet, when labor cried for mercy,
Only heaped the burdens more.

To this select, inner circle
No poor man aspired to ride,
And no complaints or strikes disturb Dives' dream of Paradise;
He rejoiced, with rapture quickened
Did his ready spirit move
'Mong congenial companions
In an ecstasy of love.

He received fraternal welcome
In the mansions of the just;
There reserved seats all were cornered,
And he'd come to join the trust!
Well he liked the holy city
Where the streets are paved with gold,
Often he had heard the story
But the half had not been told.

In the jasper walls and gateways
Set with every precious stone, Capital holds shares and schemes to Get a mortgage on the throne!
Thus in Dives' dream of heaven,
Where "the rabble" may not come,
All who win earth's golden passport
Some sweet day may rest at home.

But methinks when life is over,
And the graves give up their dead,
Dives' dream will disappoint him,
When it is interpreted;
Those whom God hath chosen stewards
Must acknowledge human need,
Nor deprive the poor of comfort
To appease the maw of greed.

In the fair celestial city
Ransomed souls associate,
But surprises may be waiting
For earth's pampered rich and great;
Fancy paints the consternation,
And their panic-stricken state,
If they should find Lazarus feasting
And poor Dives at the gate!

Bei jeder geeigneten Gelegenheit wird seitens der organisierten Arbeiter betont, daß ihnen industrielle Störungen wie sie durch Ausstände verursacht werden, zuwider sind. Wir greifen nur dann zur Arbeitseinstellung wenn alle friedliche Mittel zur Schlichtung bestehender Differenzen zwischen uns und den Arbeitgebern ge scheitert sind, ist die Parole eines jeden besonnenen und erfahrenen Gewerkschaftlers. Um nun solche Störungen im Industriebetriebe zu vermeiden, war es bis jetzt die Gepflogenheit, wenigstens da wo die Arbeiter genügend organisiert waren und von den Unternehmern als mitredende Macht anerkannt werden mußten, daß Vertreter beider Theile zusammen traten um sich über die jeweiligen Arbeitsbedingungen zu verständigen. Verträge einzugehen, die die Norm der Lohnrate und der Arbeitsstunden festlegten und in denen sich die Arbeitgeber gewöhnlich verpflichteten nur solche Arbeiter zu beschäftigen, die der Organisation angehörten mit der ein Vertrag abgeschlossen wurde. Auf diese Weise sind Unternehmern wie Arbeitern, wo man es mit der Einhaltung des Vertrages aufrichtig meinte, viel Scheerereien und Unannehmlichkeiten erspart geblieben.

Den Ersteren, weil sie bei der Preisveranschlagung von Contracten mit dem Arbeitslohn als stabilen Faktor rechnen konnten und die Union ihnen tüchtige und profitable Arbeitskraft lieferte; die Letzteren weil sie dadurch dem Feilschen um die Höhe des Arbeitslohnes und häufig auch der Ueberzeitarbeit entzogen wurden und ihnen neue Mitglieder zugeführt wurden, die andernfalls nur mit Mühe zur Organisation oder auch nicht, herangezogen worden wären. Der Hauptvorteil aber, der Unternehmern wie Arbeitern durch das Bestehen solcher Verträge erwuchs, bestand, wie oben angedeutet, in dem geregelten, friedlichen Geschäftsverhältnisse der für beide Theile nachtheilige Arbeitseinstellungen und Geschäftsstörungen während eines gewissen Zeitraumes wenigstens ausschloß.

Anders verhielt es sich natürlich, und verhält es sich noch, in solchen Fällen, wo man es mit unzuverlässigen und unaufrechten Pactanten, das heißt, mit Unternehmern zu thun hatte, die einen Vertrag nur deshalb eingingen, um sich momentan aus der Klemme zu helfen, d. h. ihren Lieferungs-Termin einhalten zu können, oder solchen die vor Eingehen des Vertrags aus Vorliebe für billige Arbeitskraft und für die Schmutz-Concurrenz, nur Nicht-Unionleute unter Nicht-Unionbedingungen zu beschäftigen gewohnt waren. Solche Arbeitgeber waren in den Augen der humaneren und anständigeren Unternehmern, sowohl wie in den Augen der Arbeiter, nur unsaubere Cantonisten, denen man so viel wie möglich aus dem Wege ging, um sich selbst nicht zu beschmutzen. Gerade diese Elemente aber sind es, welche den jetzigen Kreuzzug gegen die organisierten Arbeiter inszenirt und die Fabrikanten-Bereinigungen und Bürger-Allianzen in's Leben gerufen haben.

Dieser gewissenlosesten, profitgierigsten Sorte von Unternehmern hat sich die bessere Unternehmerklasse angeschlossen und macht nun mit ihnen gemeinschaftliche Sache gegen die organisierten Arbeiter. Ist es zum Verwundern, daß der Gerechtigkeitsinn der Letzteren unter dieser Bettgenossenschaft in die Brüche gegangen ist und auch sie nun, die mit ihren Arbeitern oder deren Organisationen eingegangenen Verträge, in schamlosester Weise verletzen?

Thatsache ist, daß die Kämpfe die unsere Bruderschaft im Laufe dieses Jahres zu bestehen hatte, zum großen Theile auf die Wortbrüchigkeit und Charakterlosigkeit der Arbeitgeber zurückzuführen sind. Eigenschaften die sie sich in ihrer Gemeinschaft mit den Angehörigen der Fabrikanten-Association und Bürger-Allianzen angeeignet haben. Dieselbe Erfahrung haben auch die Arbeiter anderer Berufs-zweige machen müssen.

Ein eklatanter Fall des Vertragsbruches seitens der Arbeitgeber, der uns berechtigt die Rathsamkeit Verträge einzugehen und deren Werth überhaupt, stark in Zweifel zu ziehen, hat sich kürzlich in New York ereignet.

Wie wir in einem früheren Artikel bemerkten, waren unsere Mitglieder in New York nach dem ungelungen und erfolglosen Ausstande gegen die „Amalgamated Society of Carpenters“, vorigen Jahres, gezwungen einen Arbitrations-Vertrag mit ihren Arbeitgebern einzugehen, welche ein, aus zu gleichen Theilen aus Arbeitern und Arbeitgebern bestehendes Schiedsgericht vorsah, dem alle entstehenden Streitfragen zur Schlichtung zu überweisen sind. Dieser Vertrag bestimmt unter anderem, daß nur von Unionleuten hergestelltes Material an allen von den Vertrags-Parteien verrichteten oder übernommenen Arbeiten, zur Verwendung kommen soll. Trotzdem hatte eine Firma Nicht-Union-Material in einem Neubau eingeschmuggelt. Und nachdem sich die Firma geweigert das vertragswidrige Material zu entfernen, nachdem unsere hier beschäftigten Mitglieder die Arbeit niedergelegt und das Schiedsgericht gegen die Firma entschieden hatte, weigerte sich die Executiv-Behörde der Arbeitgeber, der „Board of Governors“ sich der Entscheidung des Schiedsgerichts zu unterwerfen. Doch nicht nur dies — um unsere Mitglieder, unter denen sich natürlich Weise in Folge dieses Vorkommnisses, und früher ähnlicher, eine starke Opposition gegen den Arbitrations-Plan geltend gemacht hatte, zur Einhaltung dieses windigen Vertrages zu zwingen, und um sich wegen ihrer Standhaftigkeit in obigem Falle an ihnen zu rächen, haben die Bauunternehmer gelegentlich eines Streitfalles, welcher die an Tunnelarbeiten beschäftigten Painters betraf, sieben der Baugewerke und auch die Carpenters ausgeschlossen. Dieser Ausstand dauerte währendem wir dies niederschreiben ungeschwächt fort und wir hoffen daß es unseren Mitgliedern und den übrigen ausgeschlossenen Bauhandwerkern gelingen wird, den Arbitrations-Vertrag der sich in jeder Beziehung als ihren Interessen nachtheilig erwiesen hat, über Bord zu werfen.

Doch es ist nicht die Wortbrüchigkeit oder Unzuverlässigkeit der Unternehmer, wo es sich um Verträge mit den Arbeitern handelt, die uns veranlaßt hier die Frage aufzuwerfen, ob es noch rathsam für uns sei solche Verträge einzugehen, denn die Vergangenheit hat uns gelehrt daß auf die Unternehmer ohne Unterschied so wie so kein Verlaß ist, wenn unsere Organisation nicht mächtig genug ist, um die Einhaltung eines Vertrages seitens der Arbeitgeber zu erzwingen.

Was uns zur Aufwerfung dieser Frage Anlaß gibt, sind verschiedene kürzlich gefallene richterliche Entscheidungen, welche das Eingehen von Verträgen die eine Clausel enthalten welche bestimmt, daß nur Mitglieder der Arbeiter-Organisation die als Vertrags-Partei figurirt, beschäftigt werden sollen, als constitutionswidrig und sogar als verbrecherisch erklären.

Da, der uns zugewiesene, Raum dieser Nummer ein sehr beschränkter ist, müssen wir es uns vorbehalten, in einem weiteren Artikel auf diese wie auf andere, auf Verträge zwischen Arbeiter und Arbeitgeber bezügliche richterliche Entscheidungen einzugehen und hieraus, wie aus dem geschilderten Gebahren der Arbeitgeber, unsere Schlüsse zu ziehen.

L'Unification du Salaire.

La chambre syndicale des charpentiers et menuisiers ainsi que bon nombre d'autres organisations ouvrières cherchent à introduire dans les ateliers un prix unique de salaire. Mais bon nombre de patrons et même d'ouvriers s'y opposent, présentant que l'on ne saurait rétribuer au même taux le travail de chaque ouvrier. Celui-ci valant plus que celui-là. L'un ayant plus de connaissances du métier et plus d'expérience que l'autre, ou encore trouvent-ils une différence d'âge, l'un étant trop jeune et l'autre trop vieux, pour mériter le même salaire.

En apparence, on pourrait trouver une certaine justesse dans ceci; mais en allant bien au fond des choses nous trouverions que toute la question se termine dans un leurre, pareil à tout autre, fait et évoqué seulement dans le but de tromper la classe ouvrière, tel qu'on le fait avec le shop ouvert et tout, d'autres idées émanant du désir de la classe ouvrière, d'améliorer les conditions d'existence de ses membres.

S'il est vrai qu'un homme dans la force d'âge, aye plus d'expérience dans le métier qu'un homme plus jeune, ou encore qu'un homme d'âge mûre, en vieillissant, ne puisse plus produire la même quantité de besogne que le jeune homme de vingt à trente ans, il faut admettre qu'avec la division du travail introduit dans la plupart des métiers ces chances et ces capacités deviennent superflue et tendent à disparaître étant inutile à la main humaine qui ce travail remplace. A quoi sert aujourd'hui beaucoup d'expérience. Quand nous étions jeune on nous apprenait d'abord à dresser le bois à la verlope, après l'avoir débiter avec la grande scie. Plus tard notre premier chef d'oeuvre consistait à tailler des tenons, à mortiser les battants d'une porte, à assembler un tiroir de commode ou d'armoire, à poncer au papier de vers et à vernir ou polir un dessus de table, et ainsi de suite. Tout ce travail est fait aujourd'hui par la machine. Le bois est scié et débité par la scie à ruban et circulaire, les planches sont dresser par la raboteuse, les tenons sont faites à la machine et la mortaiseuse fait le travail, que notre amour propre de jeune homme nous emplissait d'orgueil, quand les battants de porte joignait bien dans les tenons. Il ne reste plus au menuisier que d'assembler et de coller les différentes pièces fournies par les machines divers. Après vient la machine à poncer qui fait un travail bien plus exacte que la main de l'ouvrier; et quand au polissage et vernissage cela est devenu un métier apart. Ce qui reste comme abilité à l'ouvrier c'est une certaine routine, comme il est donné à tout travailleur, qui fait continuellement ou a peu près le même genre d'ouvrage. Ainsi il est facile à constater le fait, que sauf quelques exceptions, un ouvrier en vaut un autre, donc tous méritent le même salaire.

Maintenant regardons la chose d'un autre point de vue. Supposons que les réclamations patronales soient fondée, et que la chambre syndicale ouvrière accepterait, que pour différentes raisons l'on introduise un minimum et un maximum de salaire. Admettons, pour cause d'argument, que cette différence de capacité existe réellement. L'ouvrier encore trop jeune ou déjà trop vieux, ou l'ouvrier nouveau dans le pays et par conséquence inexpérimenté dans notre manière de produire, ou pour toute autre raison nous admettrions un salaire inférieure. Nous verrions bientôt Mess. les patrons n'embaucher d'autres ouvriers que ceux de deuxième classe. Au travailleur expérimenté exigeant le maximum de salaire ils diront: Voyons mon ami, c'est bien vrai que votre travail est plus propre que celui de l'homme travaillant à meilleur marché, mais que voulez vous, nous le passerons à la machine à papier de vers, et cela ira tout aussi bien. Ou bien nous savons, que vous faisez plus d'ouvrage que l'autre, mais il faut considéré que l'autre nous coûte moins cher; de plus, l'expérience nous démontre que les travailleurs à bon marché sont plus facile à contenter, et surtout plus docile. Ils se soumettent plus facilement aux exigences patronales, surtout si ce sont des ouvriers étrangers dans le pays. Dans ces conditions, que resterait il à faire à l'ouvrier de première classe? Rien autre, que de s'abaisser aux mêmes conditions que son collègue inférieure et à se contenter du salaire minimum.

Le résultat de tout ceci serait donc, que les patrons introduiraient le salaire le plus bas comme salaire maximum, et nous reviendrions au prix unique, mais plus bas, sans que la chambre syndicale l'aye voulu. Et comme l'appétit vient en mangeant, le patron ne tarderait pas à dire à l'ouvrier inférieure. Mon garçon tu vois ce grand et fort gaillard; il est de première force au métier; il fait deux fois plus que toi, encore son travail est-il bien mieux fini que le tien. Avec cela il travaille pour le même prix que toi. Si tu veux donc rester chez moi, il faudra souffrir que je te coupe ton salaire de 50 cents par jour. Et ainsi de suite jusqu'à plus finir. Tout ce ci nous démontre que c'est une affaire de principe, que de maintenir le prix unique dans le métier. Le plus haut sera le mieux, pour le patron aussi bien que pour l'ouvrier. Ne nous laissons pas aveugler par les théories patronales. Si cette question n'était pas plus profitable pour ces Mess. ils ne se donneraient pas tant de peine pour nous la faire avaler.

Le Mouvement Syndical en France.

Les Ouvriers et les Elections.

Le 1. mai il a été procédé, dans toutes les communes de France, au renouvellement des conseil municipaux. Plusieurs corporations ont profité de l'occasion pour soumettre aux candidats quelques-unes de leurs revendications relevant plus spécialement des municipalités et furent assez heureuses pour obtenir des futurs conseillers des promesses qui, il faut l'espérer, se traduiront prochainement par des résultats tangibles. C'est ainsi qu'en dehors de tout question politique le syndicat de travailleurs municipaux a réussi à faire échec à quelques candidats qui se montraient hostiles ou indifférents à ses réclamations, et que les peintres ont fait prendre l'engagement, à ceux qui sollicitaient les suffrages, des ouvriers, de proscrire des travaux communaux l'emploi du blanc de céruse si néfaste à la santé des ouvriers peintres. Mais la campagne la plus heureuse et la plus fertile en résultats fut certainement celle menée par les typographes qui utilisèrent cette circonstance pour lancer leur marque syndicale ou "label" en faisant une guerre acharnée à tous les candidats qui se faisaient imprimer dans des maisons ne respectant pas les tarifs syndicaux. Cette première tentative a parfaitement réussi et aujourd'hui la marque syndicale de la Fédération du Livre est connue dans toute la France. Les typographes se sont inspirés de l'exemple de leurs confrères américains et la même tactique a donné chez nous les mêmes résultats qu'en Amérique. Il ne leur reste plus qu'à développer et à étendre ce nouveau moyen d'action afin d'en tirer tout le parti possible.

Chez les Charpentiers.

Bien que nombreuse en France, la corporation des ouvriers charpentiers ne compte pas parmi les mieux organisées. Ce n'est pas qu'un passé glorieux lui fasse défaut, car elle eut à soutenir, notamment à Paris, des grèves qui sont restées légendaires et par lesquelles elle avait réussi à amener les salaires à un taux très élevé comparativement à celui payé dans les autres industries. On les considérait alors comme de véritables privilégiés. Groupés en solides compagnonnages, entre eux la solidarité sur tout le territoire, cultivant avec ardeur leur éducation technique, établissant dans leurs groupes professionnels de véritables chefs-d'oeuvres de coupe et d'assemblage qui faisaient l'admiration des architectes les plus experts, ils formaient alors un groupe compact et uni que ne pouvaient entamer les efforts des patrons coalisés. Une grève malheureuse, l'introduction en France de bois étrangers tout travaillés, le développement de l'emploi du fer dans les constructions, vinrent cependant jeter le désarroi parmi eux et troubler une entente dont les résultats avaient été si efficaces jusqu'alors. Le lien compagnonnique se relâcha un peu et quelques ouvriers commencèrent à donner à leurs groupements la forme légale actuellement la plus usitée en créant des syndicats professionnels. Ils possèdent actuellement 64 syndicats fonctionnant dans 56 localités et représentant 4,000 ouvriers environ. C'est peu si l'on songe au total des ouvriers charpentiers occupés.

En 1901, à Lyon, quelques-unes de ces chambres syndicales organisèrent un Congrès dans le but de réunir entre elles les organisations existantes sous forme de fédération. Ils réussirent à la mettre sur pied et elle compte aujourd'hui 15 chambres syndicales avec un effectif d'environ 1,200 membres. C'est une armée bien faible numériquement si l'on songe aux résistances qu'elle doit opposer à l'exploitation patronale qui, tous les jours, tend à reprendre les avantages que les charpentiers avaient autrefois conquis de haute lutte. Cette situation déplorable est encore aggravée par les tiraillements de toute sorte dont pâtissent les organisations du bâtiment groupées partie dans une fédération d'industrie qui attire à elle indistinctement tous les syndicats, partie en fédération de métier groupant exclusivement les syndicats d'une même profession. C'est ainsi que la Fédération du bâtiment possède des syndicats de charpentiers et de menuisiers, des adhérents peintres et maçons, alors qu'il existe une fédération pour chacune de ces catégories. Il en résulte un désarroi dans l'action dont les effets pèsent lourdement sur l'ensemble des travailleurs du bâtiment.

Depuis 1901, date de sa fondation, la marche en avant de la Fédération des Charpentiers a été presque nulle. D'un appel qu'elle adresse aux travailleurs, il semble qu'elle veuille passer à l'action. Ce sera pour elle la meilleure occasion de se faire connaître et de donner à sa propagande un appui des plus salutaires. Les travailleurs du bâtiment jouissent, dans la plupart des grandes villes et notamment à Paris, de clauses protectrices du travail, tant par des décrets spéciaux régissant la matière pour les travaux de l'Etat, que d'arrêtés divers pris par les municipalités, dans le but de fixer, dans les cahiers des charges des travaux communaux, les salaires des ouvriers qui y coopèrent. C'est ce qu'on appelle les prix de séries. Inutile de dire que les patrons s'évertuent à violer ces dispositions. Pour y arriver, ils font signer un engagement à l'ouvrier embauché comme quoi ce dernier consent, de son plein gré, à travailler à un prix au-dessous du traif. Ignorant quelque fois, poussé par la faim souvent, le pauvre diable met sa signature au bas du document, et le tour est joué! C'est contre ces révoltants abus que la Fédération s'élève aujourd'hui et commence une campagne pour obtenir du Parlement l'abolition de la signature dans le contrat de travail entre patrons et ouvriers. D'autre part, elle proteste énergiquement contre les hôteliers et logeurs qui, pour s'attirer des clients, pratiquent le placement des ouvriers, les mettant ainsi sous leur dépendance.

Cette Fédération devant prochainement tenir un Congrès, j'aurai l'occasion de vous en envoyer un compte rendu et de vous donner, en même temps, des renseignements plus détaillés sur sa constitution interne.

PARIS, le 1. juin, 1904.

La fin des Bureaux de Placement.

J'ai dit, dans ma correspondance d'avril, qu'à la suite du vote par le Conseil municipal de Paris d'un crédit de 1,500,000 francs pour indemniser les bureaux de placement à supprimer, la question était enfin entrée dans une voie nouvelle. Cette décision, que beaucoup considéraient comme devoir rester platonique dictée qu'elle était surtout par un but de réclame électorale, n'en a pas moins aujourd'hui reçu son application. A la suite de nombreuses démarches auprès des pouvoirs publics et d'une action incessante au cours des élections municipales du mois de mai dernier. Les bureaux de placement des travailleurs de l'alimentation ont été supprimés à Paris c'est un premier succès. Bien que n'étant pas générale, cette mesure n'en commence pas moins à avoir d'heureux résultats pour les travailleurs intéressés et tout serait pour le mieux si, d'une part, les placeurs ne s'ingéniaient à tourner la loi en créant de nouvelles officines où, sous le convert d'une organisation ouvrière fictive, on essaie de pratiquer le placement comme aux plus beaux jours de son exploitation officielle, et si, d'autre part, les patrons ne montraient une véritable hostilité au recrutement de leur personnel par l'intermédiaire de la chambre syndicale ouvrière. Contre ces obstacles prévus, les travailleurs de l'alimentation auront continuellement à se défendre et c'est surtout de leur vigilance constante que dépendra l'application normale et rigoureuse de la loi.

La Confédération Générale du Travail

Cette organisation centrale, qui correspond en France à l'American Federation of Labor, convoque à Bourges, pour le mois de septembre, les syndicats adhérents. Ce congrès sera l'un des plus importants tenus par la confédération générale du travail. Il porte à son ordre du jour des questions telles que le label, la représentation à la confédération des organisations proportionnellement au nombre des membres payants, la journée de 8 heures et le minimum de salaires le coopératisme et le syndicalisme, la prud'homie, les retraites ouvrières, la grève générale, le conseil supérieur du travail, la main-d'oeuvre étrangère, la loi sur les accidents du travail, le travail à la tâche, la langue universelle, la guerre et l'antimilitarisme. Ajoutez à cela les inévitables modifications aux statuts et vous aurez ainsi un copieux programme dont la discussion promet d'être longue et intéressante. Je me promets d'en faire le compte rendu dans le "CARPENTER."

Le Congrès du Bâtiment.

Mes lecteurs se souviennent sans doute que l'année dernière j'ai relaté ici même le premier congrès de la Fédération du Bâtiment. Le deuxième s'est tenu tout récemment à Angoulême. 23 délégués y représentaient 31 syndicats. Ces deux chiffres ne semblent pas indiquer que la Fédération ait fait de bien sensibles progrès quant à sa force numérique au cours de l'année écoulée. Comme pour toutes les organisations naissantes à qui l'expérience n'a naturellement pas encore fourni une charte fondamentale, ce sont les modifications aux statuts qui ont absorbé le plus clair du temps dont disposait le congrès. Il fut décidé que la Fédération devrait organiser, partout où cela serait possible, des "syndicats d'industrie" du bâtiment et des groupes corporatifs où il n'y aura pas moyen de former les premiers et que la Fédération se composerait dorénavant de tous les syndicats généraux du bâtiment et des groupes corporatifs, refusant nettement cette fois d'admettre aucune Fédération de métier en tant que section autonome, se proposant, de plus, de demander au congrès confédéral de Bourges de décider qu'aucune fédération nouvelle de métier ne pourra être constituée. Ces dispositions sont le prolongement d'une controverse non encore épuisée entre les syndicalistes français sur le point de savoir si le groupement des travailleurs par industrie n'est pas préférable au groupement par métier. Les deux théories ont de zélés partisans. L'expérience des fédérations d'industrie ne fournit pas, assez de cas de quelque durée pour permettre de la juger en toute impartialité; tandis que la Fédération de métier, forme la plus répandue en France a déjà fait ses preuves et semble devoir y primer longtemps encore toute forme de groupement plus étendue. A première vue, il paraît logique et naturel que les serruriers soient les mieux qualifiés pour discuter leurs intérêts avec les entrepreneurs de serrurerie et que les ouvriers charpentiers soient mieux outillés que des maçons ou des tailleurs de pierres pour régler avec leurs patrons leurs propres conditions de travail. Toujours est-il que la décision des congrès du bâtiment est dirigée contre les fédérations de métier existantes et destinée à arrêter leur développement et je suis curieux de voir quelle solution donnera le congrès de Bourges, à ce délicat problème, d'autant plus que les Fédérations, des peintres des charpentiers, des maçons, des menuisiers, des tailleurs de pierres, etc., adhérentes à la Confédération, ne sont, sans doute, pas disposées à se laisser faire.

La Grève de Lorient.

Parmi les corporations qui ont eu à lutter lors de la mise en application de la loi de 10 heures, au 1. avril, 1904, il convient de citer celles du bâtiment. Sur plusieurs points du territoire des conflits éclatèrent qui, pour la plupart furent heureusement solutionnés. Il n'en a pas été de même à Lorient où, depuis bientôt trois mois, les charpentiers, les menuisiers et les maçons sont en grève pour empêcher un recul des salaires à la suite de la diminution de la durée de la journée de travail. La lutte se poursuit opiniâtrement des deux côtés et l'effervescence est grande à Lorient où l'on a craint à un moment que toutes les corporations ne déclarent la grève générale par solidarité. La ville est occupée militairement et de véritables collisions ont eu lieu entre les grévistes et la police. A la suite de ces faits le président des charpentiers et un autre gréviste ont été arrêtés. Il viennent d'être condamnés l'un à 5 mois et l'autre à 1 mois de prison. Ce jugement à conspiré les grévistes et la lutte continue plus âprement que jamais.

GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD.

Proceedings of the Third Quarterly Session, 1904.

Communication of Adolph Strasser, to whom appeal of L. U. 483, San Francisco, from decision of G. P. in controversy over election of officers of joint D. C. was submitted, stating that he sustains directions given to San Francisco D. C. by G. P. in letter dated January 9, 1904. Received and placed on file.

Board decides to submit a bi-ennial report to convention and appoints committee to draw up report.

Audit of books and accounts of General office entered into, occupying remainder of session.

July 23.

Audit of books and accounts continued during entire day's session.

July 25.

Bro. Wellman stating that according to reports received by him, 3 per cent. interest on silent fund could be obtained from bank, instead of 2 per cent. a committee appointed to wait on officials of the Capital National Bank and other banks for investigation and to ascertain whether any interest may be obtained on the open bank account. Remainder of session occupied by audit of books and accounts.

July 26.

Committee on investigation of interest paid on bank accounts reports: Capital National Bank proposes to continue paying 2 per cent., but if account was not checked against for a period of six months, to pay 1 per cent. additional. American National and Indiana National Banks will not pay more than 2 per cent. under any circumstances and no interest on open account. Action on report deferred until Wednesday morning.

Audit of books and accounts continued.

July 27.

Committee on bank account ordered to continue investigation.

G. P. Bahlhorn and George F. Hedrick, general officers of Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, appear before the Board and difficulties existing in Penn Yan, N. Y. and New York City considered at length.

A committee from the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union, desiring to confer with the Board on jurisdiction over material called "Burkett" lath, is received and committee submits the following articles of agreement:

As Burkett lath seems to be the principle work in dispute, we propose: where said material is used on the inside of buildings to receive plaster, that said material, when so used, be placed in position by members of the W. W. and M. L. I. U. Under no other conditions are members of the latter organization to use or handle Burkett lath.

Further, That corner heads as outlined in the jurisdiction of the Lathers International Union, be erected as at present, namely: by carpenters in such shops or jobs as they now control, the lathers doing likewise in such shops or jobs as they may control.

To this agreement the Board adopts the following reply, pending the action of next convention of the U. B.:

As said Burkett lathing is made of material seven-eighths of an inch thick, tongued and grooved, in lengths up to sixteen feet, from four to eight inches wide, is put on with eight penny nails and should be jointed on studding—involving the use of saw and square—and takes the place of sheathing as well as lath, the work of putting up the same, we hold to be carpenter work. We assert that the same has always been done by carpenters since its introduction and we cannot concede any part of the said work to any other organization.

As to the putting up of metal corner heads, we are content to allow the question of who should put them on, to be settled by the individual employer where the work is done.

July 28.

Decided to recommend to G. P. to send Board Member Sullivan to Penn Yan, N. Y. and New York City, for adjustment of trouble between carpenters and painters and G. S. ordered to notify Brotherhood of Painters of action taken.

Audit of books and accounts occupies remainder of session.

The Power of Rightness.

"He is thrice armed that hath his quarrel just," says Shakespeare. The real strength of the labor movement, that which gives it vitality and enables it to rise stronger and wiser after apparently crushing defeats, that which counter-balances the enormous advantages of wealth and education and social position which its enemies possess, is just this simple fact that, in general and with few exceptions, the labor movement is in the right and its enemies are in the wrong. Not only is it true that "when thieves fall out honest men get their dues," but it is also true that thieves are much more likely to fall out, to squabble among themselves and weaken their forces, than are honest men. If we would maintain and develop harmony in the labor movement, if we would cherish and increase its strength, if we would prepare to cope successfully with the ever-harder tasks that are before it, we must bear this in mind, that absolute good faith is its richest asset; that publicity and democratic methods are the breath of life; that fidelity to high ideals and a genuine feeling of brotherhood among all toilers are greater elements of strength than full treasuries or iron-bound contracts.

Many a man who is offered a chance of a lifetime for a mere song can not sing.

Address to Colorado.

(Dedicated to James H. Peabody, Governor of Colorado and Chief of Anarchists.)

BY REV. W. T. WINTHROW.

Colorado, Land of beauty!
Where majestic mountains rise
From deep gorges till their lofty Sun-kissed summits pierce the skies,
Land where Nature God hath scattered Far and wide with lavish hand,
Measureless, unbounded blessings—
Beauteous! Goodly! Favored land!

But above thee, fair alturia,
Hangs a shadow dark as death!
And across thy granite bosom
Creeps the deadly poison breath
Of a hideous, loathsome serpent,
And his foul and slimy trail
Marks thy tomb of human freedom,
In thy glorious Eden vale!

Lift thy face, Oh, Colorado!
Open now thy sluggish eyes!
Prostrate see thy sons before thee!
Hear, oh hear, their anguished cries!
Now they call to thee for succor,
E'er their last vain hope be slain.
Wilt thou hear them, Colorado?
Will they call to thee in vain?

Where once dwelt thy happy children,
Blest with hope and freedom's light,
Now is heard the tread of armies;
And the cruel hand of might,
Strong to do the oppressor's bidding,
Hauls the flag of freedom down,
And the hateful form of treason
Wears the honored judge's gown!

Where erstwhile the sword of justice
Guarded well each human right,
Now the privileged oppressor
Wields the lash of purchased might;
And where reigned the holy, quiet,
Deep, majestic, calm of peace,
Now, while hired assassins riot,
Weeping justice hides her face!

Listen, Colorado! Listen!
Hearest thou not the sullen boom
Of the guns whose murderous missiles
Hurl thy children to their doom?
Bread they asked, and stones for answer
To their plea the masters gave;
Plead for life, and death, full armored,
Swift pursued them to the grave!

Pause and think, O Colorado!
Thou art passing in review
At the bar of human judgment,
And its verdict will be true!
Will the words of condemnation
On thy startled senses fall?
Wilt the hand of retribution
Write thy doom upon the wall?

In the mighty world arena,
Where the clash of arms is naught,
Where the power of arms and armies
Falls before the power of thought,
Will be waged the final conflict,
And the victory shall be
On the side of right and justice,
And the toilers shall be free!

Once again the voice of justice,
Shall be heard in thunder tones!
Ancient tyranny shall crumble!
And amid the crash of thrones
There shall rise a new creation!
Crime and poverty shall cease,
And above the Rock of Ages
Shall appear the Star of Peace!

Thus, between the truth and falsehood
Is the righteous balance cast;
Thus, to every proud oppressor Comes the hour of doom at last;
Thus, each wave that sweeps the ocean
Breaks at last upon the shore;
Thus doth right eternal triumph,
And shall triumph ever more!

"In efforts toward ethical culture there is constantly overlooked the one effort more important than all others—the effort to suppress militancy. Abundant proof exists that with war comes all the vices and with peace comes all the virtues."—Herbert Spencer.

Keeping Tools in Order.

A skillful workman is not always one who keeps his tools in order, though there are many who owe their success in trade to being able to keep every tool they have to work with in the proper condition for use, and some there are that profess to be able to replace them by their own forging and dressing, if need be, which is very desirable for any one, but certainly the art of keeping tools in order is one that has been neglected, and about which very little has been written as compared with other mechanical subjects. It is not an uncommon occurrence to find, where a workman has injured a tool, or it has become blunt and dulled from any cause, that it is laid aside and use made of another that was intended for a different class of work, and perhaps a whole set of different sizes of similar tools be injured or thrown out of order before any steps will be taken in fitting it up as it should be. An old and worn-out machine may answer to rough down a piece of work, but the roughing down would be all the better if the tools with which it was roughened could be kept in order, although the work might be roughed out with tools in as bad condition as the machine itself. There are work hands who are quite as skillful in the operation of a machine that rely entirely on some one for adjustment, when if the same work was to be fitted without any other aid than their own it would come out very poorly. The circular saw, in order to work well, requires to be very carefully filed and swaged, or the teeth set alternately, to give the body of the saw a space for clearance, and it is very easy for any one to be dependent on others to adjust and set in order what they could otherwise easily handle. It is but a small part in some of the mechanical arts to do a piece of work, or to accomplish almost any mechanical purpose, after it has been described and illustrated; but to get the different parts in order and operate them successfully is one of the vital points of the trade. A good tool has much to do toward accomplishing good work, and when one has all the tools that are needed there remains the art of keeping them in order, as well as the skill to use them, before the work is successfully fitted. And in work of any class it is very desirable, if we take an interest in our work and have any pride at all, to have a suitable place for everything and everything in its place, and the proper time, a certain use, and a distinct name for everything put to these uses, and care taken that they are all in order.—The National Builder.

You will never get ahead by following the crowd. The front rank in trades unionism is your proper place.

I. C. S. Made Men

Later-day business history records the remarkable achievements of many self-made men, but nothing more wonderful than the progress of the vast multitude of students of the International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton, Pa. Thousands of ambitious carpenters and wood workers, aided by the I. C. S. system of training by mail, have been able to advance in place and salary. Many have been able to change their occupation, taking positions in their chosen profession. The accounts of the rise of some of our students read like romance.

A Very Successful Architect

While employed as a carpenter at $2.50 per day, I enrolled in the Complete Architectural Course. Within six months I had made such progress that I was able to accept a position as Building Superintendent, which was obtained for me by the Schools. I have opened an office here, and I am pleased to report a very satisfactory business. My income is much larger than ever before.

HARVEY BRAKEMAN, Architect,
First National Bank Bldg., New Kensington, Pa.

The I. C. S. system of training by mail teaches mechanics the theory of their trades; helps misplaced people to qualify for more congenial work; and enables young people to commence work at better salaries than if they started without training.

An I. C. S. Diploma is an evidence of ambition and honest effort as well as a certificate of thorough training. These are qualities sought and appreciated by employers.

What we have done for others we can do for you. Decide today to better your condition—then let us help you.

Mark an X before the position that interests you, fill in the coupon, and mail it to us. We will send full particulars and our book, "1001 Stories of Success," which gives the names, addresses, and advancement of over 2 thousand of our students in all parts of the world.

CLAIRTON, PA.—As the bulk of our membership are out on strike for better conditions and work is very scarce, we would warn all carpenters to give this place a wide berth until further notice.

FT. SMITH, ARK.—Carpenters are requested to steer clear of this place, as our home men can take care of all the work and some to spare. Pay no attention to advertisements for carpenters wanted here. Those who do will be sadly disappointed. Stay away.

DULUTH, MINN.—Notwithstanding the scarcity of work at this time, we are overrun with carpenters from all parts of the country in search of work. Many of our own men are walking the streets. Traveling brothers are earnestly called on to remain away.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Owing to a strike of the bricklayers, who are out against non-union labor, work in the building line is almost entirely suspended. Aside from this, times are very dull, and Wilmington is a good place for carpenters to stay away.

GAINESVILLE, FLA.—Brothers, everywhere will please take notice that J. R. Eddins, a contractor here, has peremptorily refused to recognize our organization and has been placed on the unfair list. Discriminate against him until further notice.

MAYAGUEZ, PORTO RICO.—As a result of the unsatisfactory conditions of trade in this city the greater part of our membership is idle, and similar conditions prevail in other trades. We had our General Constitution translated into the Spanish language; it is now in the hands of the bookbinder.

GEORGETOWN, TEX.—Local Union 572 installed the new officers July 11th in the presence of the members, friends and their families, Bro. Geo. Irvine acting as installing officer. After the installation ceremonies followed music and refreshments of ice cream, cake and fruits. The occasion was much enjoyed and well attended.

ANADARKO, OKLA.—We are having a hard fight here, our employers taking advantage of the great influx of carpenters from other localities and some of the new-comers refusing to abide by our trade rules or to produce a working card. Over half of our men are walking the streets idle and we would request craftsmen to stay away from Anadarko for a while at least.

JEANNETTE, PA.—Local Union 1504 has placed George Merkle, an ex-member and contractor, on the unfair list, because of his refusal to hire union men. Merkle, before he left the union, was fined for violation of the D. C. working rules and has never been a union man at heart. Brothers will please take notice of this contractor's and renegade's unfairness.

VICKSBURG, MISS.—All carpenters will please take warning and stay away from this place until our trouble is over. We are out on strike three months and union and even on-union men are walking the streets. The unfair contractors are advertising for men, promising them $2.50 to $3.50 per day; but those who respond to these ads., when pay day comes around, find only from $1.75 to $2.00 per day in the pay envelope.

ROCHELLE, ILL.—Members of the U. B. are earnestly requested to remain away from this locality. The bulk of the work here having been awarded to unfair contractors, union men are not in demand. We are using energetic efforts to get unfair contractors and non-union men in line and hope to be successful in this endeavor if union men keep away.

BERWICK, PA.—Business is at a standstill here and notably trade in the building industry is in a very unsatisfactory condition. Many of our members are out of employment and there being no prospect of obtaining any in this place they will have to leave and seek work elsewhere. Migrating brothers are requested to steer clear of Berwick at this time.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—We wish to notify all carpenters that we have a full supply of men and positively can not find work for any more. During the last month we have admitted about 60 members hailing from St. Louis on Clearance Cards. Should this influx continue it will shortly result in an over-supply of men to the detriment of our membership as well as to new-comers.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—We wish to caution all brothers against statements in the various papers that work is abundant in this city. Advertisements for carpenters wanted are misleading and not deserving of credence. We have all the men here we can give employment to at the present time, and would advise migrating brothers to stay away from Indianapolis for the present.

BUCKRUS, O.—A local union composed chiefly of mill men was organized here on June 21. The meeting was held at the G. A. R. Hall and presided over by Wm. D. Huber, our General President. Bro. Wm. Loos, of Chicago, General Organizer, was also present and addressed the meeting. There was a big attendance and a charter membership of forty was secured. We expect this new union to become one of the largest of the town shortly.

MUSKOGEE, I. T.—Reports having gone out stating that 100 carpenters are wanted in this city, we would warn all craftsmen to pay no attention to these reports as they are false and not based on facts. Trade is very dull here and many of our home men being on the street, carpenters coming here lately were unable to secure employment. Stay away until conditions have improved.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—This is the fifteenth week of our fight against the bosses' attempt to institute the open shop. The bosses and their agents are using great efforts by means of advertising for carpenters to work in this city. We would request all brothers to remain away. We have enough men here to supply all fair employers and more idle men than we know what to do with. We feel that we can down our enemies and emerge victoriously out of this fight if carpenters stay away some weeks longer.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Trade in the building industry has as yet not over-reached its normal state, work in the burned-down district having begun but in very few instances. Carpenters should pay no attention to advertisements for carpenters wanted in Baltimore. The supply of men in the building line still exceeds the demand considerably, and we expect little improvement of obtaining conditions within the current year.

CALGARY, CAN.—Although overstocked with carpenters the local papers seem to be coaxing all the men here they can on the pretense of work being plentiful in this city, and any effort on our part to persuade them that there is no opportunity to secure employment has thus far proved of no avail. Migrating brothers are warned against any advertisements of carpenters wanted here. Pay no attention to them; remain away.

PORT ARTHUR, TEX.—Local Union 610 of this place has purchased a lot and has erected a building thereon, 25x65 and ground and building are now paid for. For about five months the union has occupied this building, which is also used as a club room for union men. It contains a billiard table, pool table and other games, but gambling and intoxicants are eschewed on the premises. The local union voted $10 towards the defense fund of the Houston, Tex., street railway employees then on strike.

WATERBURY, CONN.—We are out on strike since May 1st, and the master builders having declared in favor of long hours, small wages and the open shop, thus endeavoring to put us down on a level with European labor, we would advise all carpenters, joiners, machine wood workers and bench hands to give Waterbury a wide berth and not be misled by false statements of the agents sent out by the Builders' Association. We ask a special favor of all business agents to keep in touch with men leaving their jurisdiction and advise them as to the situation in this city.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Mechanics from all parts of the U. S. have been flocking to this city in such numbers last winter that intense suffering among our members as well as among other tradesmen was the inevitable result. In justice to ourselves and in justice to brothers everywhere, we wish to warn them against any repetition of the disastrous occurrences of last winter which surely would cause more suffering and useless loss of time, but would certainly follow when attention is paid to reports spread by people interested only in the collection of railroad fares and other schemes injurious to laboring men.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—It appears that in view of the fact that Milwaukee is the Convention City, traveling brothers are under the impression that we are overcrowded with work. The true conditions of trade are, that we have not work enough at present for home-members, and as a consequence many of them are walking the streets. Hence, we would warn all brothers contemplating coming here to keep away until further notice and to pay no heed to advertisements appearing in some of our papers, stating that carpenters are wanted in Milwaukee. The bosses so advertising are unfair.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—In the voice of Local Unions 52 and 159, we will say that we are still alive and thankful for it. It is indeed a wonder, however, that we have escaped destruction, having to undergo the many trials that we had, since this month a year ago. We are neither subdued nor discouraged, but looking for something higher and nobler than we have struggled for in the past. Labor Day is drawing near, and on that day we intend to fall in line to a man and show the public that the soldiers and sons of toil, whose death the enemy predicted at the incipency of the struggle are much alive and full of vigor. Please place Charleston, S. C., on the dull list and advise carpenters to steer clear of that city.

GALLIPOLIS, O.—Unscrupulous persons, presumably ex-members who were heavily fined by the local union for violation of trade rules, have been circulating the rumor that our charter had been annulled. We therefore desire to state through the columns of THE CARPENTER that this rumor is without any foundation. Though but a small local union, we are very much alive and active in the cause of unionism and any carpenter coming to this city will find us so and will do well to bring his clearance card in good shape or money for initiation fee with him. Work is very dull here, some of our members had to take out clearance cards and start on a search for employment elsewhere. We would warn all sister local unions and members from further recognizing the cards of Will Clements, Gus Reinwald and Chester Bishop.

NEW BERV. N. C.—Local Union 1462 having as yet not been heard from through our monthly journal, THE CARPENTER, we desire to let brothers know that we are fighting our way bravely on. We organized in March, 1905, with but twenty members, and though we encountered the opposition and antagonism of some people we are gaining a stronger foothold every day. We are meeting once a week and scarcely pass a meeting night without initiating one or two new members. Our agreement providing for nine hours' work became operative on June 6th and was received with satisfaction by all contractors but one, whom we expect also to win over shortly. They are all in favor of union men and union labor. Bro. Biggins visited this city recently, giving us an interesting and instructive lecture that was highly appreciated. He had a good audience and we hope to have him with us again. Work is scarce here at present, many of the boys are idle and would be glad if traveling carpenters would stay away.

MEDICINE HAT, CAN.—On May 31st a local union of our Brotherhood was instituted at this place by General Organizer Wm. A. Dyle. Since that time we have made steady progress. The local union is meeting with general favor and the soundness of the principles of the U. B. are recognized and appreciated. We have 35 members in good standing at present and more are on the point of joining. It is our intention to become firmly established and well known before presenting any demand for better conditions; we shall bide our time. Times are fair here, still there is no lack of carpenters. You will hear from us again later on.

Whitney Bros. of North Adams, Mass., Still Unfair.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.—The firm of Whitney Bros., of this city, are still on the unfair list. They are the most bitter opponents of organized labor in western Massachusetts. They refuse to recognize the unions in any manner. The firm has now to complete a large bank building and unable to secure competent carpenters to do the work they will sublet the contract to an out-of-town firm. Brothers, everywhere will please take notice of the unfairness of this firm so that any of them coming to North Adams may know what they are up against.

All things come to those who leave off waiting and go after them.

Look Out for Him!

Ed. Wallenhaupt, a suspended member of L. U. 75, Birmingham, Ala., caused the arrest a few weeks ago, of Bros. F. Waldhorst and C. S. Mosley, two of our Birmingham members, for conspiracy, alleging that they had caused him to be discharged from the employ of the Alabama Brewing Co. because he was no longer a union man. Wallenhaupt is now in the employ of the Moerlein Brewing Co., of Cincinnati, and is traveling through the country putting in and repairing bar fixtures. Look out for him.

Missing.

Frederick T. Paskell, a member of L. U. 33, Boston, Mass., has been missing and nothing has been heard of him since June 7th. He is 5 feet 8 inches in height, weighs 160 pounds, has blue eyes, hair and mustache of sandy color. Members or readers knowing of his present whereabouts will kindly send information to the undersigned, or to Mrs. F. T. Paskell, 2 Grotto Glen road, Roxbury, Mass.

A Benevolent Act.

Early in June last Bro. G. Clifford Appel, a member of Local Union 990, Baltimore, Md., while employed in Atlantic City, N. J., on a Saturday afternoon, went bathing in the ocean and was drowned. The brothers working with him for the Wells Bros. Co. then agreed to donate an amount each out of their next pay, the total proceeds to be presented to the bereaved widow. As a result the sum of $212 was forwarded to her by Local Union 432, Atlantic City, through the Baltimore D. C., as the subjoined communications will show:

BALTIMORE, D. C., June 13, 1904.

To J. G. Farson, R. S. L. U. 432, Atlantic City, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Permit me to tender our most sincere thanks through you to Local Union 432, at next regular meeting, in behalf of Baltimore, D. C., for kindness shown in case of late Bro. G. Clifford Appel, of Baltimore Local Union 990. The ten local unions affiliated with the Baltimore, D. C., join hands on this occasion for an expression of gratitude to our Atlantic City brothers.

With best wishes, yours fraternally,
GEO. G. GRIFFIN, Bus. Agt.

BALTIMORE, D. C., June 17,
To J. G. Farson, R. S. L. U. 432, Atlantic City, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I am in receipt this day of a check to the amount of $212 from Wells Bros. Co., same being tendered to the widow of our late Brother Appel, of Baltimore Local Union 990. Permit me to commend the members of our brotherhood in your city for their generous offering toward amount of above named fund; also in behalf of our Baltimore brothers for your kindness in the matter. It is also the desire of Mrs. Appel that she join in this expression of gratitude.

With best wishes, believe me,
Yours fraternally,
GEO. G. GRIFFIN, Bus. Agt. L.

While we deeply deplore the untimely and accidental death of Bro. Appel of Local Union 990, of Baltimore, and sincerely sympathize with his widow in her irreparable loss, we congratulate our Atlantic City brothers on their generous and brotherly action, feeling sure of its finding the highest appreciation of the entire membership of our U. B.

To Our Canadian Friends.

We are requested by the Metal Polishers' International Union to draw your attention to the fact that the Guernsey Foundry Company, of Toronto, Ont., makers of the Oxford stoves and ranges, are still upon the unfair list. It is over two years since this firm declared war on organized labor, and at the present time they are suing the officers of the different locals for damages aggregating over $60,000, besides having secured injunctions restraining them from informing your Canadian members of this firm's unfairness. This fight has been endorsed by the American Federation of Labor, the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, Metal Polishers, Buffers, Brass Molders, and Silver Workers' International Union. You can help those unions to down oppression by keeping your members and their friends informed as to this firm's attitude.

Expulsions.

C. S. Kinman, the former Recording Secretary of Local Union 1582, Cincinnati, O., has been expelled for embezzlement of moneys received on applications.

J. W. Botts, of Local Union 1622, Independence, Mo., has been expelled by the Local Union for misappropriation of money collected by him from members for U. B. buttons.

B. F. Bohon, formerly Recording Secretary and Business Agent of Local Union 978, Springfield, Mo., has been fined and expelled by the Local Union for embezzlement of funds belonging to the Building Trades' Council of Springfield and Vicinity.

Erratum.

The name of the member expelled for embezzlement by Local Union 1518, Struthers, O., as published in the June CARPENTER, was incorrectly stated. It should be G. W. Huss, instead of Hurr.

Public Utilities.

Neither the roads nor the railroads of any nation should belong to any private persons.

All means of public transit should be provided at public expense by public determination where such means are needed, and the public should be its shareholder.

Neither road nor railroad nor canal should ever pay dividends to anybody.

They should pay their working expenses and no more.—John Ruskin.

Those who share the policy of the labor movement in any locality should be compelled to assume the full responsibility of failure as well as to claim the credit when success is the verdict.—Cigar Makers' Journal.

Proposed Amendments to General Constitution.

Birmingham, Ala., District Council.
The last clause of Sec. 34 be repealed.

Sec. 34 (a) (new section). The members of the G. E. B. shall act as organizers, deputies and lecturers for the G. P. when the G. E. B. is not in session, and the G. P. may so arrange their itinerary that each member of the G. E. B. may cover the entire territory during their term of office.

Local Union 815, Haywards, Cal.

New section: Any member having passed the age of 50 years and in good standing in his union shall be entitled to work for not less than two-thirds of the standard wages, and any member over 55 years of age shall be entitled to work for the highest wages he can obtain from any employer, provided he complies with the trade rules and the Constitution of the U. B.

New section: Any person eligible to become a member of the U. B., 50 years or over, shall be admitted to membership on the payment of $1.00 initiation fee and a monthly due of 25 cents, but shall not be entitled to any death or disability benefit, and in case of a strike be entitled to one-half strike pay.

Local Union 228, Pottsville, Pa.

Sec. 98. A semi-beneficial member (see Sec. 65) shall be entitled to a funeral allowance of fifty ($50) dollars on six months' membership, and one hundred ($100) dollars on one year's membership or the time thereafter, payable from the general fund, provided at the time of death he is in good standing, and when three months in arrears he shall be debarred from all benefits until three months after all arrearages are paid in full. He shall not be entitled to the benefits specified in Sections 94, 95 and 96.

New section: The officers of all local unions shall be elected by ballot, and it shall require a majority of all votes cast to constitute an election, and the term of office shall be one year.

New section: A member desiring to become a contractor shall pay all back dues and take out a withdrawal card. Should he desire to remain a member he shall have no seat or voice in the meetings.

Local Union 892, Shawnee, O. T.

Sec. 70 (addition). Any member of the U. B. shall be allowed to contract work of any amount during the time a strike or lockout is in force in the locality where he is a member.

Local Union 262, San Jose, Cal.

Sec. 17. Strike out the words "journeymen carpenter" in second line, and insert "qualified journeymen," as per Sec. 61.

Sec. 17 to read: Any member shall be eligible as a General Officer, provided he is a qualified journeyman as per Sec. 61, working at the trade or employed by the organization, and has been a member in good standing for two years prior to election.

Sec. 64. After the word "age" in second line, insert the words "and not over the age of 22 years."

Sec. 64 to read: Any apprentice of good moral character, over 18 years of age (and not over 22), may be admitted to membership, and on attaining the age of 21 years, if six months in good standing and otherwise qualified, as per Sec. 61, will be classed as a beneficial member.

Sec. 133 to be amended as follows:

Sec. 133. In cases of strikes or lockouts, where financial aid is necessary, which have been sanctioned by the G. E. B., such strike relief shall be at the rate of one ($1.00) dollar per legal working day. When the funds of the U. B. are insufficient to meet the general requirements of such strikes or lockouts, the G. E. B. shall levy a general assessment to raise the necessary funds. No strike benefits shall be paid for the first two weeks. All members shall be entitled to relief, provided that a member who is in arrears shall, out of his first payment, square up his arrears in full.

Sec. 183 to read:

Sec. 183. No shop or mill shall be entitled to the label except such shop or mill has an eight-hour work-day and a minimum pay equal to the minimum rate paid by union shops or mills in the same locality. And in no case shall the minimum pay be less than thirty (30) cents per hour for journeymen bench and machine hands, and these shops or mills employ members of the U. B. exclusively, who are qualified to join as per Sec. 61.

New section, to be designated Sec. 183 (j), to read:

Sec. 183 (j). No member of the U. B. shall be allowed to handle or put up building material coming from a non-union shop or mill located in a district where a majority of the mills or shops are unionized.

* * *

District Council, Memphis, Tenn.

New section: All questions affecting a change in wages or hours shall be voted on by roll call, and no one shall be allowed to vote on such questions unless he has been a member for at least six (6) months in the local union in which the vote is taken.

* * *

Local Union 936, Wilmerding, Pa.

Sec. 69. No member of the U. B. shall sub-contract or work at piece-work for any builder, building material manufacturer or contractor. For violation of this section or any part thereof he shall be fined not less than $10.00 or be expelled from the U. B., or both.

(The word "lump" in Sec. 69 in its present reading is superfluous and superficial. The word "owner" is misleading and gives many small jobs and contracts to non-union men that would otherwise be done by union labor. In many localities men own their own building material and would employ union men to do their building and pay union wages if they could employ them under their own supervision.)

Sec. 117. Any member working in a district from which he returns home daily shall not be required to take out a Clearance Card, but shall be governed by the trade rules of the district in which he works.

(In the above amendment to Sec. 117 the clause, "or who is sent temporarily into an outside jurisdiction by an employer from his own district," is omitted, the word "temporarily" having too much breadth. It might mean a year; it might mean ten years. It stands to reason that a man should help to sustain the district that he obtains his revenue from.)

Sec. 122. Any member who goes to work where a strike or lockout exists shall be subject to a fine of not less than $25.00 or expulsion or both. Said fine to be paid to the D. C. or L. U. having jurisdiction where the offense was committed. His name shall be reported to his local union, and said union shall enforce this section and charge the fine on their books against him, under penalty of expulsion from the U. B.

We have here omitted the words, "who goes into any city seeking work," and "is pending," and inserted the word "exists." The words so omitted are misleading. The object of our laws should be so plain and simple that all should understand and not misinterpret them."

Sec. 133. Relief in case of strikes or lockouts may be given members only at such rate and extent as the general funds will warrant, and shall not be payable before the end of the second week of the strike or lockout, and then from the beginning of the second week, provided that financial aid has been voted by the G. E. B. and the strike or lockout has been legally sanctioned by that body. If it be found that the rate and extent of the general funds be insufficient to meet the proper demands of local union or unions affected by said strike, the G. E. B. shall, after receiving a true list of all members duly affected by said strike, lay a sufficient levy on all members, not entitled to relief, of district in which said strike exists, provided said assessment does not exceed $1.00 (one dollar) per capita. Said assessment to be collected weekly by L. U. of said district and forwarded to G. T. for disbursement as per Sec. 134 of G. C. Any member affected working or committing a misdemeanor, whereby he violates civil or U. B. laws shall not be entitled to benefits. All members shall be entitled to relief, provided that a member who is in arrears shall out of his first payment square up his arrears in full.

Local Union 300, Austin, Tex.

Sec. 71 (addition). No member can belong to any union or combination composed of carpenters and members of other building trades unions, with the intent or purpose of interfering with the trade regulations of the U. B. of C. and J.

Sec. 113 (addition). A member leaving the jurisdiction of his local union must take out a clearance card and thereby sever all connection with the local union issuing the same. The clearance card must be deposited with the nearest local union to the place the member is working.

Local Union 698, Newport, Ky.

New section: Quarterly working cards shall be issued by the G. S. not later than the 15th day of the month preceding the beginning of each quarter to the F. S. of each local union under the jurisdiction of the U. B. Said cards shall entitle the holder to permission to work on any union job without transferring his membership from the local union of which he is a member; excepting local unions not in existence six months or members whose membership does not cover a period of six months, who, going into another district to work, shall pay to the D. C. and L. U. where a D. C. does not exist, the sum of 50 cents per month until such time as he has been six months a member in good standing in the U. B.

New section: The G. S. shall charge local unions 5 cents for each working card and under no circumstances shall a L. U. charge its members for same.

* * *

Local Union 131, Seattle, Wash.

New section: Strikes brought about through differences existing between trade unions shall not be sanctioned by the G. E. B., nor shall they receive financial aid from Gen. Office.

(The treasury of the U. B. was at one time depleted to the extent of $47,000 for the benefit of the New York local unions in a strike occasioned largely by differences between them and other trade unions, not involving question of hours and wages. We believe that such strikes should be discouraged and discountenanced, because they tend to put us in a bad light in the eyes of the public, drive men from our ranks and discourage non-union men from subscribing to our principles.)

Local Union 434, Chicago, Ill.

Sections 89 (a), 89 (b), and Sections 90 and 91 be amended as to provide that a member in good standing for a period of 15 years immediately preceding and up to his 60th birthday, be exempt from paying monthly dues except per capita tax; but when on investigation it is found that the member is not able to pay the same the G. P. may order it to be paid by his L. U.

In case of death or disability, beneficial members shall be entitled to all the rights and claims, including wife funeral benefit, as laid down in each and every section of the Gen. Constitution pertaining to death, disability or funeral claims now in force.

That, in accordance with Sections 65 and 98, semi-beneficial members will be only entitled to a funeral allowance of $50.00.

That all members as referred to in these sections be exempt from trade rules in their district as to wages.

Local Union 515, Colorado Springs, Colo.

New section: Any carpenter over 60 years of age, who has been a member of the U. B. of C. and J. for 20 years shall be entitled to pension of four ($4) dollars per week for such time as he remains a member.

Sec. 55 to read: Each local union shall pay to the G. S. twenty-five (25) cents per month for each beneficial or semi-beneficial member in good standing.

* * *

Local Union 16, Springfield, Ill.

New section: Local unions may be empowered to impose a fine on members for non-attendance at funerals; the proceeds of such fines to be given to the family of deceased brother, if the union so desires.

Sec. 79. Strike out after G. E. B. the words, "but in no case shall an appeal act as a stay of proceedings except in a case where a monetary penalty is imposed."

(The object of this amendment being to prevent a possible injustice to a member being carried so far as to prevent him from securing employment, making if necessary for him to either leave the locality or work with non-union men; believing that as long as there is a chance of the action of the L. U. being reversed, he should be allowed to work under union conditions.)

Special Announcement.

As previously notified through the columns of our official journal, the Western Passenger Association has announced a special rate of a fare and one-third for the round trip on the certificate plan to all delegates and representatives attending our Thirteenth Biennial Convention at Milwaukee, September 19th.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway has also announced the same rate and have notified us that arrangements are now being made for special service for the accommodation of delegates and their friends at the principal railroad centers, viz.: Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

When purchasing tickets you should request the ticket agent at your home ticket office to give you a certificate receipt for each ticket purchased. The railroad certificate is one of the important conditions of the reduced fare for the return trip. The Central Passenger Association, the New England Passenger Association, the Southeastern Passenger Association, the Southwestern Excursion Bureau and the Trunk Line Association have also announced the same rates and will gladly give information when such is called for by our delegates.

This special rate is granted on the conditions that at least one hundred delegates attending the convention avail themselves of this opportunity. These certificates must be presented to the General Secretary at Milwaukee for his signature and afterward turned over to the joint agent representing the different railroad companies, who will be in attendance in Milwaukee on September 22, 23 and 24, for the purpose of executing and returning to the delegates their certificates. One of the requirements laid down in getting this special rate is that a fee of twenty-five cents will be collected by the joint agent from the holders of certificates for the execution of each certificate.

Any further information desired will be gladly furnished from this office.

Hoping that we may have a good attendance at the convention and that its work may be productive of great good to our organization,

Fraternally yours,

FRANK DUFFY,
General Secretary.

Resolutions to Be Submitted to Convention.

Proposed by Local Union 1410, Boston, Mass.

WHEREAS, The industry of our country is controlled by a class of capitalists; and,

WHEREAS, This same class also controls our political institutions for the purpose of making laws and enforcing the same in order to strengthen their position and to weaken ours; and,

WHEREAS, The workers are misled, deceived and controlled by the lying and unscrupulous politicians in the employ of the capitalists; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the General Constitution of the U. B. of C. and J. be so amended as to not only permit of discussions of such questions of political nature as pertains to the welfare of our class but also to urge upon local unions the necessity of instructing their members in matters of this kind.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, one of the grandest organizations of the world, composed of members in various branches as per Section 61 and 62, of General Constitution, having a board of seven members known as the G. F. B., who pass judgment on all matters that may be brought before them. The U. B. being an organization with a membership of 170,000, of which 45,000 are known as mill men, the latter should at least have one representative on said Board, as the conditions of the carpenter trade have changed to such an extent, making it wise to consider the proposition. It will have a grand effect and further the welfare of this organization.

WHEREAS, There is a widespread feeling that the funeral benefit of fifty ($50) dollars allowed a semi-beneficial member, as per Section 98 of General Constitution, is entirely inadequate to decent interment of a brother; and,

WHEREAS, It is a manifest injustice to discriminate in our membership upon disability benefits, as per Section 98 of General Constitution, as accidents overtake the old and young alike, and the loss of an arm or leg is as serious and disastrous to an old as to a young man; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Section 98 of General Constitution be expunged and that there be no further discrimination among the members of our U. B. on funeral and disability benefits.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters Considered as a Business
Institution.

(By JOHN WILLIAMS, Ex-Gen. Pres.)

VERY organization formed, every corporation organized and every business institution is brought into existence for a certain specific purpose, which is, to the founders thereof, well defined, not only in outline but in every detail. If this were not so, ruin rather than success would sum up the history of each one. The ultimate success of every society or business undertaking depends upon the nature of the principles underlying their organization and existence and the extent to which these principles are permitted to shape or control their course or policy.

It seems somewhat superfluous, when addressing the readers of THE CARPENTER, to make any reference to the principles which underly the organization of the United Brotherhood. But, perchance there may be among the large and continually augmented army of newcomers in our ranks, many who have thus far given but little if any special thought to the subject. Therefore, a few words along this line at this point will not be amiss and certainly cannot do any harm even to the old-timers.

The United Brotherhood is founded on the principle that all men following a given trade or occupation should by common impulse join hands or pool interests for the purpose of protecting and elevating their trade and to improve their condition in every conceivable respect; to create a bond of unity and co-operation that will effectively establish their independence and give added dignity and value to their calling. The degradation of the followers of a given craft and their organization into a union restricted in its membership to those who are proficient in the art and mysteries of their particular calling, was the inevitable evolution of the general or mixed organizations of the toilers which were so common some years ago. The diversity of interests of the various trades made it an imperative duty to group each class and provide for their independent existence. Under precisely these conditions the United Brotherhood was instituted. It was organized with a clearly defined purpose. Its policy since its birth has been to embrace within its ranks all men who are qualified to join under the rules prescribed by its constitution. In striving for this end, there has been from time to time a re-arrangement or re-adjustment of details to meet new conditions; but, the objective has never been lost sight of and our Brotherhood proposes to work incessantly for the uplifting of Carpenters, and the inclusion in our fold of every man who is employed at any branch of woodworking which is now or ever has been an essential part of the trade of a Carpenter or Joiner.

The history of the United Brotherhood, covering as it does a period of twenty-three years, is an intensely interesting subject, but altogether too extensive to permit discussion thereof within the limits of this article. It is our purpose to consider the organization of the United Brotherhood from one standpoint only.

The writer has come to look upon the United Brotherhood as a vast business institution. Sentiment, which was a potential factor in the determination of my attitude toward it, has given way to a colder calculation of its virtues—to a more practical measuring of its value, and, I must say that the contemplation from this viewpoint has caused the Brotherhood to take a firmer hold than ever on my allegiance and affection.

The BUSINESS that brought the United Brotherhood into existence was the needs of our craft throughout this broad land. The methods employed to interest prospective members were and are precisely the same as are employed to-day in the organization of manufacturing, business or mining companies. The appeal was directed to our self-interest. We were told that it would pay to join the ranks—to become stockholders in the organization—that dividends would come in the shape of increased wages, shorter hours, relief in time of distress, mental advancement, etc., etc. In the beginning it was uphill work but success finally came and the institution was placed upon a working basis.

In glancing over the history of our organization we see that, like every other "business," it has had its "ups" and "downs." Its fortunes were at a low ebb ten years ago, and continued so for a period covering several years. It really seemed for a time as though dry-rot had set in, that the struggle for life had to be made against an internal evil. The convention held in New York City six years ago deserves the credit of having set in motion the process of self-cleansing, from which after an uncertain and anxious period, the United Brotherhood emerged strong and healthy, endowed with a vigor that has proved resistless in the onward march of its forces. The marvellous growth of the last four years is not an accident nor is it the result of natural causes; it is rather the result of an intelligent leadership, a constant study of events and instant action to take advantage of circumstances, all having for its purpose the building up of the United Brotherhood. How does the writer know this? Not from personal knowledge regarding these matters. Conclusions are drawn from the facts presented from month to month in our official journal. This paper is read most carefully, especially the portions showing our numerical strength, financial condition and expenditures. These are the concrete facts which depict very clearly our standing as a "business institution." Our strength at the present time should be compared with our condition in former years in order that we may gain a clear idea of the true value of the methods applied to our affairs by our general officers.

Eight years ago at the Cleveland convention, the then General Secretary-Treasurer reported 440 local unions with 29,691 members, and a total of $12,276.41 in the treasury. This gave an average of less than 68 members to each local union with a per capita of less than 42 cents per member in the general fund of the organization. In 1898 there were 428 unions reported, with a membership of 31,508 and a balance in the treasury of $18,738.21. This shows an increase of 1,817 in membership in two years and an increase of 18 cents per capita per member in the treasury. Two years later, in 1900, a great growth in membership is recorded, the report showing a total of 679 unions, with a membership of 68,463 and a fund of $30,268.69. While the ranks were filling the treasury became relatively weaker, showing a loss in two years of 16 cents per capita. We now come to the year 1902. The report presented at Atlanta showing an amazing growth. From 679 in 1900 the number of local unions had increased to 1,193—an increase of 75 per cent. The membership went from 68,463 in 1900 to 122,568 in 1902, an increase of about 80 per cent. During the same period the treasury rose from $30,268.69 in 1900 to $113,358.25 in 1902, an increase of 274 per cent, providing a per capita of 92 cents per member as against 44 cents in 1900. Now, two years later, it is safe to say that at this time our membership exceeds 160,000 and that the treasury contains over $185,000. Assuming that these estimates are correct, we have an increase of over 30 per cent. in membership and of over 60 per cent. in our funds in the last two years. A careful perusal of the statistical and financial statements of our general officers will show that since 1900 the cost of maintenance, including administration and extension, has gradually increased; but so, also, have our resources; for in spite of the added burdens, the general treasury has more than held its own.

Through the extension of the organization, in the formation of new unions and the building up of existent ones, added responsibilities are assumed and from time to time the administrators of our affairs are confronted with new and perplexing problems, the solving of which demands the highest order of trade union statesmanship. A clear and comprehensive perception of the true line of duty is essential and the successful leaders of our noble Brotherhood in the past three years have proven their possession of such, and their fitness to manage its affairs is unquestionable. With abundant deliberation, swift decision, commendable prudence and great patience they have led our forces to great achievements for the cause of the toilers.

Our General Office is, in a sense, a "clearing house" through which the claims against the organization are adjusted and paid. It is the centre of activity from whence the true business life of our movement radiates. It is the seat of authority; from within its portals the great army of skilled craftsmen in our ranks are carefully watched and their interests jealously guarded.

Who has failed to notice the close attention given to the business affairs of the United Brotherhood under Huber, Duffy and Neale? Is there not abundant proof in the columns of THE CARPENTER that the General President, as commanding officer of the force of organizers, is not only alert but also successful in the disposition of his forces? The number of new charters granted each month carries conviction. Is there complaint of inattention to official duty on the part of General Secretary Frank Duffy or General Treasurer Thomas Neale? Is there anything to indicate that the official conduct of our general officers is receiving any thought or attention? Have we not read in THE CARPENTER letters of commendation addressed to the General Office referring to the promptitude with which the claims for benefits were adjusted? So far as the writer has been able to gather, these constitutional administrators of our affairs are fulfilling the requirements of their official positions in every respect. Under their wise and careful leadership the United Brotherhood is meeting and discharging every obligation promptly. This is in accordance with an invaluable business principle and practice; it establishes the credit of the United Brotherhood, placing it in the highest class. In a word, the United Brotherhood to-day is second to none of the great trade unions, and as an organization of skilled mechanics is greater than any other in the world. The volume of its "business" is still growing and as its responsibilities grow so also does its financial standing improve. We want this to continue. We want our grand Brotherhood to embrace within its fold every wood worker who is skilled in handling edged tools. There can arise no danger from top-heaviness so long as our affairs are handled as at present.

What does a manufacturing corporation do when the management is very successful and large dividends are paid to the stockholders? Do they at their annual meeting, change the personnel of the board of directors? Do they turn out the old manager who has been so successful? Is a change in men and methods ordered? No! But they do seek to discover means of improving the output, they devise ways to assist the manager to produce even greater results. They add to the plant, buy new and improved machinery and in countless ways they hold up the hands of those who are striving to give them returns for the money invested in the business.

This is precisely what our immense organization should do. In the conventions, where the general policies are mapped out, the delegates should be controlled absolutely and entirely by business considerations when selecting the men who are to manage our business affairs. Isms and personalities should never for one moment dominate the action of a single representative. The supreme test to be applied to any candidate for office should be personal integrity, fidelity to trade union principles and capabilities of the highest order to discharge the duties of the position to be filled.

The United Brotherhood is a great business institution with over 160,000 stockholders, each one having a property interest in its funds being vitally concerned about its future. The meeting of stockholders will soon be held. They can not all be present, but they CAN and SHOULD be represented. At this meeting future policies will be determined, business managers (officers) will be elected. My fellow member, this interests you just as much as it interests me. Have you thought about it? If not, why not?

The writer has no personal interest in any candidate nor in any one of the present incumbents. My desire is for the continued growth and prosperity of the United Brotherhood. We look into the future in the light of the past. The experience we have gained as an organization should enable us to arrive at proper conclusions in regard to the personnel of the coming administration. The questions to be answered by the next convention are these: Have the present officers of the United Brotherhood administered its affairs faithfully and well? Has their administration been a success? If so, could it have been more so? From this distance the writer presumes to pass judgment, exercising the right of a member in good standing and offering no apology to anyone.

I believe the present staff of general officers has performed its full duty well and with great fidelity and satisfaction. I also believe that the administration of these officers has been an unqualified success. I doubt if it could be more so under other guiding hands.

On the strength of what is presented herein and on account of many other reasons, chief among which is the invaluable experience gained during the last few years, I deem Messrs. Huber, Duffy and Neale the logical candidates to succeed themselves, and I trust that the convention will serve the United Brotherhood in their selection to again administer its affairs and thereby prove that in its great legislative gathering the United Brotherhood is a great business institution.

Tag, Feiertage ausgeschlossen, verabsolgt werden. Sollten die finanziellen Mittel der B. B. nicht hinreichen um den Anforderungen eines Ausstandes oder einer Aussperrung Genüge leisten zu können, so soll das G. E. B. ermächtigt sein, zur Aufbringung der nötigen Gelder, eine allgemeine Steuer auszusprechen. Für die ersten zwei Wochen soll keine Strafe-Unterstützung gewährt werden. Alle Mitglieder sollen zu Unterstützung berechtigt sein, doch muß ein, mit seinen Beiträgen rückständiges Mitglied aus der Unterstützungs-Summe seine vollständigen Rückstände an die Kasse begleichen.

Sekt. 183. Keinem Shop oder Fabrik, der, oder die, die achtstündige Arbeitszeit, oder den in der betreffenden Lokalität üblichen Minimal-Lohn nicht eingeführt hat, soll das Union-Label gewährt werden. In keinem Falle darf der Minimal-

Lohn für Arbeiter die an der Bank oder an einer Maschine arbeiten, weniger denn 30 Cents per Stunde betragen und der Shop oder die Fabrik muß ausschließlich Mitglieder der B. B. beschäftigen, wie in Sekt. 61 spezifiziert.

Sekt. 183 (j) — (neue Sektion.) Keinem Mitgliede der B. B. soll es erlaubt sein, Material zu handhaben oder aufzustellen, welches in einem Nicht-Union-Shop oder Fabrik einer Lokalität hergestellt wurde, in welcher die Mehrzahl der Shops oder Fabriken organisiert sind.

Distrikt-Council, Memphis, Tenn.

Neue Sektion: Ueber alle Fragen, welche sich auf eine Aenderung in der Lohnrate oder der Arbeitszeit beziehen, muß durch Namensaufruf abgestimmt werden und kein Mitglied, welches der betreffenden Lokal-Union nicht sechs (6) Monate angehört, soll in solchen Fragen stimmberechtigt sein.

Lokal-Union 936, Wilmerding, Pa.

Sekt. 69. Kein Mitglied der B. B. soll Sub-Contrakte, noch für einen Baumeister oder Baumaterialien-Fabrikanten oder Kontraktor, Stückarbeit übernehmen. Die Verletzung dieser Sektion soll mit einer Geldstrafe von nicht weniger als $10.00, mit Ausschluß aus der B. B., oder beidem, geahndet werden.

(Das Wort „Theil-Contrakte“ (lump-sum) in Sekt. 61, in deren jegigen Fassung ist überflüssig und ein oberflächlicher Begriff. Das Wort „Hauseigentümer“ ist irreführend und leidet der Vergabung kleinerer Arbeiten oder Contrakte, die sonst von Union-Mitgliedern verrichtet werden würden, an Nicht-Unionmitglieder Vorschub. In vielen Lokaltäten besitzen Mitglieder ihr eigenes Baumaterial und diese würden Union-Leute unter Union-Bedingungen beschäftigen wenn ihnen dies, unter ihrer Oberaufsicht, gestattet wäre.)

Sekt. 117. Jemand ein Mitglied, welches in einem Distrikt arbeitet, aus dem es täglich heimkehrt, soll nicht gehalten sein eine Freikarte zu erlangen, soll aber den Gewerksregeln des Distriktes in dem es arbeitet unterstellt sein.

(In obigem Amendement zu Sekt. 117 sind die Worte: „oder welches von einem Arbeitgeber seines eigenen Distriktes temporär in einen anderen Wirkungsbereich geschickt wird“, ausgelassen, da das Wort „temporär“ ein zu weiter Begriff ist. — Man kann dieses Wort dahin auslegen, daß darunter ein Jahr, oder daß zehn Jahre gemeint sind. Es ist nur logisch daß ein Mitglied zur Aufrechterhaltung der Interessen des Distriktes in dem es arbeitet, beitragen soll.)

Sekt. 122. Ein Mitglied, welches an einem Orte in Arbeit tritt wo ein Ausstand existiert, verfällt in eine Strafe von nicht weniger als $25.00 oder soll ausgestoßen werden, oder beides. Das Straf-geld ist an den D. C. oder L. U. zu entrichten, in dessen oder deren Wirkungsbereich das Vergehen stattfand. Der Name eines solchen Mitgliedes ist seiner L. U. mitzuteilen. Diefelbe soll das Mitglied in ihren Büchern mit dem Strafbeitrage belasten und diese Sektion ausführen, widrigenfalls sie aus der B. B. ausgestoßen werden soll.

(Wir haben hier die Worte „Arbeit sucht“ und die Worte „imGange ist“, ausgelassen, und dafür das Wort „existiert“ gesetzt. Die Worte die wir hier ausgelassen, sind irreführend. Der Zweck unserer Gesetze sollte so einleuchtend und einfach in denselben dargestellt sein, daß sie weder Mißverständniß noch falsche Auslegung zulassen.)

Sekt. 133. Ausstands- oder Aussperrungs-Unterstützung soll nur in solchem Betrage oder Maßstabe an die Mitglieder ausgegahlt werden, wie dies die General-Kasse erlaubt, und soll solche Unterstützung nicht vor Schluß der zweiten Woche eines Ausstandes oder einer Aussperrung, von dem Beginn der zweiten Woche an gerechnet, ausbezahlt werden. Sollte die General-Kasse nicht in der Lage sein eine Unterstützung zu gewähren, wie sie den Anforderungen eines Ausstandes entspricht, so soll das G. E. B., nachdem ihm eine genaue Liste aller am Ausstand beteiligten Mitglieder zugestellt wurde, allen beschäftigten Mitgliedern des Distriktes, in dem der Ausstand stattfindet, eine genügende Steuer auferlegen, die jedoch die Summe von $1.00 nicht übersteigen darf. Diese Steuer soll in möch-entlichen Raten von einer L. U. des betreffenden Distriktes erhoben und dem Gen. Schatzmeister zur Verwendung gemäß Sekt. 134 der General-Constitution, zugewandt werden. Ein Mitglied, welches die Arbeit da aufnimmt, wo ein Ausstand erklärt wurde, oder anderweitig die Civil-Gesetze oder die Gesetze der B. B. verletzt, soll nicht zu Benefit berechtigt sein. Alle Mitglieder sollen zu Unterstützung berechtigt sein, vorausgesetzt, daß Mitglieder, die mit ihren Beiträgen im Rückstande sind, aus der ersten Unterstützungssumme sämtliche ihrer Rückstände begleichen.

Lokal-Union 16, Springfield, Ill.

Neue Sektion: Die Lokal-Unions sind ermächtigt ihren Mitgliedern wegen Nicht-Betheiligung an Beerdigungen eine Geldstrafe aufzuerlegen, deren Gesamt-Ertrag, wenn die L. U. so beschließt, der Familie des verstorbenen Mitgliedes zugewiesen werden soll.

Sekt. 79. Die Worte, nach G. E. B., „aber in keinem Falle soll eine falsche Appellation als Straf-Ausschub gelten, ausgenommen in Fällen wo eine Geldstrafe auferlegt wird“, seien gestrichen.

Wir bezwecken durch diese Streichung einer möglichen Ungerechtigkeit, die einem Mitgliede widerfahren kann, vorzubeugen. Die Wirkung des zu streichenden Satzes kann so weit gehen, daß ein bestrafte Mitglied gezwungen ist den Ort zu verlassen oder mit Nicht-Mitgliedern zusammen zu arbeiten. Wir halten dafür, daß so lange eine Möglichkeit der Umgehung des Straf-Urtheils vorhanden ist, dem Mitglied Gelegenheit gegeben werden sollte unter Union-Bedingungen zu arbeiten.

Lokal-Union 78, Troy, N. Y.

Sekt. 14. Die erste Zeile sei gestrichen und durch die Worte, „die General-Beamten“ ersetzt und diese Sektion soll also lauten:

Sekt. 14. Die General-Beamten sollen verpflichtet sein der Convention beizuwohnen u. s. w., laut Constitution.

Sekt. 31. Das G. E. B. soll aus seinen Mitgliedern seinen eigenen Vorstehenden und Sekretär erwählen und regelmäßig, vierteljährlich, oder wenn es außerdem notwendig ist, Versammlungen abhalten, in welchen die General-Beamten beratende und entscheidende Stimme haben sollen, u. s. w., laut Constitution.

Sekt. 34. Der Satz: „In keinem Falle soll ein Mitglied des G. E. B. als bezahlter Organisator fungieren“, sei gestrichen.

Lokal-Union 300, Austin, Tex.

Sekt. 71. — Zusatz. Kein Mitglied kann einer gemischten, aus Carpentern und Angehörigen anderer Baugewerke zusammen gesetzten Union angehören, deren Zweck es ist, sich in die Angelegenheiten der B. B. einzumischen.

Sekt. 113. — Zusatz. Ein Mitglied, welches den Wirkungsbereich seiner L. U. verläßt, muß von dem F. S. eine Freikarte verlangen, womit er der Mitgliedschaft in der L. U., welche die Karte ausstellt, gänzlich entläßt. Die Freikarte muß der, dem Orte an welchem das Mitglied beschäftigt ist, nächstbefindlichen Lokal-Union eingereicht werden.

Lokal-Union 698, Newport, Ky.

Neue Sektion: Der G. E. B. soll nicht später als am 15ten des, dem Beginne des Quartals vorausgehenden Monats, eine vierteljährliche Arbeitskarte ausgeben und die nötige Anzahl dem F. S. einer jeden Lokal-Union der B. B. zusenden. Diese Karte soll den Inhaber zum Arbeiten, an irgend einer, von der Union kontrollierten Arbeit berechtigen und das betreffende Mitglied soll nicht gehalten sein seine Mitgliedschaft auf eine andere Lokal-Union zu übertragen, ausgenommen wenn seine Lokal-Union noch nicht sechs Monate lang besteht, und solche Mitglieder ausgenommen, welche der B. B. noch nicht sechs Monate lang angehören und in einem anderen Distrikt in Arbeit treten. Solche Mitglieder sollen an den D. C. oder wo ein solcher nicht besteht, an die L. U. monatlich die Summe von 50 Cents so lange entrichten bis sie sechs Monate lang gutstehende Mitglieder der B. B. sind.

Neue Sektion: Der G. E. B. soll die Arbeitskarten zu 5 Cents per Stück an die Lokal-Unions abgeben, doch sollen letztere unter keinen Umständen von ihren Mitgliedern Zahlung für eine Arbeitskarte verlangen.

Lokal-Union 131, Seattle, Wash.

Neue Sektion: Ausstände, welche durch, zwischen Gewerksvereinigungen bestehende Streitigkeiten, hervorgerufen werden, sollen vom G. E. B. nicht gutgeheißen werden und dieselben sollen nicht zur finanziellen Unterstützung seitens der Gen.-Offize berechtigt sein.

Die Kasse der B. B. wurde seiner Zeit um die Summe von $47,000 im Interesse der New Yorker Lokal-Unions geschöpft und dies während einem Ausstande, in welchem es sich größtenteils um Streitigkeiten zwischen Ersteren und einer anderen Gewerksorganisation, aber nicht um Löhne oder Arbeitsstunden handelte. Wir sind der Ansicht, daß solche Ausstände mißbilligt und erschwert werden sollten, weil sie uns in den Augen des Publikums in ein schlechtes Licht setzen, Mitglieder aus unseren Reihen herausdrängen und Nicht-Mitglieder vom Beitritt abschrecken.

Lokal-Union 515, Colorado Springs, Col.

Neue Sektion: Ein Mitglied, welches das 60ste Lebensjahr überschritten hat und 20 Jahr lang gutstehendes Mitglied der B. B. war, soll zu einer Pension von vier (4) Dollars per Woche, so lange es Mitglied bleibt, berechtigt sein.

Sekt. 55 soll lauten: Jede Lokal-Union soll für jedes zu vollem oder theilweisem Benefit berechtigten Mitgliede monatlich die Summe von 25 Cents an den G. E. B. entrichten.

Resolutionen.

Lokal-Union 1410, Boston, Mass.

In Erwägung: Daß die Industrie dieses Landes von der kapitalistischen Klasse kontrolliert wird; und

In Erwägung: Daß diese selbe Klasse auch alle unsere politischen Institutionen kontrolliert und sich dieselbe zu dem Zwecke nutzbar macht, um Gesetze in ihrem Interesse zu erlangen und in Anwendung zu bringen, um dadurch ihre eigene Machtstellung zu erhöhen und die Position der arbeitenden Klasse zu schwächen; und

In Erwägung: Daß die Arbeiter von lügnischen, gewissenlosen Politikern, die im Dienste der Kapitalisten stehen, irregeführt, betrogen und an der Nase herumgeführt werden; sei Beschlossen: Daß die Gen.-Conf. der B. B. so amendirt werde, daß dieselbe nicht nur Diskussionen über Fragen politischer Natur, die mit dem Wohl und Wehe der Arbeiter enge zusammen hängen, zuläßt, sondern auch den Lokal-Unions die Nothwendigkeit an's Herz legt, über solche Fragen unter ihren Mitgliedern Klarheit zu verbreiten.

Lokal-Union 327, Cincinnati, O.

Die B. B., welche aus Holzarbeitern der verschiedenen Fächer zusammengekehrt ist, (Siehe Sektionen 61 und 62 der Gen.-Constitution) wird von einem aus 7 Mitgliedern bestehenden Executiv-Board geleitet. Die Gesamt-Mitgliederzahl der B. B. beträgt 170,000, und da hiervon 45,000 Shop- und Fabrik-Arbeiter (millhands) sind und sich die Arbeits-Verhältnisse des Carpenter-Gewerkes beträchtlich verschoben haben, sollten die Shop- und Fabrik-Arbeiter ein Mitglied als Vertreter in diesem Board haben. Die Annahme dieses Vorschlags würde dem Gedeihen unserer Bruderschaft sehr förderlich sein.

Lokal-Union 850, Leadville, Col.

In Erwägung; Daß eine unter unserer Mitgliedschaft weit verbreitete Ansicht vorherrscht, daß die zu theilweisem Benefit berechtigten Mitglieder im Sterbefalle gewährte Summe von 50 Dollars unzureichend ist, um denselben eine anständige Beerdigung zu sichern; und

In Erwägung; Daß es eine schreiende Ungerechtigkeit ist, bezüglich Sterbe- und Unfall-Benefit, wie in Sekt. 98, zwischen älteren und jüngeren Mitgliedern einen Unterschied zu machen, da alte wie junge Mitglieder von Todes- oder Unglücks-Fällen ereilt werden können, deshalb sei Beschlossen: Sekt. 98 sei gestrichen und es soll fernerhin bei Todesfällen oder Unfällen kein Unterschied zwischen den Mitgliedern unserer B. B. mehr gemacht werden.

How to Take Quinine.

It has often been given as an excuse by people ordered quinine that the taste is so nasty when dissolved in acids that they can not digest it in wine. Milk is not generally recognized as a solvent of quinine, but it is, and it also wonderfully disguises the bitter taste. A dose of five-grains of quinine can be taken in four tablespoonfuls of milk without being unpleasant, and if taken in a tumblerful of milk the bitterness disappears entirely.

The only way to make the mass of mankind see the beauty of justice is by showing them in pretty plain terms the consequences of injustice.—Sidney Smith.

PREPARE NOW FOR LABOR DAY

ORDERS for Badges intended to be used on Labor Day should be placed sufficiently early to permit of the manufacture of the same. As this is an occasion for which thousands of organizations throughout the country are having special badges made. It is advisable to send orders in considerably ahead of time and thus prevent disappointments or delays.

The New Official Combination PARADE AND FUNERAL

Multiple Badge

Containing the beautiful lithographic reproduction in colors of the UNION LABEL in the bar and the emblem of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, also lithographed in colors, in the medallion.

THE MULTIPLE BADGE

shown herewith is a genuine departure from anything now used in the shape of a reversible design. We particularly commend this design in view of the fact that it is adapted for use in three different ways: a Meeting Room Badge, a Parade Badge, a Memorial or Funeral Badge. The larger engraving shows the parade side of the badge complete with metal part. The memorial or funeral side (though we do not show it by illustration) is the reverse of the parade side, and is made with black ribbon with wording embossed in silver. The smaller illustration represents the metal part detached from the complete badge, and shows how this part may be worn alone. When a badge is wanted for parade or gala purposes the complete design may be used, and when a small badge with dignified effect is wanted the metal part may be used alone by simply detaching it from the badge proper. Whichever part is used there is a complete badge, and we are satisfied that the combining of three distinct uses makes it superior to any reversible design on sale.

Any desired wording can be placed in the top bar. We can furnish officers titles in the panel on officers badges, without extra charge. We can also make any desired changes in the wording on the ribbon parts. The braid and fringe are furnished in gold, the metal parts in gilt. In making the badge reversible, the bar is detached at the top and the ribbon part reversed. A loop in the ribbon at the top of both sides makes it an easy matter to change the badge so it can be worn in any way desired.

MR. FRED T. HODGSON'S NEW BOOK

BUILDERS' ARCHITECTURAL DRAWING, SELF TAUGHT

This work is especially designed for carpenters and architects and other woodworkers who desire to learn drawing at home, and who have not the means, time or opportunity for taking a regular course in school or college, or availing themselves of the offers made by one or other of the "Correspondence Schools."

The work commences with a description of drawing instruments and accessories, with rules for using them, and hints as to their care and management. Rules for laying out simple drawings and executing same, are given, and the student is taught, step by step, to draw to scale, first the plans, next the elevations, and finally the details of a cottage, including foundations, walls, doors, windows, stairs, and all other items required for finishing a small building complete in every particular.

A chapter and a number of plates are devoted to a more elaborate work, and the student is shown by a series of easy lessons in simple language, how to make more elaborate drawings. This study is not considered in the work, nor is perspective or shading, as the author has endeavored to make the work a purely practical one for practical workmen. Practically all the examples given are drawn to scale and may be followed as they are given, or may be enlarged or reduced at the will of the student. As an Architectural Drawing Book for real practical workmen, who intend making draftsman of themselves by their own efforts, this book has no equal.

This valuable work contains over 300 pages printed from new, large type, on a superior quality of cream wove paper. Over 300 fine line engravings made especially for the work, each drawn to scale; 18 large double folding plates with full explanation for each. Durably bound in either fine silk cloth or half leather. The Financial Secretary of your Local has a copy of "Builders' Architectural Drawing," and he will be pleased to show it to you at any time.

SHERMAN, TEX.—In view of the fact that we are now making an effort to establish a minimum scale of wages of $2.50 per day, and not wishing to see our movement impeded by new comers while it is pending, we would request all carpenters to keep away from this locality for the present.

STRAWN, TEX.—Our Local Union has now obtained charge of all the Mt. Marion Coal Company's carpenter work, and in recognition of the fact released the company's houses from the stigma of unfairness. Trade is dull, we have more carpenters here than work and migrating brothers would do well by staying away.

LAKE CHARLES, LA.—Misled by statements circulated by unfair contractors, claiming that work is plentiful in this place, quite a number of carpenters have been coming to this city in search of employment only to be disappointed. Carpenters are warned against advertisement for carpenters here and are advised to steer clear of Lake Charles for the present.

MADISONVILLE, KY.—Trade conditions here have as yet not improved, and we are still waging war against unfair contractors and non-union men. Wages being as low as $2.00 per day of nine hours, carpenters will readily see that conditions afford no inducement for good mechanics to come here. Hence, union men are advised to remain away.

CINCINNATI, O.—For some time past the influx to this city of idle carpenters is enormous and alarming at the same time, and as a result quite a number of resident brothers are thrown out of employment. It is not our intention to build a fence around our city, but we believe it our duty to inform outside members of the true condition of trade in this city and to advise them to remain away for the present.

PADUCHA, N. Y.—Bro. Morey, a member of Local Union No. 559, has left this city, leaving his wife and new born baby behind, both having been very sick and with not a penny to live on. The local union has cared for them for some time and then sent mother and child to her own people. We would warn all local unions against having anything to do with this brother.

LAWTON, OKL. TER.—This is a good place for carpenters to stay away from for some time. We expect a new water works plant to be erected here, but all work in the building industries is at a standstill at present, and no one feels inclined to build before the water works are started or their erection is assured. We have also some nonunion men to compete with, and altogether we are having a hard pull.

FONTENAC, KAN.—Though Local Union 876 has but a small membership we are doing well and getting along nicely. We are enjoying the eight-hour day; wages are $3 per day. Work is plentiful at present and chances are that it will remain so for the season. But we would not advise butchers to come here, there is no demand for them, and whatever work there is we have the men here to do it.

BRUNSWICK, GA.—Traveling carpenters or other building trades men are warned to steer clear of Jekyll Island until further notice. We are demanding usual wages and board. By holding off a short time we have good chances to gain our point. So far we have been paying our fare to and from the Island and a good price for board. We now demand that board be furnished us free. Carpenters, please keep away and give us a show.

PALO ALTO, CAL.—We would again call the attention of craftsmen everywhere to the unfavorable condition prevailing in this city and all over the State of California. The over-supply of labor is something enormous, numbers of men of all trades are walking the streets for want of work, while the corporations are deceiving the public by encouraging immigration. Carpenters especially are urgently advised to pay heed to this warning and stay away from California.

ALBANY, N. Y.—We are still having a hard fight here, as the firms of M. L. Ryder, Peter Keeler, John Dyer, Jr., Thomas Stephens & Sons and Gick & Sayles are adhering to the so-called open shop policy, and do not want to recede from the position they have taken. These firms are continually advertising for men and we would warn union men to stay away from Albany and not take any stock in the ads. for carpenters wanted in this vicinity.

BREAUX BRIDGE, LA.—Trade is extremely dull in this place and the greater part of our men are idle. We have not witnessed such a dull season for years. Our Local Union is in pretty good shape, but the contractors persuading the nonunion men coming in here not to join us, we are progressing but slowly numerically. Please place Breaux Bridge, La., on the dull list and advise carpenters to stay away until further notice.

KALISPELL, MONT.—We would request all journeymen carpenters to remain away from this locality for the present and advise them to pay no heed to advertisements or circulars sent broadcast by land sharks and corporation boomers. Work has been very scarce all winter, and while spring trade opened up with fair prospects, it has almost entirely dropped off by this time and work will be very scarce for the rest of the season. We have more than enough men here to do what little work there is to do. Keep away.

BENNETTSVILLE, S. C.—Local Union 1306 is a happy little bunch of eighteen, very punctual in their attendance of meetings, always in good spirits and eager to learn what is going on in the U. B. We launched our little craft last April and we are now sailing fairly well. There are some good men in our town still on the outside whom we are trying to win over and get them to join. Carpenter trade is satisfactory this season, not one of our members is hunting for employment. Still we would not advise migrating brothers to come here, as there is no opening at present and enough resident carpenters to do all the work. We all take great interest in our journal, THE CARPENTER, and peruse its contents with gladness.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—This city is at the present time overrun by carpenters equipped with clearance cards, most of them having been attracted to Baltimore in the anticipation of a boom in the building industry as a consequence of the destructive fire last winter. Failing to obtain employment there, they generally strike for this city. Baltimore, as well as Washington, has more men than required to do all the work.

BUTLER, PA.—Our controversy with the Builders' Exchange culminated in the Butler Builders' Supply Company and S. G. Purvis & Co. securing injunctions against us. The suit in these cases ended on May 14, and although a month has since passed, the court has not yet handed down a decision. The Builders' Exchange is doing all in its power to crush labor organization in Butler and work is at a standstill, contractors awaiting the decision of the court. There is not enough work here to go around, a number of our men are idle and traveling brothers are earnestly requested to stay away.

ALTOONA, PA.—The supply of labor considerably exceeding the demand, we would request all carpenters to stay away from this city at present. On May 16th L. U. 900 declared a strike for nine hours and 33½ cents per hour, and after being out one week the Pennsylvania Railroad Company suspended about 300 of its employees in the car shops. Most of these men having taken our places we were compelled to declare the strike off. At this time we still have a number of our men out of employment with no prospect of securing work. Carpenters, steer clear of Altoona, Pa.

CHARLEROI, PA.—We are continually receiving requests for aid from sister local unions. Some for disabled brothers, one of late for a brother who lost sight of both eyes through a fall. The last one is an appeal from New Britain, Conn., with a number of tickets as chances on a graphophone for the benefit of a brother who wishes to change his residence to another climate, etc. Now, according and in compliance with standing G. E. B. decision on page 42, Gen. Constitution, we have to ignore these communications as they do not have the approval of the G. E. B., attested by the G. S.

American Federation of Labor.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 20, 1904.
To Organized Labor of America,
Greeting:

You are all fairly or fully familiar with the outrageous condition of affairs which exists in Colorado, and therefore a brief resume here will be preferable to details which may be learned through another and more convenient source. Suffice it to say that in Colorado to-day all semblance of civil law and constitutional rights are under foot and flagrantly violated. The rule of gun and bayonet is supreme, and doing the bidding of the most unscrupulous organization of men who are prompted by no other thought or purpose than avarice, greed and power—the mine owners organized as the Citizens' Alliance. They have Governor Peabody absolutely under their thumb. He is doing their bidding and carrying out the bargain entered into prior to his election, to prevent the enactment of the eight-hour law by the Colorado Legislature, and which enactment is directly commanded by the constitution of that State.

There can be no question as to the fact that to this gross violation of constitutional command and the failure to enact an eight-hour law was the cause of the strike for the enforcement of an eight-hour work-day and the effort on the part of the mine owners to frustrate that effort by every means at their command and the sending of the military forces by Governor Peabody to overawe the miners and to break their strike. Whatever lawlessness has been committed by either or by both sides is due to the first lawless act of the Governor of Colorado and his continued usurpation of power and exercise of tyranny and brute force.

Surely it is entirely superfluous and unnecessary for us to say that we have no excuse to offer for crime committed no matter by whom, and that our movement is not in any way identified therewith. It is also well known that there are certain policies pursued by the Western Federation of Miners that run counter to those advocated by the American Federation of Labor, but we submit that in the conception and execution of justice there can not be and ought not to be one rule of law for one and another for the other among our people.

Under the combined domination in Colorado of the mine owners, the Governor and the military forces, the State courts have been or are unwilling to accord men either a fair trial or any trial at all, or accord them the rights to which they were entitled under the constitution and law of the State and the United States, so that the judiciary in Colorado has largely yielded the civil rights and functions of the court to the combination of plutocracy and militarism.

If the striking miners have been guilty of the crime with which they are publicly charged, they should be arrested, indicted and tried by the courts of the State, and, if found guilty by a jury of their peers, punished. But this should be the due process of law provided by the statutes and the constitution of Colorado and our country.

There can be no justifiable excuse for abolishing civil law and civil government in any district of Colorado and establishing military rule so long as there is one district in all the State in which a trial in the civil courts, before an impartial and unprejudiced jury, is possible.

Weeks have elapsed since the dynamite disaster by which many men were killed and wounded at Victor, Colo., yet not one scintilla of evidence, either official or unofficial, has been vouchsafed the public connecting the striking miners or their organization with that disaster. Yet men have been placed under military arrest, thrown into the bull pen without any charge having been made against them by any complainant, judge, or grand jury.

The mine owners, under the assumed name of the Citizens' Alliance, have unceremoniously summoned the officers elected by the people and demanded their resignation, and if either refused or hesitated ropes with nooses at the end were flung at their feet, the alternative given them for signing their already prepared resignations or be hanged.

Men against whom no charge, either direct or indirect, was made, were dragged bodily from their homes by armed guards, placed on trains and deported from the State.

The Citizens' Alliance has declared "Death to Unionism in the Cripple Creek District," and this is evidently its purpose, though its members have, for strategic reasons, moderated that declaration. Nor do they have in mind Cripple Creek district alone, but organized labor of the entire country, for all will readily understand that the mine owners' organization of Colorado, that is, the Citizens' Alliance, is an offshoot of the "Parry" species of antagonism, regardless of the attitude which the trade union movement may take.

In view of the critical situation of affairs in Colorado, and the fact that there is not now and may not for some time to be fair opportunity for the miners of Colorado to have accorded to them and maintained by the courts of that State the rights to which the men are entitled, both in accordance with the laws and constitution of Colorado and the United States, we are firmly of the opinion that their only redress is to and through Federal courts of the United States.

And inasmuch as there are unlimited millions at the disposal of the mine owners of Colorado in their lawless and brutal attempt to rob the men of their organization and their liberty (and if they deem necessary of their very lives), in the interest not only of the labor movement, but in the interest of justice and right, fair-dealing, the protection of the rights and liberties and lives, the rights for which the labor movement stands.

We appeal to all organized labor and friends to not only give their moral but financial assistance, so that the great question of constitutional liberty, human rights and civil government may be properly presented and defended and we hope finally proclaimed and sustained by the Federal courts of our country.

A special session of the Colorado Legislature must be called at once to comply with the command of the State constitution by enacting an eight-hour law with proper penalty provision against its violation. The Legislature must hold to a strict accountability all who have violated statutory, constitutional, and fundamental law and human rights. In the meantime every effort should be made by all lovers of their fellows to bring to an amicable adjustment the industrial conditions which now obtain in Colorado. The freedom of speech, the freedom of the press, the right of home are involved; the principles of our republic, the progress of civilization are hanging in the balance.

Send all financial contributions to maintain the legal rights of the Colorado miners to Mr. W. D. Haywood, Secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, 625 Mining Exchange Building, Denver, Colo.

SAMUEL GOMPERS, President.

FRANK MORRISON, Secretary.

An Appeal.

To Organized Labor, Greetings:

We take this means of calling your attention to a matter of great importance to us as an organization, and urge upon you the necessity of giving us your earnest support. The greatest obstacle we have to contend with is prison made brooms and whisk brooms, made by the convicts who are bound out by various States to the prison contractors. There are no brooms made by convicts in the State of New York, but the prisons of Ohio, Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are flooding the open market with these goods that come into competition with the goods manufactured by free labor, and which can be sold much cheaper than those manufactured by legitimate manufacturers.

Amsterdam is the heart of the broom industry, and most of the manufacturers are using our Union Label, and are helping us in every way to lessen this unfair competition. We beg your honorable body to appoint a committee to try to suppress the sale of prison made brooms and create a demand for Union Label brooms and whisk brooms, and wait on the various merchants in your locality and induce them to sell nothing but the same.

Hoping you will not place this on file without granting our request, we remain, yours fraternally,

BRUSH BROOM MAKERS' UNION, LOCAL No. 14.

JAMES DILLON, Pres.

ANDREW COLLINS, Sec'y.

Their First Annual Banquet.

The members of Local Union 1701, St. Francis, Mo., their families and friends, turned out in full force at the first annual banquet held by the Local Union on June 3. The committee of arrangements, assisted by brother members and their wives, had been very successful in their endeavor to please every one, and the affair proved a complete success, long to be remembered by the boys of L. U. 1701. Speeches were made by several invited guests, among them R. J. Hubbard, editor of the "Labor Herald," who addressed the assemblage on "Unionism and Its Principles." Senator J. T. Bradley, father of the Missouri eight-hour law, also delivered an excellent and eloquent address. Both speeches were much appreciated and listened to with close interest by the audience. The Deslodge string band gave some choice selections, cigars, refreshments, strawberry and cream cake were passed around and all participants had a merry time and thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Send in Your Propositions.

The attention of all local unions and District Councils is again and particularly called to Sec. 184 (b) of our General Constitution, providing that proposed amendments to our laws must be sent to the General Secretary for publication in THE CARPENTER. Our membership should be accorded sufficient time and opportunity for the thorough consideration of all proposed changes to our Constitution and be placed in a position to intelligently instruct their delegates to our next convention. The time of its session is drawing near. Send in your propositions as soon as possible. Don't wait until the last moment.

Successful Trade Movements.

OLEON, N. Y.—Our demand for an advance in wages has met with a favorable result and the new scale took effect on May 1st. Some of our members are now receiving higher pay than they anticipated. Our charter has been closed in due time; the dispensation had the effect of increasing our membership of about thirty. This place is now thoroughly unionized as far as carpenters are concerned.

* * *

BROOKHAVEN, Mo.—We have presented our new agreement to our contractors to become operative on July 1st. All of the contractors having promised to affix their signatures we do not anticipate any trouble this season. Our local union is in a prosperous condition and continually gaining ground. We are working nine hours a day and have plenty of work for all our members. The outlook for this season is bright.

* * *

POTTSVILLE, PA.—Our demand for an advance in wages from 25 cents to 28 cents per hour, to take effect on May 1st, not having met with the approval of the bosses and our efforts to reach an amicable adjustment of the differences having failed, we were out on strike three weeks for the enforcement of our new scale. The Builders' Exchange then offered to compromise, agreeing that the 1st of June should be the day for the new scale to take force. The local union accepting the compromise, the strike was declared off. We are now receiving what we asked for.

Unionism Aably Defended by Brotherhood Committee.

On June the 9th last a committee from the Builders' and Dealers' Exchange, of Vicksburg, Miss., met a like committee from our local unions of that city for the purpose, if possible, to arrive at an agreement by which the strike may be settled. The question of the builders signing or not signing the agreement submitted to them by the carpenters was discussed, and in the course of the deliberations one of the exchange committee alleged that the prime reason for refusing to sign an agreement with the carpenters to employ only union men to do their work would be a direct violation of the constitution of the United States; and in the second place, it is signing away his rights as an American citizen, to attend to his own business.

This allegation was met by one of the carpenter committee, who stated "that the constitution of the United States guaranteed to us a right to do just as we please, so long as we do not interfere with the rights of another. Any man has a right to secure work from any person whomsoever, for any price that owner agrees to pay; and if the work is more than the contractor alone can perform, he has a perfect right to employ whom he pleases to assist him in completing his agreement. He also has a social and moral right to sign a compact with any man, or set of men, to employ them, and them alone, to perform any part of labor he is unable to do himself, without violating any law of civilized earth, for the following reason: Were there an article, or clause in the constitution of the United States stating that any man who has more work to perform than he is able to do himself is compelled to employ any man who appeals to him for work on such job so long as it lasts, provided he states that he is an artisan and qualified to do it, were this written in the sacred document of our federal constitution, then to discriminate against persons, by the promise to secure to certain classes all the work he contracts for, there would be a pertinent possibility of transgressing the law by such act. But by the light of prophecy, the holy writers of that nucleus of inimicable law did not write it that way; therefore, then, the interpretation does not admit of discussion. As for signing their independence away, they might complain to the Great God of our universe for requiring us to be baptized in order to be saved.

Why does He require us to get wet before we can enter the kingdom of Heaven? It is required of us for His own satisfaction, and we owe it to Him, for what He promises to do for us and our immortal souls when we die.

You might as pertinently complain that every person who is baptized, partakes of the Lord's Supper, or goes to confession surrenders his independence! The logic of one as reasonably or unreasonably applies to the other; as the arms of the labor brotherhood are as broadly extended to every man in this world as the privileges of the holy church. No man is debarred, or denied the protection or benefits arising from organized labor, provided he pays the tariff for maintaining such unions.

The question was asked by one of the exchange: "Is it right to force a carpenter against his will to belong to the union?" The reply was: "Yes, and for this reason: Will you admit that prior to an organization of the Carpenters' Union of Vicksburg (and this will answer for every city in the United States) that the ten and eleven-hour a day was custom?" "I admit that." "Do you concede that by a union of our craft only we were enabled to establish the nine-hour for a day system?" "That is true," was the response. "Again, you will not deny that we are better paid to-day for our labor than we were under the indiscriminate 'open shop' policy existing prior to our organization in your city." "That is true." "Mechanics were paid all kinds of wages; good men were not paid equal to the best men to-day. Then, therefore, I can answer in the affirmative, that all carpenters should be compelled to come into the union whether they want to or not."

The only reason why a carpenter would refuse to join a union is to avoid the payment of his dues, as it does not in any way conflict with his religious or political opinion, which dues are as necessary to maintain the order as money is necessary to maintain the church.

If the Brotherhood, then, secures less hours for toil and secures better pay for that labor, the man who profits by our efforts then, and is not willing to pay the tariff required to support our union, is a pilferer, a robber, a fleecer, whom we are unable to deny our privileges, and we feel morally justified in branding such persons as "scabs" and refuse to work with them. The union alone secures hours, it secures better pay. The non-union man or "scab" benefits by it just the same as we do, but still we are powerless to prevent it. He quits when we quit, and at the close of day he gets the same money for that day's work. We pay our monthly dues to maintain the strength of our union, while the non-union man gives us the grin. We appeal to you. We ask in the name of reason and justice, is a man of this cast anything else but a "scab," a cancer, rankling in the burning bosom of toil?

If the union promotes the welfare of its brotherhood, without injuring the person of other trades and vocations of life, then, it must be good; and the man who benefits by our toil and is not willing to give us the protection and security against such plundering knaves is a scab, virtually thrusts his fingers to our throats and helps the wolves on in their moral slaughter. The conference adjourned without an agreement.

Unionism in the Far North.

EDMONTON, CAN.—As the busy season approaches, and after a long but pleasant winter, L. U. 1325, of this town, finds all the brothers at the front ready to work for the interest of the organization as well as their own. On April 5 a large delegation of L. U. 1325 crossed the river to our sister town and organized a new union there. A well-attended meeting was held, and after the regular business had been transacted, all present repaired to the Dominion Hall to partake of many good things prepared by the proprietor, at the expense of the new local union, for the visiting brothers, to which all did justice.

With the co-operation of our sister local union, we expect to accomplish more than ever in the way of thorough organization of the two towns. We shall endeavor to make them the best union towns in the far North. Work is somewhat slack here at present and a number of our men are idle, hence we are anxiously looking for business to start up.

The Present Status in Guymon, Okla.

The members of Local Union 752 are to be congratulated upon their stand and courage in organizing under the adverse circumstances and conditions of trade in this locality. A little band of a dozen have combined to assist each other for their mutual welfare, socially and materially, as well as for the advancement of the interests of those depending upon them and their prosperity.

Trade at the present time is entirely at a standstill, not more than one or two of our members have employment, and the outlook for the summer season is discouraging. These conditions have been brought on, not by strikes or disagreements, but by natural causes, such as any and every new country is subject to.

Idle journeymen contemplating a trip to Guymon would do well to defer their prospective visit until fall or winter, as with the advent of cooler weather and full crops we expect a revival of trade.

It is to be hoped that the members of Local Union 753 will live up to their promise, stick together in times of adversity as during prosperity, and be ready to put their shoulders to the wheel upon the first necessary call.

The I. C. S. Building at St. Louis.

The International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton, Pa., is represented at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition by a handsome building. The structure faces the Plaza in the Model Village, which is one of the most interesting features of the Exposition.

The lower floor of the building is devoted to a public exhibition of the plans and methods of the Schools, with specimens of the work of students. The second floor, furnished with all conveniences and comforts, is used as a postoffice, reading room, writing room, and, in fact, a rendezvous for I. C. S. students and their friends.

These Schools have had a wonderful growth and their history is unique. About fifteen years ago the Legislature of Pennsylvania passed laws requiring a great many officials in the coal mines to pass strict examinations. Many of these men were capable of performing their duties, but how to pass the technical examinations became a serious problem. Mr. T. J. Foster, now President of the Schools, at that time editor of the Colliery Engineer, one of the foremost mining papers, conceived the idea of training these men, in the theory of their work, by correspondence instruction. He prepared a Course in Coal Mining in the simplest language possible, but complete in every detail. The Course met with immediate approval and success. In a short time a thousand students were enrolled.

To meet a demand for correspondence instruction, from men and women in other vocations, the International Correspondence Schools were founded in 1891. The best experts obtainable were engaged to prepare the various Courses and direct the instruction. Today the institution has 170 Courses, and, in twelve years, has enrolled over 650,000 students in all parts of the world.

The simplicity that characterized the first Course issued has been preserved in the preparation of all subsequent Courses. This feature has made the Schools the leading exponent of correspondence education, its students being found in every walk of life.

The accounts of the rise of some of the I. C. S. students read like romance. Many of these experiences have been published in book form, and are exceedingly interesting. The book is entitled "1001 Stories of Success," and can be had for the asking.

Prosperity, from the standpoint of the working man, consist in wages which meets his actual living expenses and leave him a little over. How many of us have such jobs.

CORRESPONDENCE

Amalgamation.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

The question of most importance to be considered by the delegates to the next convention of the U. B. is, in my judgment, that of the amalgamation of the A. S. of C. & J. with the U. B.

I consider it of vital importance. Why of such importance?

First. Because the carpenters of the United States and Canada will then have a unity of purpose and action which they can not have so long as they are two distinct bodies and have their distinct local organizations. We can then present a solid front to those of our employers who see fit at any time or at all times to refuse to comply with our just demands and seek to prevent us from obtaining our legal and reasonable rights as men, skilled artisans and citizens of this great commonwealth.

These reasons also hold in regard to the so-called Citizens' Alliance and kindred organizations.

It is a fact, universally known, that the purpose of the masters' associations has been, is, and will continue to be, to destroy central bodies and combinations of all crafts, and their efforts have been concentrated on that one object, knowing apparently better than some journeymen and some locals that it is much easier for them (the masters) to control one individual than a number of individuals, and one local than a combination of locals.

When I say that the masters know these things apparently better than some journeymen and some locals, I do so because I have often heard journeymen advocate the "go it alone" policy, and because of the fact that some locals have been induced by alluring but false promises to try to travel the alone policy road. I have in mind one local which started out on the journey, and it had no sooner started than it saw this sign, "This is the road to reduced wages; first cut, 50 cents per day." The next sign will be, "You must work more hours; we will treat with the individual only."

It is a logical conclusion that, if individuals gain power by combining into local unions, local unions will gain proportionately greater power by combining into central bodies, and national bodies will gain strength by merging and having fewer national divisions of the same or kindred crafts.

SECOND.

It will do away with dissensions and strife that should not, but do and naturally will exist, between rival national bodies of the same or kindred crafts, and also between locals of these rival national organizations.

Experience has demonstrated that these unpleasant conditions will exist so long as we are divided.

THIRD.

It will keep in the treasury of the united organizations vast sums of money that (judging by the past) would be spent by the dual organizations in fighting one another, or one seeking to control or destroy the other, and will put into the pockets of the members of the united bodies earnings which they may, and in all probability will, be deprived of if we continue divided. They have been thus deprived in the past, notably in the New York fight. Such a spectacle: Look at it!

Union men fighting like fiends instead of being friends and brothers as we should be.

Denver came near having the same experience that New York had.

FOURTH.

It will cost much less to conduct the business under one national head than under two, locally as well as nationally.

FIFTH.

We will then have unity and harmony instead of division and discord.

The masters can not then get one camp to fight the other, as there will only be one.

SIXTH.

We will then be in a better position to bring the A. W. W. under our control.

SEVENTH.

The course of labor in general demands it and would be benefited by it. I again cite the strike in New York.

EIGHTH.

Time and conditions are ripe for it. I fully believe the A. S. of C. & J. wants it, and I know Denver wants it and needs it badly.

NINTH.

The ultimate and final success of the U. B. demands it.

United we are strong; divided we are weak.

Hard, sound thinking and wise action at this time, on the part of the U. B. will result in good to other crafts, to ourselves and to our posterity. If we act wisely they will bless us and we will be happier. Let us so act.

A Hint for the Delegates to Our Next Convention.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

I believe the time has arrived for the members of our U. B. to recall to their minds the report of our delegates to the Boston convention of the A. F. of L. and ponder over the coldness that is kindly extended to us, the second largest organization numerically, from these quarters. And this notwithstanding the fact that our organization has done more to uplift men of other trades, financially and otherwise, than any other union in the labor field. Hundreds of our members have scattered all over the U. S., going into alleys, highways, workshops and ditches, teaching the men how to unite for better conditions and showing them that their trade or calling is just as honorable as their own carpenter trade or the trade of a cigar maker, a tailor or any other trade. Our members have done all this to increase the membership of what they thought was a mother organization. But, alas! the mistake! Many insults are undeservedly poked at our members for the good work done among the unorganized and uneducated in union principles. I would like to ask some of my older brothers in the trade, men that have upheld the U. B. for fifteen or twenty years, year out and year in, taught the young man the trade so he can go abroad and take a leading part among any mechanics, what they think of another supposed unionist stepping in, saying to us, "We will do all the fine work, and you stay on the outside till we get it ready for you." Or do these brothers think that we should stand for this kind of unionism, or stand up for what righteously belongs to us? We carpenters must and will claim all bench-work and everything made of wood and used on or around a building of any kind or construction. All this work is carpentry and joinery and we won't allow any so-called wood worker to step in and take it from us. We won't give it up for no one and place our union label on this work, too, although it has not been indorsed by the A. F. of L. convention.

Now, Bro. Editor, before I close let me make another earnest appeal to all our brothers for more funds to be placed at the disposal of the General Office for organizing purposes. Let us not forget the hard struggle our brother members in New York had to go through last summer, nor let us forget other strikes of less consequence. Taking these strikes as a whole the men involved have emerged with small loss, but had it not been for the backing they received from the General Office the result would undoubtedly have been disastrous. However, our funds can not always last under such a strain, unless soon replenished. We must have more money to carry on our fights; if we haven't the money we are not in it. Fraternally,

DAVE FARLEY,

A Voice from Porto Rico.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

The undersigned, F. S. of Local Union 1633, Mayaguez, Porto Rico, desires a little space in our worthy and valuable monthly journal for a few remarks on conditions prevailing in this country. The conditions the working classes of Porto Rico are subjected to, financially, socially and politically, are deplorable indeed. This very day large numbers of toilers of all trades or callings are idle and in utter destitution, caused by lack of employment. Realizing the necessity of making a combined effort to bring about a change for the better in this lamentable state of affairs and with the endeavor to protect our craft from the encroachments of greedy employers, we have organized a local union of the Brotherhood of C. and J. of A., and entered into a movement from which we are expecting magnificent results. We are now extending our hand of brotherly love to those of our craftsmen who, be it on account of their allegiance to some political party, through their indifference and narrow way of viewing things pertaining to their own welfare, or be it through ignorance as to their own interests, have hitherto failed to take any part in this movement. We are making determined efforts towards the establishing of a more harmonious feeling among the workers and to better defend our social and moral interests. We are trying to persuade our brothers whom we have to accuse of causing and fostering antagonism and creating discord in labor's ranks, of the folly of their ways and of the necessity of their adherence to the principles of unionism for the benefit of all concerned.

In sending you these few lines I am prompted by a feeling of satisfaction, seeing our movement inaugurated but a short while ago, progressing so nicely, which no doubt will be welcome news and of interest to the brothers of our U. B. The more so as we have achieved these results in spite of the great adversity and violent opposition of the enemies of labor who are numerous in this country. And still, in our endeavor to spread this great labor movement we are but striving for the happiness of the worker and his family and for the happiness of the entire commonwealth.

I notice in the May CARPENTER that the General Office has granted charters to 27 new local unions in the preceding month, one of them being a local union in Arecibo, Porto Rico. The trades union movement has obtained a firm foothold in Arecibo, a number of unions of other trades have also been formed in that city, and they have also applied to their respective headquarters for charters.

Though realizing that I am but an atom in this great struggle for economical, social and political freedom, I hope that the sentiments expressed in this humble writing may leave an impression on the minds of the readers.

At present we have certain projects in contemplation, of which I shall give an account in a later communication.

Strictly Enforce Uniform Minimum Scale.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Apropos to the article on "Graded Wages and Other Bait for Suckers," by Hal Stryver, too much can not be said. It is the first duty of every union man to incorporate in his creed to daily, hourly, nightly, recite that any attempt to grade wages is the beginning of degradation and nonunionism. Let him make it a part of his union principles and an article of his faith. It is a deadly anodyne concealed in a subtle flattery.

The devil has never been accused of being a sluggard. Let us not suppose he will slight any opportunity to defeat a principle that has raised the working man to a position where he can demand consideration—and get it, too. Doubtless it smacks of wormwood that my lord, the contractor, can no longer follow the dictates of his own sweet will, but must incorporate in his address something that equals "By your permission."

We may be thankful that those egoists who lend a willing ear to this suggestion are an insignificant minority. It is so easy that some of us will believe on the slightest provocation that by reason of a superior skill, alertness or some other consideration that we are worth more than this or that brother whom we may have in mind. Better write fit on your shirt cuff that there are as many better men than you are as there are worse. It will help the U. B. of

C. and J. May she go on to happy green old age. And here is the way the article ends: "In the matter of wages, a uniform minimum scale, strictly enforced, is the only way to apply the rule." Put it in gold letters on the four walls of your local union.

G. J. FOWLER,

Agrees with Bro. Roberts.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

In the May number of our journal I notice an article from Bro. Roberts, of L. U. 1716, Krebs, Ind. Ter., under the heading, "Why They Don't Join Our Organization," in which he perfectly voices my sentiments in the matter. It is very clear to my mind that an old man can't take much interest in our organization under its present laws as far as they apply to benefit features. He can certainly not be expected to join a union from which he hardly gets any help. I agree with Bro. Roberts in his specification of the different ages; he is perfectly right in saying that if a man joins our U. B. at the age of 49 and another joins at the age of 50, the first is entitled to all the privileges, while the latter receives no benefit at all. I believe it to be a good idea to so change our General Constitution that it will give justice to all members alike; it should treat our superannuated members more fairly than it does at present. Yours fraternally,
JOHN KRONBERG,

Join a Union Before You Reach the Old Age Period.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

The question raised by Bro. Roberts, of L. U. No. 1716, "Why they don't join our organization," in the May number of THE CARPENTER, is a question I have often thought about, and while I agree Bro. Roberts says, in a great many cases and localities there was no union. What was the matter with the old fellow about the time he was forty-seven or eight to get out and organize a local union? No, brothers; I contend that if a man is a union man from top to bottom he will never wait until he is after fifty years of age to become affiliated with our grand old Brotherhood. If he does I can not see why he should expect the same benefits as the fellow that joins when he is young and keeps up his dues continually. I do not believe much in beneficiary features in a labor organization. I will say for myself alone if there were no benefits of any kind attached to our union I would be a Brotherhood man just the same, because I believe a labor union was and is organized for the purpose of bettering our conditions while we are living.

Now, the old man has worked ten or possibly eleven hours for a day's work. Some young fellows get out and organize a union and get the hours cut down to eight at the same pay. I think that helps the old man out a little. Bro. Roberts, don't you? I am a firm believer in fraternal insurance, but there is no fraternal beneficiary organization that will give a man over fifty years of age the same benefits as they will the younger man. Then why should the carpenters? Now, the Constitution gives the locals the privilege of reducing the semi-beneficiary members' dues to almost one-half. I can not see what more they could ask for? No; the question, "Why don't they join our organization was not answered by Bro. Roberts; neither am I going to try, but will say in conclusion that I most sincerely hope there will be no need of a semi-beneficial clause in our Constitution after the present generation. Let us all be union men and belong to some union long before we reach the old age period. Fraternally yours, JAS. J. VOTAW,

High Initiation Fee Keeps Them Out.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Noticing quite some comment in the last issues of our journal on the necessity of paying higher dues and on the question, "Why so many carpenters do not join our organization," you will kindly permit me to join the writers by saying a few words on these subjects.

I do not know what it costs a non-union man in other States, but right here in San Francisco and Oakland there is considerable complaint of the large amount of initiation fee charged new members, the initiation fee being, in San Francisco, as high as $20, and in Oakland $15, and it undoubtedly keeps many carpenters from joining the local unions in these localities. The monthly dues in both districts are 75 cents; in case of a strike we are assessed 50 cents per month, and some local unions pay 25 cents extra for the benefit of other labor unions. We have a Saturday half-holiday which certainly is a blessing and an improvement. At the same time, however, the holiday causes a loss of a half day's pay to the union men, while the non-union, of whom there is a large number in both cities, are working all day, earning a full day's wages. Furthermore, we are compelled to suspend work on all public holidays, and on these days the non-union men again have the best of us—they are working right along, which they do on many other days during the year when union men have to stand idle.

Taking into consideration that the cost of unionism here amounts in the average to a dollar per month, it is in my judgment a great mistake to charge an initiation fee as high as $15 or $20. By pursuing this course we are but swelling the ranks of non-unionists much to our detriment. We want to have all and every worker with us, but if we pile on to the cost of joining and monthly expense it will injure and not benefit unionism. Men in these days of competition will not stand too much of a strain on their finances; we must make it easier for non-union men to join; they enjoy the advantages the organization has fought for and obtained for them at no small sacrifice and we must have them in our ranks in order that we may commonly bear the burdens of unionism and commonly enjoy the advantages derived from it.

G. T. OYNE,
President L. U. 815, San Francisco.

From Middletown, N. Y.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

At our last regular meeting we had the pleasure of receiving a visit from Gen. Organizer W. F. Wood, who gave us a very pleasing and instructive talk on unionism generally and the U. B. of C. and J. in particular. One of the questions discussed being: How to secure larger attendance at meetings. Brother Wood, who is also a member of the New York D. C., gave us the benefit of his experience. After reciting many occurrences and experiments, he held that the most effective means to arouse the interest of the workers in the organization of their respective craft was to hold open meetings, to invite able speakers to address them, not confining the speakers to any particular subject, but reserving the right to question them, they to reply if they saw fit.

Bro. Wood complimented us on our quarters, saying they were the finest suit of rooms occupied by any local union he had thus far visited. A brief description may be of interest to the brothers. We are located on and occupy the third entire floor of the Times Building. Opening off the hall is the ante-room, with the toilet and lavatory, opening from the ante-room is the smoking room, coat room and the assembly hall, 40x60. The latter is separated from the parlor, a room 30x40, and from the dining hall by folding doors. In the dining hall there is a row of tables the length of the hall, capable of seating 75 persons. A door opens from the dining hall to the kitchen, which is furnished with stationary, gas range, zincs, etc.

About twice a year we hold a reception, with our wives and sweethearts as guests, and with music and dancing and games for the little folks, we generally have a merry time.

Very few, if any, of the members of our Local Union 547 would voluntarily surrender their membership.

Fraternally,
JOHN SCHINDLER, R. S.,

As to Our Obligation.

To the Editor of THE CARPENTER:

Kindly allow me to make a few observations and ask a question in regard to the obligation we all have taken when coming into this United Brotherhood. In taking this obligation we promise to assist each other individually and collectively, and as to my knowledge a clear definition of these terms, or explanation of their meaning, has never been offered. I desire to ask the question: "How can I live up to my obligation, or how can I assist my brothers individually and collectively, being debarred from discussing questions concerning their wants and needs?" As you are aware, some of the questions pertaining thereto, commonly called politics, are excluded from discussion in our meetings. I myself am opposed to such discussions where capitalistic politics are concerned. Questions of that kind should certainly be kept out of trades unions. On the other hand, however, I am not in favor of excluding purely workingmen's politics, because by excluding them we hamper ourselves in our strife for better industrial and political conditions.

At the initiation of a member he is assured that the obligation does in no way conflict with his religious belief or political opinion. Now, Bro. Editor, my religious belief or political opinion and my unionism are linked together in three links, friendship, love and truth, as the Bible, the word of God, says, shall make us free—free to think, free to act and free to serve each other as God would have us to serve one another in brotherly love. I do not wish to be called down for encouraging or suggesting any infringement on our laws, order of business or parliamentary rules, but I assert that if we want to live up to our obligation consistently and in conformity with its true meaning, we must so change our laws that we are not debarred from discussing workingmen's politics. We shall never be in a position to fully and effectively assist each other until our laws permit us to act as a unit on political lines for mutual assistance and the elevation and emancipation of the wage working class, of which we are a part. This is a truth that will assert itself more and more every day, and the sooner we realize this truth the sooner capitalistic aggression and oppression will be wiped out from this earth, and the sooner we shall be free to think, free to act, and free to assist each other as God would have us to.

L. J. SMITH,
L. U. 4, Kansas City, Mo.

The Capitalistic Mode of Production Disintegrates Itself by Its Own Workings.

All wealth is produced by labor. This product is divided into two parts—"paid" labor and "unpaid" labor. Society is divided into two classes—the working class and the capitalist class. The working class gets the "paid" labor and the capital class gets the "unpaid" labor. Between these two classes there is a never ending struggle over the division of this product into the two parts—"paid" and "unpaid" labor. In addition to the struggle between these two great classes of society there is also a never ending struggle going on within the classes themselves. The working class fights over the division of the jobs and the weaker are forced into pauperism; the capitalists gamble and scramble over the division of the "unpaid" labor and the weaker are forced into the ranks of the working class. Thus as the struggle between the two great classes and the struggle between the forces within these classes becomes more intense with the economic development of industry, the capitalist class must, of necessity, grow smaller while the working class increases in number with the inevitable result that the capitalist mode of production disintegrates itself by its own workings—Coming Nation.

A man who habitually absents himself from his union meetings is like the superfluous ballast of a ship, which is thrown overboard in order that the craft may pursue its course.

Poverty is hell, but it isn't the kind the preachers preach against.

Capitalism is hanging itself as fast as it can; don't get impatient.

Special Announcement.

Again, I take this opportunity of notifying our members that the Thirtieth General convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America will be held in Milwaukee, Wis., commencing Monday morning, September 19, at 10 o'clock prompt, and continue in session daily until all work referred to it is completed. This will occupy at least two weeks.

As soon as delegates and alternates are elected their names and postoffice address should be forwarded to the General Secretary at Indianapolis, immediately. Any local Recording Secretary failing to comply with this order is liable to a fine of $5.00 as per Section 8 (c) of the General Constitution.

We have now partly completed our arrangements with the railroad companies. We have been fortunate enough in securing rates of one and one-third fare on the certificate plan from the Western Passenger Association. This association in turn is making arrangements with all other companies on the same basis. Official notification will be served on us later and will appear in the coming issues of THE CARPENTER. The rate of one and one-third fare is granted on the conditions that at least 100 persons holding certificates will be in attendance at the convention. As the convention opens on the 19th, certificates will be honored which showed the purchase of the going ticket on September 15th. These certificates must be signed by the General Secretary at Milwaukee and be presented to the joint agent representing the railroad companies, who will be in attendance in that city on September 22, 23 and 24th for the purpose of executing and returning to the delegates their certificates. One of the requirements laid down in getting this rate is that a fee of 25 cents will be collected by the joint agent from the holders of certificates for the execution of each certificate. Fuller information will be sent later through circular letters to our local unions, delegates and alternates. Fraternally yours,

FRANK DUFFY,
General Secretary.

Quarterly Report of Second General Vice-President, R. E. L. Connolly

March 31, 1904.

To the G. E. B. of the U. B. of C. and J. of A.:

BROTHERS—I hereby submit to you my report for the quarter ending on above date.

At the time of writing my report for the previous quarter I was at Anniston, Ala., where I found not only our organization but the entire community, from an industrial standpoint, in very bad shape indeed.

Our Local had not held a meeting in months, there were but four members in good standing, thirty carpenters had taken out clearance cards and left to seek work in other places, and many others had gone without cards, the large industrial plants were shut down and business generally was at a standstill.

The few carpenters remaining were either those who, under the most favorable circumstances, could not be prevailed upon to join our organization or men who joined from necessity, or compulsion, rather, and not from principle.

I tried to get enough together to hold the charter, but met with no success, so I gathered up all books, papers, charter, and money amounting to about $100, and forwarded same to the G. O., with an itemized statement and full report.

From Anniston I went to Atlanta, Ga., to assist them, if possible, in awakening an interest in organization work.

I remained there several days and we held, or tried to have a series of open meetings.

There are a few earnest, sincere and hard-working members in Atlanta who deserve great credit for the untiring efforts they put forth, but the great bulk of the members are not entitled to be called union men.

They will not attend their regular meetings, they entirely ignored the special meetings. They make no effort to build up their unions, and if they have any plausible reason for being union men they are certainly artists in keeping their reasons hid from the world.

The abuses they cry out against, the hardships they labor under, are simply the result of their own inactivity and lack of interest.

Upon leaving Atlanta I spent several days in my own district, Bahm, visiting the various Locals, as there were some matters of vital importance to the craft under discussion, and about to be submitted to a vote—matters which I had reason to believe that if they prevailed at that time would work to the future detriment of our organization and which I felt it my duty to oppose, which I did.

I next went to Vicksburg, Miss., by order of our G. P., Bro. Huber, presumably to assist Vicksburg Locals in organizing a mill, but upon my arrival there I learned that the mill in question was some forty miles away, at Jackson.

I found the Locals at Vicksburg in very good shape, but just recovering from the ill-advised action of a few members of No. 1047, who, on last Labor Day, caused the craft to divide on the color question, thereby engendering some bad feeling and distrust, but I am glad to say that the majority of No. 1047 are opposed to any such work and are acting in harmony with No. 970.

Right here I want to say that I believe the color question is the greatest drawback we have to the thorough organization of our craft, and we never will enjoy the success that we deserve until we recognize the fact that a carpenter is a carpenter, and a competitor, and entitled to our unstinted support as such, regardless of his color.

From Vicksburg I went to Jackson, Miss., where I found our organization almost completely wiped out on account of this senseless color question again.

I succeeded in getting No. 824 on its feet again, and I sincerely hope they will avoid all such mistakes in the future.

I did not succeed in organizing the mill at Jackson that was giving Vicksburg trouble, owing to the unorganized condition of the outside men, but several of the mill men are members of No. 824.

I went next to Greenville, Miss., where I organized two Locals, one white and one colored.

I visited Brookhaven, where I found a small Local, but they seemed to be getting along nicely and we had a good meeting.

Went from there to McComb City, where they have a good Local, and we again had a good meeting.

From there I went to New Orleans, where I spent several days with No. 76 and was much impressed, not only with the membership, but with the advanced and progressive methods they employed, which to me indicated that they were using their brains to a good purpose, and that they had the brains to use.

To begin with, there is but one Local in that city, which solidifies the movement and curtails useless expense, and then each member of No. 76 is assessed 2 per cent. of his earnings and this amount is placed in a special fund to be used in case of strikes or lockouts only.

They already have several thousand dollars set aside during the few months in which this feature has been in operation.

It appeared to me that No. 76 had good control of the situation in New Orleans.

After leaving New Orleans I returned to Mississippi, stopping at Bay St. Louis, Gulfport, Biloxi and Hattiesburg, in the southern part.

Bay St. Louis and Biloxi are sleepy old towns and nothing doing, and Gulfport is just dead.

It was a boom town, and during the boom we had a Local there, but boom and Local have both disappeared.

Hattiesburg had a Local, but I only found the fragments.

It was organized about one year ago and they took in everybody that ever split a rail or made a chicken coop, and a few months after organizing they made some sort of demand, fell down with it and went to pieces.

I got a few carpenters together, but not enough to apply for a charter, as they are somewhat shy at present, but I believe they will get together again, that is the mechanics, and reorganize.

I then visited Columbus, talked to a few carpenters while they were at work and arranged to hold a meeting with them a few days later, and in the meantime I went to Greenwood, where I met with more encouragement, but did not succeed in getting out the crowd only about half a dozen being present, but they appeared so interested that I believe a Local will be started there.

I was due at Columbus the following night, and when I arrived there I found the men were like a lot of scared rabbits.

They were simply afraid to organize because their "bosses," or masters, if you please, might not like it, and intimated that I should see the "bosses" and find out how they stood on the question.

I decided that such men would do us more harm than good, so I boosted myself on the first train out of town and left them in the enjoyment of kissing the hand that was smiting them.

I returned to Bahm and found the "workingman's friends" of the Parry, Elliott and—the friends of Elliott's stripe—with a club in each hand marked "Law," the capitalist brand, however, making a crack at every unionist head that came in sight, and apparently determined to accomplish the impossible, i. e., break up organized labor by fair means or foul, and they usually resort to foul, but when the smoke of battle clears away they will find us doing business at the old stand.

They are teaching us the necessity of the solidarity of labor upon every field of action, and while the medicine may taste bitter to some of us, we must eventually take our medicine or be crushed off the earth.

I am now at Knoxville, Tenn., but do not care to say anything as to the condition here until I am better acquainted with the facts.

With kind regards to each and all, and wishing you a successful meeting, I am Fraternally yours,

R. E. L. CONNOLLY,
Second Gen. V. P.

Local Union 1560, Kingston, N. Y.:

Believing that a very large majority of our members are not directly interested in the list of Financial and Recording Secretaries, and that the list takes valuable space in our official journal, which could be better used for the interest of our organization, as the list will grow larger each year, requiring more space, we, the members of L. U. 1560, Kingston, N. Y., for economical reasons, recommend the adoption of the following amendments to our General Constitution:

Sec. 25 (b). The G. S. shall publish and have delivered to each L. U. and D. C. (in good standing) during January and July two copies (one each for F. S. and R. S.) in magazine form, containing the names and addresses of all Financial and Recording Secretaries, with name and number of L. U. and D. C. to which they belong. He shall in addition to the two copies above mentioned deliver such extra copies at 5 cents each as he may receive orders from L. U.'s by the 1st of January and July, but he shall not be under any obligation to issue any extra copies on orders received after the above dates to unions organized prior to the 1st of January and July preceding the publication of such list.

Sec. 153 (d). The F. S. shall at the first meeting night in June and December (before the appropriation of moneys) call for the subscription and collect 5 cents from each member who wishes to secure a copy of the official list of Financial and Recording Secretaries. He shall at this meeting order from the G. S. the extra copies wanted.

Local Union 132, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Sec. 8 (a) amended to read as follows:

The election of delegates and alternates shall be held on the second meeting night in June preceding the convention, and all members must be notified by mail that said election is pending.

Sec. 117 amended to read as follows:

Sec. 141 to be eliminated from the Constitution, and

Sec. 143 to be amended to read as follows:

The nomination and election of officers shall take place the second meeting night in June and December. The union in the meantime must notify all members by mail that said nomination and election is pending.

* * *

Local Union 636, Troy, N. Y.:

In Sec. 183 (b) change the hours from eight hours to nine and the minimum pay from 30 to 22½ cents per hour.

* * *

Local Union 142, Pittsburg, Pa.:

Sec. 61. Add the words: "And no apprentice shall be registered in the U. B. to learn the trade who is over 21 years of age."

Sec. 69. Strike out the word, "owner" where it appears.

Sec. 117. Any member working in a district from which he returns home daily, or who is sent temporarily into an outside jurisdiction by an employer from his own district, shall not be required to take out a clearance card, but shall receive credentials from his Local Union, signed by the President and Financial Secretary, with seal attached, stating that he is sent temporarily into the above district. Moreover, he shall immediately deposit the said credentials with the President of any Local Union in the district and shall be governed by the trade rules of the district in which he works.

Sec. 142. Add the following: And where a member, who is an officer or delegate representing his Local Union becomes a contractor or employer his office shall be declared vacant and he shall turn over to his Local Union or D. C., as the case might be, all moneys, papers or whatever he might have belonging to above named bodies, and another member shall be elected at the next regular stated meeting to fill the vacancy.

Sec. 144. After the words: The installation of officers, add the words: "and delegates."

RESOLUTIONS

To Be Submitted to Convention By Local Union 807, Toluca, Ill.

I.

WHEREAS, The official journal of the U. B., THE CARPENTER, is a necessary medium for the communication of matters of importance from the General Office to the membership and essential to the welfare of our organization; and,

WHEREAS, The U. B. owning neither press nor other instruments for printing, is compelled to have our journal printed at general printing offices; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we urgently call on the delegates to the Milwaukee convention to use their influence for the purpose of devising ways and means of purchasing press and other necessary facilities for printing with a view of having our official journal, THE CARPENTER, printed by a printing office of the U. B.

II.

Resolved, That the delegates to the Milwaukee convention be called upon to prevail on the convention the necessity of making more suitable arrangements for the use of the U. B. label on work on dwellings and buildings. That all union carpenters working nine hours per day shall have the privilege of using the label, with the understanding that within one year from time of granting the label they shall adopt the eight-hour day.

III.

Resolved, That the delegates to the Milwaukee convention be called upon to use their influence that steps be taken for the strict enforcement of Section 43 of the General Constitution, providing that where there are two or more local unions in one city they must be represented in a District Council, and that such D. C. have supervision of wage-scales, hours, organization of local unions and other matters of importance within its jurisdiction.

IV.

Resolved, That the delegates to the Milwaukee convention be called upon to use their influence to the effect that the number of members composing the General Executive Board be increased from seven to eleven; that the United States be divided into ten districts, one member to represent each district, and the eleventh member to represent the District of Columbia, Dominion of Canada, Porto Rico and Hawaiian Islands.

V.

WHEREAS, The carpenters working in and around coal shafts are compelled to belong to the United Mine Workers, and in localities where a local union of the U. B. of C. and J. of A. exists these carpenters are compelled to belong to that organization also; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the members of L. U. 807 working under the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers ask the Milwaukee convention to arrange matters in a manner that said carpenters will not be compelled to belong to the United Mine Workers when a local union of the U. B. of C. and J. of A. exists in the respective locality; and, be it further Resolved, That the General Officers of the U. B. invite the representatives of the United Mine Workers to meet with them in conference for the adjustment of this matter to the satisfaction of all parties.

"The Eight Hour Bill."

BY J. O. CARSON.

CONGRESS has adjourned, and may I add, those learned gentlemen, the representatives of the people (?) have returned home for the purpose of repairing any breaks in their political fences, and incidentally prepare for the next session. They have left Washington thoroughly convinced that they saved the country! Perhaps they did. Exactly how the country was saved, however, I am unable to say, but presume it was done by their accepting free railroad passes over the various roads, drawing their salaries, and appropriating the small sum of $781,574,692.99 for various beneficent (?) objects.

At the session just closed many measures touching the question of labor were considered, the most important being the "Eight Hour Bill." You will notice I used the word "considered" in connection with the "Eight Hour Bill." That was all they did with the bill, just considered it. If any one thought that the law-makers would open their hearts, take a decided stand in the interests of justice, and allow their better judgment to prevail by passing the bill mentioned above, they were laboring under hallucinations, and have evidently awakened to that fact ere this. The bill died a painless death, with very few mourners among the learned gentlemen who compose our law-makers. The question of mourning on the demise of said bill was left to the members and friends of organized labor—left to the very men who elected the ones that are responsible for the defeat of the same.

It is certainly amusing to read some of the arguments advanced by the opponents of that bill who appeared before the Committee on Labor. Many chartered special trains (?), neglected their business (?), broke important engagements (?), in order to appear before that committee and save (?) the government money.

Mr. Hunt, representing the Homestead Steel Works, makes the statement that his employes sit down and read the newspapers. He also makes the statement that the machines are speeded to a certain limit—that it does not tire a man to work more than eight hours per day; that a man will do more on the last half of the turn than he will on the first half. What philosophic reasoning! How could a man do more on the last half of the turn than he did on the first half, provided that the machine was speeded to a certain capacity? It is a fact, well known to mechanics, that he would do less on the last turn from the simple fact that his tools would require more attention.

Mr. Baldwin, representing the Paper Box Manufacturers' Association of New York, makes the statement that there is a scarcity of help in his business now, and if the hours of labor were reduced to eight he would be unable to secure help. Such fallacy!

Mr. Davenport, the learned member of the legal profession from Bridgeport, Conn., appears before the committee as the "end man" representing the American Anti-Boycott Association, and truly no "factor" was ever

The Reign of Crime in Colorado.

BY HAL SCRIVER.

NEVER in the history of this country, it is safe to say—not even in the terrible period of the sixties—were free political institutions more seriously threatened than now. The recent developments of the labor war in Colorado present the same terrible problem, but in a more acute and pressing form than the Haymarket or Homestead or Pullman or Lattimer, or even the Cœur d'Alenes. It is a problem which can not be evaded, which must be solved. For if it is not solved on the one side by an awakening of the forces that make for liberty and progress, it is in a fair way to be settled on the other side by the forces of tyranny and reaction, which are already alert and active. The working class alone in America to-day has both its interests and its sympathies in favor of peace and freedom. This is its time of trial.

During the last two or three years we have seen the capitalist class organizing in a most wonderful way. Not only have the trusts kept on absorbing smaller properties and interlinking their interests, so as to overawe those "Independents" whom they have not taken in or destroyed. Besides this, powerful employers' associations have grown up—national associations for single industries, local associations uniting many industries, and one great organization—Mr. Parry's National Association of Manufacturers, or Citizens' Industrial Association of America, as it is now called—whose purpose is to affiliate the employers of all localities and of all industries and mobilize their forces against the labor movement, and which is making very rapid progress toward the attainment of that end. To resist strikes, to conduct lockouts, to furnish scabs, to exchange blacklists, to send spies into the unions, to lobby against labor laws, in the State and National Legislatures, to disseminate misinformation about economics and the labor movement through the public press, to carry on criminal prosecutions and damage suits against trade unions and their officials—these are the principal lines of action contemplated and beginning to be used by this vast federation of the profit-taking class which has so suddenly sprung into being.

It is idle to minimize the importance of this movement as some of the labor papers seem inclined to do. Mr. Parry is a ranter, it is true, and says a great many foolish things, about which it is easy to make jokes. But the employers' organizations are "making good," to the great injury of the working class, and our jokes at Mr. Parry will not stop them. Napoleon said that the greatest mistake a general could make was to underestimate his enemy's strength. Let us not make that fatal error. Let us understand that we are not going to win any easy victories; that our enemy is powerful and determined and aggressive; that if we do not conquer that enemy and push forward he will conquer us, and we shall lose much that we and our fathers have worked for and fought for in the past.

I mention all this in connection with the present troubles in Colorado because the capitalist outrages in that State are but a sample of what we may reasonably expect from the employers' organizations whenever and wherever they dare to undertake such work. No moral scruples, no respect for law and American institutions, no feelings of justice or mercy will restrain them. The only thing that will restrain them is fear—fear of the righteous wrath and consciousness of the strength of the working class.

Capitalism is an essentially lawless system, much as capitalists love to talk about law and order. Nine-tenths of our laws are made necessary by the conflict of private-property interests with each other or with the needs of humanity. Nine-tenths of the business of our courts grows out of the abuses of the profit-making system. Nearly the whole of the corruption in politics and government flows directly, as Mr. Steffens has shown, out of "business methods." Capitalism is naturally lawless because it is essentially individualistic and fundamentally dishonest. It makes private profit the great incentive. Profit is something-for-nothing. He who gets something for nothing gets it out of somebody else. He whose chief motive in life is to gain at the expense of others can not at heart be a friend of law or of liberty. And of such is the whole employing class—with individual exceptions so rare that they need hardly be noted. The capitalists need law to restrain them, to protect them from each other, and also to keep down their victims, the wage-workers. But individually they hate law and break it if they dare whenever they can not bend it to their will.

In Colorado this anarchistic class has now shown itself in its true nature—violent as well as hypocritical.

Two capitalist organizations—besides the State government, with its militia—have been concerned in the crimes there committed against Labor. One is the Mine Owners' Association, an employers' association of the usual type. The other is a body of a somewhat different and a very interesting sort—the Citizens' Alliance.

The Mine Owners' Association comprises the great capitalists. The Citizens' Alliance is composed of the little men—the local merchants, bankers, contractors, small manufacturers, landlords, lawyers, saloon keepers, and the like.

The Mine Owners' Association furnishes the money for Governor Peabody to keep the troops in the field. It gives orders to the Governor and the Citizens' Alliance. The men who are in the Citizens' Alliance are also, very many of them, in the militia. One day they wear blue coats and execute martial law. The next day they hang up their blue coats in the armory and (with the same guns) function as a lawless mob—at the mine owners' instigation. The day after—at the Governor's command, issued at the mine owners' request, they put on their blue coats again and arrest and imprison or deport strikers for the crimes that the business men's mob committed the day before.

The big capitalists direct things. The little fellows do the dirty work. They are afraid of the big capitalists. The local banker is afraid the mining company will withdraw its deposits. The small manufacturer is afraid the mining company will cease to order supplies from him. The saloon keeper is afraid the mining company will get his license revoked. The boss builder is afraid the mining company will refuse to give him contracts. The landowner is afraid the mining company will foreclose its mortgage. The lawyer is afraid the mining company will cease to employ him in legal business if he refuses to serve it also in illegal ways—or, if he has never had a brief from the company, hopes he will get one by being subservient. These little business men hate and dread the big corporations; but they can not unite effectively against them—such is the individualistic nature of the capitalist, even the small one. So, instead of uniting to fight the great oppressors, they become their tools and accomplices in oppressing the workers.

Here is a bare list of some of the things that have been done by this Holy Alliance of big capitalists, capitalist politicians, and little capitalists in their war against the miners of Colorado:

Martial law has been declared;

Public meetings of workmen or women have been forbidden;

The public press has been put under military censorship and forbidden to criticize the authorities or print the miners' statements;

The unions' co-operative stores have been closed and private stores have been forbidden to sell food to strikers' families;

Strikers who were living quietly at their homes, not asking for help even from the union (having saved a little out of their wages) have been arrested for "vagrancy" and given the alternative of scabbing in the mines or breaking stone on the streets;

Strikers and union sympathizers have been arrested without warrant or accusation, held without bail, denied the privilege of consulting counsel, and kept in the "bull pen" without trial till it pleased the authorities to let them out;

The families of strikers so imprisoned have been evicted from their homes and insulted and terrorized by ruffianly scabs or ruffians in uniform;

Writs of habeas corpus, issued by regularly elected judges, in order to bring men so arrested to trial and determine their guilt or innocence, have been defied and ridiculed. ("To hell with habeas corpus," said General Beil; "we'll give them post-mortems instead!");

Large numbers of strikers and sympathizers have been deported from the district or even from the State and warned not to return on peril of their lives;

Many organizers and active members of the Western Federation of Miners and the United Mine Workers of America have been brutally assaulted—some of them murdered—by thugs in the pay of detective agencies acting for the Mine Owners' Association;

At a time when the strike seemed on the point of settlement, when martial law had been suspended, a dastardly dynamite outrage has been committed, by persons unknown, but to the evident delight of the Citizens' Alliance men, to whom it furnished a new pretext for persecution of the unions;

Immediately following on this, the Citizens' Alliance mob, under the direction of officers of the Mine Owners' Association, proceeded to deport still more union men and destroy and confiscate union property; then, by threat of instant hanging, they extorted the resignations of the regularly elected Sheriff, Coroner, Mayor, two City Marshals, a County Commissioner, and a Justice of the Peace; then martial law was again declared and the business men and thugs put on their blue coats; by military order the Portland mine (in which there had been no strike) was closed because it "incited to riot" by employing union men; the new "Coroner" picked a jury which obediently fixed the blame for the dynamite crime on union men; eighty-seven warrants for murder were issued, great numbers of union men were arrested; and, finally, it comes out that some of these prisoners were tortured in the "bull pen"—hung up by the thumbs—in the hope of wringing from them false confessions which could be used to railroad union officers to the gallows.

The daily press throughout the country, which represents the feelings of the propertied class, has—with very few exceptions—either positively approved this orgy of capitalist crime or, at best, half-heartedly criticized it and excused it by lies about the alleged misdeeds of the trade unions. If the capitalists succeed in Colorado, if the workingmen of the rest of the country do not protest and come to the aid of their Colorado brothers with financial and moral and political support, there need not be the slightest doubt that a similar movement of reaction will be undertaken in California or Illinois or Alabama or New York or wherever the organized employers may next see their chance. Brothers, East and West, South and North, this is your fight. It is not a question to interest only miners in the Rocky Mountains, but a question for workingmen of every trade in every State. And every day that we remain inactive is a day lost to us, a day gained for the gathering forces of oppression. Now is the time to think and speak and act.

"Labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves much the highest consideration."

* * *

A man with an income of a million a year eats the whole fruit of 6,000 men's labor through a whole year, for you can get a stout spadesman to work and maintain himself for a sum of $200. Thus we have private individuals whose wages are equal to the wages of 7,000 or 8,000 other individuals. What do these highly paid individuals do for society for their wages? Kill partridges. Can this last? No, by the soul of man, it cannot, and will not, and shall not.—Thomas Carlyle.

A Handy Square.

BY D. L. STODDARD.

THE two-foot square and one-and-one-half foot tongue, is, in my opinion, the only real full-sized carpenters' square on the market.

yet it is too clumsy to be much admired by the ordinary carpenter. To meet the demand I cut the tongue of my square off to twelve inches and made a $\frac{3}{4}$ by 4-inch slot in it and find it a very handy, all-around square.

Practical Wood Carving.

BY FRED T. HODGSON.

CONTINUING our work on leaves, I offer another example of English ivy and stem, which may be found some-pattern as shown in the illustration, then take the parting tool and work out the outlines of the leaves and stems, and then with tools of the proper shape and the mallet set in the lines made with the parting tool; that is, deepen the lines to full depth, or nearly so; then cut away all the portions of the design between the spray and the outside mouldings with hollow tools. The ground work of the design should be about one-quarter or three-eighths of an inch deep. A "router" will be found the most convenient instrument for regulating the depth. The cutter of the "router" should be set to the depth required and then by pressing it firmly and working it sharply backwards and forwards a level ground will be obtained.

In setting down the outlines of the leaves, etc., it will be better to cut outside the lines, and care should be taken to cut down perpendicularly; otherwise, if the leaves are undercut, the shape will be spoiled when they come to be finished. Bent flat tools are used for clearing away the wood that can not be got at with the "router."

When the ground work has been so far finished, a commencement should be made in forming the moulding and roughly shaping and giving the required turns to the leaves and stem, but no finishing touches should be put in until the whole design has been gone over in this manner. It is better in doing this to use hollow tools only, leaving the flat tools to finish off the work with. Of course, in setting in the outline, the tools that are of the proper sweep to fit the lines should be used.

But in this day of short jobs and small tool boxes and condensed kit of tools, the square is the biggest nuisance the carpenter has to contend with. To overcome this inconvenience many inventions have been made, yet very little really accomplished. The folding square is the most condensed form, Illustrations from 1 to 11 show how to space joint, studding, etc., from 4 to 24 inches by aid of slot without any reference to the figures on the square. The other illustration shows how the small space can be so conveniently used. I often wonder now how I ever got along without it.

what easier to carve than the preceding ones. Let us suppose Figure 32 to

When all the design has been carefully gone over, as above described, there now remains only the last process to go through, and we begin this by first of all carefully finishing the moulding, which in this case is simply a flat hollow, and then proceed to carefully finish off the leaves and stem, and rectify any little irregularities that are in the groundwork. In doing this we shall find the advantage of the frequent use of a hard brush to brush out the small chips. When this is done we commence to use a punch for the ground work until it has all been gone over, and then the veins of the leaves require to be put in with a veneer, and the stems require to be roughed, so as to give natural appearance to the work. The various tools have been previously described, and it will be found that about eighteen will be necessary to work out this design. When the work is finished it can be either brushed over with boiled linseed oil or it can be left plain, at the taste of the carver, but sand paper should on no account be used. Figure 33 shows a portion of the design when in its finished state.

In finishing off the work outlines frequently have to be rectified and alterations made, that are not noticed as being defective when the work is blocked out. When setting in the outlines of a panel, for instance, it is better to avoid cutting too deeply, otherwise the groundwork presents a surface defaced with tool marks after the out-ally, are essential to our existence; but when utility is combined with beauty, and we have the work of our hands—upon which many hours of loving labor have been expended—constantly brought before us, and when it is, moreover, being constantly admired by those whose admiration it is our ambition to win, our reward is ten times the greater.

Bearing this in mind, we have this month set our wood-carvers a little task—not too difficult—the object of which is the decoration of an article without which no meal table could be complete. No matter whether it be breakfast, lunch, tea, dinner or supper, the bread board must be on the table in many homes, and it is to the bread-board that our young carvers should devote their attention this month along with the other things served to them.

lines have been corrected, and it is not always easy to efface these marks, even when the ground is punched. In shaping a design, however, it is a good plan to use the tools boldly, and cut clean; instead of which many beginners will make a dozen cuts where one would suffice.

For this, and some other designs shown in these papers, I am indebted to "Rambler," who contributed several chapters on "Carving" to "The National Builder," some time ago, and who is a practical workman.

Fig. 35

An excellent and useful article, within the scope of any ordinary workmen, is a carved bread board. This is an article of every-day use, and it is fitting that every carpenter or joiner should own one of his own make, which should decorate his table at every meal. Things of beauty, upon which we may look even only occasion-

Good, dry, white, maple, makes an excellent board, and is good material to work. Beech, birch, or sycamore, also make good boards, but, for myself, I prefer the maple. The board should be about fifteen inches in diameter when finished, the margin taking off about 5½ inches, leaves the cutting board about 9½ inches in diameter. The board should be "chucked" to a face-plate of a lathe, and properly turned to the dimensions and shape required before any carving is done on it. This, of course, will occur to the young workman, but is just as well to state it.

It is desirable that the decoration of any article should as far as possible be indicative of the uses for which it is designed, an ornament which possesses some meaning as distinct from that designed to please the eye alone—is far more likely to retain its interest. So, for the embellishment of a bread board, wheat naturally suggests itself, while the poppy is not an unsuitable accompaniment. The center is left perfectly plain for the simple reason that, if it were carved, the carving would very soon suffer from the incursions of the bread knife, and, ere long, become unrecognizable.

The mention of the bread knife reminds us that it must not be forgotten, so we must now take that into consideration. With the blade, of course, we can have nothing to do in this connection so far as decoration is concerned, but the handle does come into our domain, and a suggestion for its treatment is appended as seen at Figure 37.

Bread knives in these days, having wooden handles, are rapidly being superseded—more the pity—by the wire-handle, saw-bladed monstrosity. But, it has ever been the way, "the old must give way to the new" for a time at least.

treat of screw-cutting, but rather of screw-driving in wood-work, and to throw out some useful hints to the building constituency, and particularly workmen. The use and abuse of screws is a matter of importance to architects, builders, and their clients, for it is according to the way screws may be applied in several building and kindred operations that good or bad workmanship will be evidenced.

Screws are more extensively used than formerly in putting together various kinds of wood framing, and even in cabinet and chair work, screws are pressed into service in places where their use would not have been tolerated by manufacturers in the earlier portion of the present century; much of this is due to the invention of the gimlet pointed screw. Although their existence is generally concealed in furniture and fancy work, they are often present, nevertheless, and too often they are used as a substitute for dowels, dovetails and tenons in the manufacture of cheap work. It is an instructive and remarkable fact that building workmen of a century or two back, in many operations in carpentry and joinery, discarded, as far as possible, the use of nails and screws, depended more on carefully joined work, put together by means of mortise, tenon, dovetail, hardwood dowel, or oaken pin. Their work might have taken a longer time to execute than that done by our present race of joiners and wood-worker, but it was infinitely more lasting, and kept together so long as the timber or wood continued sound. The nearly universal remedy now for every broken article on the part of the jobbing joiner and cab-

I close this chapter with an illustration of a small mantel for a bedroom, in the new art style, Figure 38. The tulips shown on the wide fascia may be carved and planted on, or they may be incised. The birds at the angles are in relief, but they may be dispensed with and other ornaments substituted. This is quite a dainty piece of work, but may be easily made.

The Use and Abuse of Screws in Woodwork.

Archimedes is credited with the invention of the screw, but whether the famous geometrician's labors extended much further than the enunciation of the scientific principles and the mechanical power of the screw, it is difficult to say. If he made a screw, he certainly must have tried its effect, and was probably well pleased with its performance, for in the whole range of mechanical appliances in the constructive arts there is not a more useful article than the screw. Archimedes is further reported to have said, "Give me a fulcrum, a position, and a lever strong enough, and I will move the world," and, no doubt, if these conditions could be granted to him, he, as well as others after him, could lift the earth, or aught upon the earth, by combination of the tremendous lifting and driving powers exercised by a series of screws, apart from the lever. Screws are various, and of various sizes, forms and materials, but the same principle runs through them all, whether they be manufactured for use in metal or wood-work or for expecting a lifting, driving, or pressing power separately. Our object here is not to inetmaker is to repair it with the aid of a nail or screw, or where it will exercise little sustaining power, and colored putty is only made to cover the heads of sunken nails and screws on the face of a piece of work, but used also to hide bad joints and workmanship. Some years ago the writer examined an old cabinet staircase and hand-rail in a college, which work was executed more than two centuries since, and in the construction of which not a nail nor a screw was used. From time to time, over long years, some slight repairs were made, but the workmen during their operations were never able to discover that a nail had been used in the original construction. There were mortises and tenons, grooves and tonguing, wooden pins or dowel work, but no iron fastenings of any kind. The writer also examined more than one old roof in which the use of iron spikes, nails and other iron fastenings were dispensed with, and the joining of the timber was effected without their aid. In the hinging of doors and other frame work it is necessary to use screws, but, unfortunately, many workmen, if not watched or cautioned, will not do the screwing properly or in a workmanlike manner. In pine, and other soft woods a bradawl is sufficient to make an opening for the screw, which opening, of course, should be less than the thickness of the body, and short of the length of the screws used. It will be found, however, that most workmen, not content with tapping the screw a fourth of an inch or so to give it a hold before applying the screw-driver, will actually drive the screw into the wood two-thirds of its length with the hammer. This the workmen will do to save themselves trouble. If there be two hinges upon a door, and if each hinge has eight screw holes—four in each plate—the chances are that the workmen will drive half of the screws nearly home in the doorsill and frame with his hammer rather than take the trouble of driving them gradually home with a screw-driver. Hence, if the door be a massive or heavy one, the weight of it will tend to the hinges loosening, and after a time will follow a train of other ills—the “dragging” and “rubbing” of doors, and their makeshift cure is what is known as “easing” them. If remonstrated with for driving a screw nearly home with the hammer, the workman may probably say (as some workmen certainly think) that a few turns of the screw in the wood are sufficient. This is an erroneous, and mistaken idea. A screw that is nearly home with the hammer, can not make a regular and corresponding thread or spiral in the wood, and therefore its binding and maintaining power in keeping the hinge in its place is all but gone. Workmen should be made to drive every screw home gradually with the screw-driver, and not only an odd one. In hardwood operations as well as in soft woods, particularly in hinge work, screws should be properly driven, and the aperture or opening made for the passage of the screws should be much less than the thickness of the screw to be driven. The screw will bite a sufficient passage for itself. In hard wood, however, it is necessary to give a little more freedom of entry to the screw than in soft wood, and a gimlet bit is needed for making the suitable opening instead of the bradawl.

A difficulty is often experienced by persons who wish to withdraw a screw, by finding that though it will turn round under the application of the screw-driver, it will not unscrew out. In this case a well-grounded suspicion may be entertained that the screw in question was driven, or nearly driven, home originally by the hammer, instead of gradually by the screw-driver, and that no regular thread corresponding with the screw exists in the wood. Under such circumstances it becomes necessary often to wrench off the hinge or hinges by force, at the risk of the breaking, and this often happens. When hinges have lain undisturbed for years on old doors or other framings, perhaps for a quarter of a century, or double that time, it becomes difficult to extract screws, although they may have originally been properly driven. This arises from the screws rusting in the wood and sometimes from other causes. Workmen themselves often fail to withdraw a screw and are forced to break the hinge to enable them to get under the head of the screw, and wrench it out. They often split and break, too, fancy and delicate woodwork articles in their efforts to take off hinges, locks, mountings and other finishings, despite that simple methods exist for extracting screws that have rusted in the wood. One of the most simple and readiest methods for loosening a rusted screw is to apply heat to the head of the screw. A small bar or rod of iron, flat at the end, if reddened in the fire and applied to the head of the rusted screw, as soon as it heats the screw, render its withdrawal as easy by the screw-driver as if it were only a recently inserted screw. As there is a kitchen poker in every house, that instrument, if heated at its extremity, and applied for a few minutes to the head of the screw or screws, will do the required work of loosening, and an ordinary screw-driver will do the rest without causing the least damage, trouble or vexation of spirit. In all work above the common kind, where it is necessary to use screws, and particularly in hinge work and mountings, fancy fastenings and appliances affixed to joinery or furniture work, we would advise the oiling of screws or the dipping their points in grease before driving them. This will render them more easy to drive and also to withdraw, and will undoubtedly retard for a longer time the action of rusting.

As matters obtain now in carpentry, joinery, furniture, and other wood workmanship, with regard to screws, although they can not be dispensed with, yet it would be advisable in sundry classes of wood-work to minimize their use, and in other cases to do without them altogether. They can seldom be used with advantage to the displacement of mortise and tenon or good dovetail or dowel work. The growing practice of putting together wood with screws bespeaks a decadence of skilled labor, and of nails and screws there are far too many pressed into service in workshops and dwellings. While admitting the usefulness of the screw in various ways, we have here endeavored briefly to show its abuse in wood-work, and at the same time to afford some hints for better methods of procedure in building and kindred workmanship.—The National Builder

Treatment for Typhoid.

Fruit juices—distilled water—fresh air—cleanliness—and quiet cheerfulness

Give enormous doses of each,

Orange juice is perhaps the most important of the fruit juices. Add the juice of half a lemon to each tumbler full of orange juice. Strain through cheese cloth, or an earthenware strainer—fruit juice should never come in contact with metal of any kind whatsoever.

Some of the old school physicians still cling to the theory that milk is essential in all cases of fever. It has been proven beyond doubt, however, that the giving of milk in such cases is a serious mistake.

Milk and beef tea keep up the patient's strength, but prolong the fever and make convalescence a period of long duration, and is very apt to leave a typhoid patient with some lingering ill effect of the disease.

In the fruit juice treatment, the patient may become very weak during the fever, but the period of fever is much shorter, convalescence much more rapid, and lingering ill effects never follow if common sense is used in choosing the patient's food during convalescence—and also in the choosing of the purest air obtainable for him to breathe—and inducing him to use wisdom in the matter of exercise—and in seeing that the mental atmosphere is well saturated with quiet cheerfulness.

All good doctors realize that medicine of any kind is worse than useless in the treatment of typhoid. They may give colored water or bread pills in cases where “faith cure” is advisable, but they never give “real” medicine for typhoid or pneumonia.

Did you ever notice that most men's ideas of justice generally are in harmony with their self interests?

The Moonlight Butcher.

BY D. L. STODDARD.

I know I am the luckiest man in town. While my Boss makes me work awful hard yet he lets me work as long as I please.

This has been the best week of my life. If the moon continues to shine I'll get in an even one hundred hours and my Boss will just fall dead when he has to go down and dig up Thirteen Dollars in cold cash to pay me for just one week's work.

That's the biggest week's wage I ever made.

Lucky! I should say I am! I know lots of fellers down at Parry's that don't make half that.

The Man in the Moon: It makes me smile to see that dunce down on the earth trying to build a house by moonlight.

The earth surely has some of the biggest fools in the universe.

Ein lächerliches Argument der organisierten Unternehmer.

Die Wortführer des organisierten Unternehmertums wollen nun herausgestellt haben, daß die Arbeiter-Organisationen dieses Landes nicht vierzehn Prozent der Lohnarbeiter repräsentieren. Sie stützen sich hierbei auf eine angebliche offizielle Angabe, wonach die Mitgliedschaft der American Federation of Labor etwas über eine Million betrage. Wie sie aber daraus folgern, daß die Zahl der nichtorganisierten Lohnarbeiter mehr den sechsundachtzig Prozent ausmache, auf welche statistische Erhebungen sie sich hier berufen, dies ist uns ein Räthsel. Die letzten Ausgaben des Ver. Staaten Census enthalten in dieser Beziehung keine Angaben die zuverlässig und umfassend genug wären um darauf fußen zu können. Auch die Thatfache, daß ja doch nicht alle organisierten Arbeiter der American Federation of Labor angehören, wie die Western Federation of Miners, Bridgelaier, Majors, die Locomotive Engineers, die Locomotive Firemen und Andere, scheinen diese Herren ganz zu übersehen.

Wie hoch sich aber auch der Prozentjah der organisierten oder nichtorganisierten Arbeiter thatsächlich belaufen möge, wollen wir dahingestellt sein lassen, den die organisierten Arbeiter geben ja frei und offen zu, daß die große Masse der Lohnarbeiter der Organisation noch fern steht, und sie nur eine Minderheit des großen Arbeiterheeres bilden.

Die Wortführer der organisierten Unternehmer benutzen aber diese von uns anerkannte Thatfache zu einem Versuche auf Grund derselben nachzuweisen und zu behaupten, daß diese Minderheit nicht den Willen und die Wünsche der Lohnarbeiter im Allgemeinen repräsentieren. — Es ist um die Hinfälligkeit dieser Behauptung bloß zu stellen, daß wir hier ein Wörtchen in dieser Frage mitreden wollen.

Wenn wir in Betracht ziehen, daß vor fünfzig Jahren nur sehr wenige Arbeiter-Organisationen bestanden, die meistens nur lokal organisiert waren und daß die größere Anzahl der heute bestehenden Arbeiter-Vereinigungen erst im Laufe der letzten fünfundsiebzig Jahre in's Leben gerufen wurden, so müssen wir zu dem Schlusse kommen, daß die Arbeiterbewegung dieses Landes verhältnismäßig noch sehr jung, daß der Wirkungskreis der Organisation noch ein beschränkter und ein großes Feld noch zu bearbeiten ist. Tausende von Arbeitern aller Berufsarten sind in die Bestrebungen der organisierten Arbeiter noch nicht eingeweiht, oder stehen der Organisation noch fern weil sie örtlicher Hindernisse halber noch nicht erreicht werden konnten.

Tausende anderer verspüren noch kein Bedürfnis für den Anschluß an eine Organisation, weil die in ihren Orten vorherrschenden unentwickelten industriellen Verhältnisse noch nicht die Kluft zwischen Lohnarbeiter und Unternehmer gebildet haben, wie solche in industriell entwickelten Städten oder Orten vorhanden ist; und Tausende andere unserer Klassengenossen, was besonders im Süden der Fall ist, sind ökonomisch und politisch so verblödet, daß es ihnen an jeder Widerstandskraft und der zu einem Organisations-Versuche notwendigen Energie gebricht. In Verbindung hiermit können wir darauf hinweisen, daß gerade der Vernichtungskampf den die organisierten Unternehmer gegenwärtig gegen die Organisationen in Scene gesetzt haben auf's unzweifelhafteste demonstriert, daß unsere Bewegung in den letzten Jahren riesige Fortschritte gemacht hat, die auf noch viel größere Machtentfaltung der Organisation und viel größere Erweiterung deren Wirkungskreises schließen läßt. Doch wir wollen bei der Sache bleiben und mit gegenwärtigen Verhältnissen rechnen.

Wenn behauptet wird, daß die organisierten Arbeiter nicht die große Masse der Lohnarbeiter repräsentieren, so ist dies doch sicherlich so zu verstehen, daß Lektüre mit den Forderungen Ersterer, die auf Verbesserung ihrer Lage hinführen, das heißt, mit deren Forderungen für höhere Löhne oder kürzere Arbeitszeit nicht einverstanden wären. Es sind doch nur solcher Forderungen halber die den Unternehmern an den Geldsack gehen, derentwegen sie die Arbeiter-Organisationen bekämpfen. Sie scheeren sich den Teufel um alle anderen Forderungen und Wünsche der organisierten Arbeiter; sie würden ihnen sogar bereitwillig selbst den geschlossenen Shop gewähren, vorausgesetzt daß sie billig genug arbeiten und sich täglich lange genug für sie abrackern würden, um ihre Gargier zu befriedigen. Und nun von der nicht organisierten Masse der Lohnarbeiter behaupten zu wollen, daß sie höhere Löhne und kürzere Arbeitszeit, als nicht von Nöthen und nicht ihren Wünschen entsprechen zurückweisen, wäre doch mindestens höchst lächerlich und widersinnig, da sie einer Verbesserung ihrer Lage viel mehr bedürftig sind als die organisierten Arbeiter.

Ebenso verhält es sich mit den, der Organisation nicht angehörenden Arbeitern an solchen Orten wo Obige bereits Boden gefaßt hat.

Wir wissen leider nur zu gut, daß die Wortheile, die durch die Organisation erungen werden, auch den Nicht-Mitgliedern zu Gute kommen und von ihnen stets auf's Freudigste begrüßt werden; umso mehr als sie sich durch ihre Theilnahmlosigkeit, wenn nicht Verrath, an den Berufs-Interessen, dem Aufwande irgend welcher Opfer und jeder Pflichterfüllung ihrerseits entzogen haben. Beispiele die demonstrieren wie sehr sich organisierte Arbeiter nach einer Verbesserung ihrer Lage sehnen, sind uns unzähligmale zu unserem Bedauern geboten worden indem, kaum organisiert, Forderungen gestellt wurden die, wenn auch noch so berechtigt aus Mangel an der nöthigen Schulung und den erforderlichen Kampfmitteln zu einer Niederlage führen mußten und geführt haben.

Die organisierte Minorität vertritt unwiderlegbar die Interessen und sogar die Wünsche der nicht organisierten Masse, und mögen dies die Unternehmer anerkennen oder nicht, sie müssen mit dieser Minorität rechnen.

Die Cultur-Geschichte aller Völker lehrt uns daß der Fall wo eine Minderheit für eine, ihre eigenen Interessen verkennende und daher unthätige Mehrheit in die Schranken trat, keineswegs vereinzelt dasteht. Alle Reformbewegungen die für das Schicksal eines Volkes oder Klasse ausschlaggebend waren und eine kulturhistorische Bedeutung erlangten, wurden von einer Minderheit, ja manchmal nur von Einzelnen, in's Leben gerufen, um schließlich doch von der Masse erfaßt und durchgekämpft zu werden. Den organisierten Unternehmern mag es wohl gelingen hier und da die Arbeiter durch Verfolgungen und Maßregeln einzuschüchtern und der Weiterentwicklung ihrer Organisation zeitweilig Hindernisse in den Weg zu legen. Doch wird der Vernichtungskampf den sie gegenwärtig gegen uns führen dazu beitragen, daß die gleichgültige Masse unserer Klassengenossen aus ihrer lethargie aufgerüttelt und den Unternehmern zeigen wird, daß die Ziele und Forderungen der organisierten Arbeiter auch die ihrigen sind.

Was Präsident Guerin über Fabrik- und Shop-Arbeiter zu sagen hat.

Der letzte, in der Mai-Nummer dieses Journals veröffentlichte Vierteljahrs-Bericht unseres Iten Vize-Präsidenten T. M. Guerin, enthält eine Stelle, welche sich auf Fabrik- und Shop-Arbeiter (mill hands) bezieht, die wir hier im Interesse der zahlreichen in Fabriken und Shops beschäftigten deutschredenden Mitglieder in deutscher Sprache wiedergeben wollen.

Guerin berichtet über seine Thätigkeit im nördlichen Theile des Staates New York und schließt seinen, an das Gen.-Ex.-Board gerichteten Bericht mit folgenden Bemerkungen:

„Ich bin der Ansicht, daß das G. E. W. keine von Fabrik- oder Shop-Arbeitern (mill hands) zu stellende Forderung genehmigen sollte, es sei den daß deren Organisation ebenso weit gediehen ist wie die der „Outside“-Arbeiter. Wir sollten von den Carpenters (outside men) verlangen, daß sie unseren in Fabriken und Shops beschäftigten Mitgliedern mehr Interesse entgegenbringen und ihnen mehr und thatkräftigen Beistand leisten.

Möge der Zeitpunkt bald herannahen wo wir die Wichtigkeit der Fabrik-Zustände und die stamme Organisation unserer darin beschäftigten Mitglieder voll und ganz erkannt haben. Geht mir eine Stadt wo die Fabrik- und Shop-Arbeiter acht Stunden, und anderweitig unter zufriedenstellenden Bedingungen arbeiten und ich zeige Euch eine Stadt wo auch die Lage der Carpenters („Outside“-Arbeiter) eine günstige ist und sie das Gewerkschaftskontrollieren.“

Diese Worte verdienen sehr der Beachtung und Berücksichtigung, besonders der „Outside“-Arbeiter.

Die scheußlichen Zustände in Colorado.

Wir erwarten daß unsere Mitglieder durch die tägliche und wöchentliche Arbeiterpresse über die jüngsten Gewaltstreiche der Citizens Alliance in Cripple Creek, Victor und andere Orten des Staates Colorado, unterrichtet sind. Wir erwarten ebenfalls, daß sie sich durch das Dynamit-Attentat in Independence nicht irreführen lassen werden. Es wäre nicht das erste Mal daß Gewaltthäter zur Inszenierung solcher Attentate gegriffen hätten, um dieselben den Unterdrückten in die Schuhe schieben zu können und ihnen damit die Sympathie des Publikums zu entziehen. Die Western Miners-Federation lehnt nicht nur jede Verantwortung für das Attentat ab, sondern hat auch eine Belohnung von 5000 Dollars auf die Ermittlung der Thäter gesetzt.

Die verbündeten Unternehmer Colorado's und der ihnen botmäßige Gouverneur Peabody, sowie Militz-General Bell haben nun Monate lang die Rechte und Freiheiten der Arbeiter und des Volkes in unerhörter Weise mit Füßen getreten. Sie haben Handlungen an den Vergleuten und den mit ihnen sympathisierenden Bürger begangen, die so scheußlich sind, daß sie sich dadurch zu gemeinen Verbrechern stampeln. Wenn sich die Arbeiter dieses Landes nicht endlich aufrufen und den Vergleuten Colorado's zu Hülfe eilen, so liegt die Gefahr nahe, daß die brutale Gewaltherrschaft die gegenwärtig in jenem Staate ihre Orgien feiert, auch anderswo Nachahmung finden wird.

Die Zustände in Colorado sollten jedem einzelnen Arbeiter ein warnendes Beispiel sein, daß sie zu einheitlicherem und energischerem Handeln auf ökonomischem wie auf politischem Gebiete, vor Allem aber zur thatkräftigen Unterstützung ihrer, um ihre Rechte als Arbeiter und Bürger kämpfenden Brüder Colorado's, anspornen sollte.

Unarchie.

Die kapitalistische Produktionsweise arbeitet nicht für den Bedarf der Menschen an Lebensgütern, sondern für das Bedürfnis der Unternehmer nach Profit. Sie arbeitet nicht nach einem großangelegten Plan, bei dem die Größe der Produktion angepaßt wird der Größe des Bedarfes, sondern die Zu- oder Abnahme der Produktion richtet sich nach den vagen Annahmen der Unternehmer über die wahrscheinliche Aufnahmefähigkeit des Marktes. Der Widerspruch, der dann zwischen der Größe der Produktion und dem thatsächlichen Bedarf eintritt, erhält seinen Ausdruck in der Krise, wenn sich herausstellt, daß zu viel Produkte, zu wenig Abnehmer vorhanden sind. Dann erfolgt der Rückschlag, die Zerstörung der Werthe, die Betriebsreduktionen, die BetriebsEinstellungen, und die Arbeiter, die in den Zeiten des wilden Aufschwungs zu wohnsinniger Ueberarbeit und zur Ver- ausgabung ihrer letzten Kräfte angetrieben werden, finden dann keine Arbeit, sie müssen hungern, weil sie zu viel Arbeit geleistet haben.

In früheren Jahren, wo England noch das einzige Zentrum der industriellen Thätigkeit war, zeitigte der Wahnsinn des Kapitalismus nur ungefähr alle zehn Jahre eine solche Periode der Krise. Heute, wo mit England auch Deutschland und Nordamerika erfolgreich konkurrieren, ereignen sich solche Zustände alle paar Jahre bald in dieser, bald in jener Industrie. Gerade jetzt befindet sich die Baumwollindustrie in einem solch krisenhaften Zustand. Die Jahre 1897 und 1898 waren Jahre ganz außerordentlicher Baumwollernten. Der Ertrag der Ernten war von 7½ Millionen Ballen auf mehr als 11½ Millionen gestiegen. Der Preis der Baumwolle sank daher sehr stark und dies hatte zwei entgegengesetzte Wirkungen. Der niedrige Preis der Baumwolle machte die Verspinnung der Baumwolle sehr rentabel. Es wurden daher Hals über Kopf die Spinnereien erweitert, neue Fabriken gebaut, die Profite stiegen in's Ungemessene. Diese Erweiterung in der Industrie ging namentlich in den Vereinigten Staaten vor sich, wo noch dazu die Schutzollpolitik Mac Kintleys diese Gründungen begünstigte. Die Vereinigten Staaten, die bisher den größten Theil ihrer Baumwolle exportiert hatten, begannen sie nun selbst zu verarbeiten. Aber die niedrigen Preise der Baumwolle, die den Spinnern nügen, schaden den Baumwollpflanzern. Sie konnten bei den niedrigen Preisen ihre Kosten nicht hereinbringen. Sie reduzierten daher die Anbaufläche der Baumwolle, gerade zu einer Zeit, wo die Spinnereien auf größere Ertragnisse der Baumwolle sich einrichteten. Dazwischen kam im Jahre 1899 noch eine Misere und am Ende des Jahres 1900 war nur ein Vorrath von 784,000 Ballen vorhanden, so daß eine normale Produktion kaum aufrecht erhalten werden konnte. Wenn auch der Ertrag der Baumwollernte in den nächsten Jahren wieder stieg und im heurigen Jahre auf einen Mindestertrag von 11 Millionen Ballen gerechnet wird, so ist doch mittlerweile die Anzahl der Spindeln so gekiegen, daß überhaupt nicht genug Baumwolle geliefert werden kann, um sie voll zu beschäftigen, und daß um die knappen Vorräthe wahre Kämpfe entziehen, die sich in Preissteigerungen ausdrücken. Im Jahre 1902 kam neuerdings eine Mißernte, die die Preise noch höher trieb. Je höher aber die Preise der Baumwolle steigen, desto theurer werden die aus ihr hergestellten Produkte, und während die Spinner sich um die Baumwolle raufen, wird das Produkt, das sie herstellen wollen, unverkäuflich. Dabei steht diese Steigerung der Produktion in gar keinem Verhältnis zu dem Bedarf. Es gibt allerdings genug Leute, welche sehr froh wären, wenn ihnen Kleider zur Verfügung gestellt würden. Aber die heutige Produktionsweise rechnet nicht mit dem tatsächlichen Bedarf, sondern mit dem Bedarf der kaufkräftigen Leute, und dieser ist ein viel geringerer als die vorhandenen Vorräthe. Dabei werden schon deshalb nicht größere Mengen verkauft, weil alles auf ein Herabgehen der Preise rechnet.

Die geringen Vorräthe an Baumwolle treiben aber die wahnsinnigsten Spekulationen und Preistreiberien hervor und diese vollständige Unordnung in der ganzen Produktion führt zu den furchterlichsten Folgen. In England stehen an zwei Tagen in der Woche 75 Prozent aller Spindeln still. In Amerika werden Fabriken überhaupt auf Wochen hinaus geschlossen und die Arbeiter dem Hunger überlassen. Auch in den Kreisen der österreichischen Baumwollindustrie beschäftigt man sich mit ähnlichen Plänen. Auch hier soll die Produktion reduziert werden.

Einen solchen Wahnsinn zeitigt die kapitalistische Produktionsanarchie. Alles scheint auf dem Kopfe zu stehen. Millionen Menschen haben keine ordentlichen Kleider, weil sie kein Geld haben, um sie sich anzuschaffen, dafür aber gibt es hunderte von Fabriken, die ihren Betrieb einstellen müssen, weil sie kein Rohprodukt zu Preisen bekommen, bei denen ihre Waaren verkäuflich wären, und ein paar Spekulanten ziehen aus diesem Wirrwarr ihren Nutzen, indem die einen mit der Steigerung der Preise rechnen und die geringen Vorräthe zurückhalten, die anderen mit einem zukünftigen Fallen der Preise spekulieren und Waaren verkaufen, die sie gar nicht liefern können. Dazu müssen Arbeiter hungern und finden keine Beschäftigung, und dieses ungeheure Durcheinander nennt sich dann eine „von Gott gewollte Ordnung.“

Beantragte Veränderungen und Zusätze zur General-Constitution.

Local-Union 426, Los Angeles, Cal.

Von der Ansicht ausgehend, daß unsere Prinzipien gegenüber dem selbstmörderischen Gebahren der Nicht-Mitglieder nur dann gewissenshaft hoch gehalten werden können, wenn wir alle Vorsichtsmaßregeln ergreifen um der Wiederaufnahme von Ex-Mitgliedern, die sich als Verräther erwiesen haben, vorzubeugen, empfehlen wir nachstehendes Amendement zur Gen. Local-Union 1560, Kingston, N. Y.

In der Ueberzeugung, daß eine große Mehrheit unserer Mitglieder kein direktes Interesse hegt für die Liste der Finanz- und Protokoll-Sekretäre und diese Liste werthvollen Raum in unserem offiziellen Journal beansprucht, welcher besser und mehr im Interesse unserer Organisation verwendet werden könnte, und in Anbetracht, daß diese Liste beständig an Umfang zunimmt, empfehlen die Mitglieder der Local-Union 1560, Kingston, N. Y., folgende Constitutions-Veränderung:

Sekt. 25 (b). Der G. S. soll, während den Monaten Januar und Juli eine Liste der Finanz- und Protokoll-Sekretäre aller L. U.'s, unter Angabe ihrer Adressen und ihres D. Resolutionen.

Local-Union 807, Toluca, M.

I.

In Erwägung: daß das offizielle Journal der B. B. „The Carpenter“ ein notwendiges Medium im Verkehr der Gen. Offize mit den Local-Unions und eine für das Gedeihen unserer Organisation sehr wichtige Institution ist; und

In Erwägung: daß der B. B. weder Presse noch andere Druck-Mensilien zur Verfügung stehen und daher unser Journal von einer Drucker-Firma hergestellt werden muß, sei Beschlossen: Die Delegaten zur Milwaukee-Convention sind ersucht, ihren Einfluß dahin geltend zu machen, daß die Convention Mittel und Wege beschaffe für den Druck des Journals in einer, der B. B. unterstehenden Druckerei.

II.

Die Delegaten zur Milwaukee Convention sind ersucht, letztere von der Nothwendigkeit zu überzeugen, daß geeignetere Regeln für den Gebrauch des B. B. Union-Labels, bei Material für Gebäude festgesetzt werden, und daß das Label für alle Carpentearbeit gewährt wird, welche bei neunstündiger Arbeit hergestellt wurde; unter der Bedingung jedoch, daß in diesen Fällen die Arbeitszeit innerhalb eines Jahres, von der Zeit der Gewährung des Labels an gerechnet, auf acht Stunden reduziert werden muß.

III.

Die Delegaten zur Milwaukee-Convention sind ferner ersucht, dafür einzutreten:

1. Daß Sektion 43 der Gen.-Constitution, welche vorschreibt, daß in einer Stadt wo zwei oder mehr Local-Unions bestehen, dieselben in einem Distrikt-Council vertreten sein müssen, strikt durchgeführt werde und daß dieser D. C. die Lohnscala, die Arbeitszeit, die Organisation neuer Local-Unions und andere wichtige Angelegenheiten innerhalb seines Wirkungskreises überwachen soll.

2. Daß die Mitgliederzahl des Gen. Executiv-Board von 7 auf 11 erhöht und die Ver. Staaten in zehn Distrikte eingetheilt werden. Ein Mitglied soll je einen der zehn Distrikte repräsentieren, und das elfte Mitglied den Distrikt of Columbia, die Dominion of Canada, Porto Rico und die Hawaiianischen Inseln.

IV.

In Erwägung: Daß Carpenters, welche in und in der Nähe von Bergwerken arbeiten, gehalten sind den United Mine Workers, und an Orten wo eine Local-Union der B. B. besteht, zugleich auch letzterer Organisation anzugehören; sei

Beschlossen: Die Mitglieder der L. U. 806, welche unter der Jurisdiktion der United Mine Workers arbeiten, ersuchen die Convention die nöthigen Schritte zu thun, damit Mitglieder, die wie oben erwähnt beschäftigt sind, nicht gezwungen werden können den Mine Workers anzugehören, wenn am betreffenden Orte eine Local-Union der B. B. besteht; und sei es ferner Beichlossen; Die Gen.-Beamten der B. B. sollen die Vertreter der United Mine Workers zu einer Conferenz einladen, um diese Angelegenheit zur Zufriedenheit aller Betheiligten, zu regeln.

Die Nebelung der englischen Gewerkschaften, wie sie in den letzten Jahren durch die bekannten Entschiedenheiten der Gerichte, die Organisationen der Arbeiter für durch Ausstände verursachte wirtschaftliche Schädigungen den betreffenden Unternehmern gegenüber ersatzpflichtig zu machen, immer bedrohlicher wurde, ist durch die Annahme der Trades-Union-Bill so gut wie beseitigt worden. Das neue Gewerkschaftsgesetz fand im Unterhause mit 39 Stimmen Mehrheit Annahme. Der Tasse-Bale-Entscheid und dessen Nachfolgen wären damit also fast gänzlich aufgehoben!

Eine internationale Schneider-Konferenz wird Anfangs August, anschließend an eine, am 6ten August zusammen tretende Konferenz der Schneider Deutschlands, in Dresden stattfinden. Als einziger Punkt der Tagesordnung ist die Frage aufgestellt: „Unsere bisherigen internationalen Beziehungen und deren weitere Ausbildung.“

In Prag, (Böhmen,) sind die Tischler schon über sechs Monate lang gegen die Wieder-Einführung des Neunstundentages im Auslande und stehen heute noch so fest wie am ersten Tage trotz den Bemühungen der Arbeitgeber durch allerlei schöne Versprechungen Zerpfitterung unter den Ausstehenden hervorgerufen und trotz den fortwährenden Chikanen der Polizei.

Wenn wir eine Niederlage erlitten, so stellt sich unter unseren Mitgliedern gewöhnlich Muthlosigkeit und Gleichgültigkeit ein. Dadurch wird die Wirkung einer Niederlage noch verschlimmert. Frisch an's Werk, um die Scharte auszuweichen muß hier unsere Loosung sein.

L'Atelier Ouvert.

Si jamais une phrase hypocrite a été lancée, ce fut celle de l'atelier ouvert (open shop). La presse patronale raconte à ses lecteurs que la tyrannie ouvrière et unioniste ne permettait pas au travailleur non organisé, de gagner sa vie; par suite de l'atelier organisé sous le règlement, de la chambre syndicale ces pauvres gens sont condamné à la mort par la faim, eux et leurs familles, et avec véhémence ils réclament le droit au travail pour tous. Sous une apparence plausible pour tous, qui ne comprennent pas les tendances de l'union ouvrière il est avéré que le travailleur organisé doit être un tyran, un usurpateur, qui cherche à monopoliser le marché du travail pour lui et quelques favorisés seulement. Ces braves gens oublient ou ignorent, que la plupart des chambres syndicales envoient, à grands frais des organisateurs à travers le pays, dans chaque ville, chaque petit bourg, afin d'amener les ouvriers de leur métier dans l'union. Si ces derniers finissent par comprendre leur intérêt, en joignant l'union, ils ont tout l'avantage que l'organisation procure à ses membres, sans avoir à contribuer aux frais et dépenses faites antérieurement. Le premier avantage que l'on accorde à ces ouvriers est d'abord une augmentation de salaire. On n'a encore pu jusqu'à présent, nous prouver que les travailleurs non-organisés aient eu un salaire plus élevé que les membres de l'union. Ensuite, nous voyons à travers tout le pays que les métiers organisés travaillent d'une à deux heures de moins par jour que les ouvriers restant en dehors de l'union. C'est par millions de dollars que se chiffrent les sommes dépensées par les chambres syndicales de ce pays, dans le but de réduire les heures de travail. Si par hasard le patron, employant des ouvriers non-syndiqués, réduit le nombre des heures de travail, il s'empresera vivement de rogner leur salaire du montant équivalent. De sorte que "augmentation de salaire et réduction des heures de travail, sans compter bon nombre d'autres avantages, est synonyme avec l'atelier organisé."

Seul l'organisation ouvrière a pu, jusqu'à présent arracher de par la force de l'union quelques lambeaux de bien être à la rapacité patronale.

Nous comprenons donc fort bien que ces Messieurs préfèrent de beaucoup n'avoir à faire qu'à des malheureux qui ne comprennent pas la valeur d'une union. On ne pouvait pas évidemment interdire l'union, comme tel. C'eût été contre la loi, et comme le travailleur est généralement aussi électeur, il aurait pu, en cette dernière qualité, se fâcher un jour et renvoyer à ses foyers domestiques ces législateurs maladroits. De sorte que la question fut posée de cette manière hypocrite. Nous avons rien à dire contre l'union, nous n'empêchons personne d'aller joindre celle-ci mais nous ne permettons pas à la chambre syndicale de forcer les non-organisés à joindre leurs unions. "Voilà le grand mot; en autres termes, cela veut dire." Nous admettons que, par satisfaire à vos plaisirs, que vous ayez une union, mais nous ne voulons pas en subir les conséquences. Ne demandez rien, soyez satisfaits du salaire que nous vous payons, travaillez autant d'heures par jour que notre intérêt vous impose, soyez, "unionmen, en dehors de l'atelier mais une fois à la besogne laissez votre union en dehors."

Autant fonder des pinacles clubs.

Si nous admettrions la théorie patronale nous verrions bientôt le "open shop" fermé pour les membres de l'union et ouvert seulement pour les scabs et les "blacklegs." Comme nous l'avons démontré dans notre dernier article, cette question est pareille à tout autre question ouvrière. C'est une affaire de force et de droit, et non pas de sentiment. Ou nous sommes assez fort, pour dire au patron, "nous voulons bien travailler pour toi, mais à condition que tu n'emploie que des membres de notre union," ou le patron sait qu'il peut se passer de nous, et n'emploiera donc que des non-organisés.

Mais si malheureusement, le patronat gagnera ce point sur nous, d'avoir assez d'ouvriers opposés à la chambre syndicale, nous serions à plaindre. L'exemple de la tolérance patronale nous est donné en ce moment dans l'état de Colorado. Pour soutenir la thèse de l'atelier ouvert on emprisonne, on déporte et on fusille les membres de l'union ouvrière. Les patrons défendent à leurs ouvriers de s'organiser et eux mêmes forment une alliance civile, "dans le but avéré, de commettre des crimes de tout espèce contre des citoyens américains, que n'ont fait autre chose que d'user du droit d'organisation que la constitution leur a accordé."

On vous dira peut-être, que ce qui se passe au Colorado est un cas exceptionnel. Que l'on se détrompe. A-t-on entendu depuis un an que cette injustice esciste, qu'une seule main gouvernementale, ou patronale se serait levée pour la défense des droits de union? Bien au contraire la réinstallation du shop ouvert fut proclamé par le chef du gouvernement à Washington, et les intentions patronales haïeuses contre l'union ouvrière est prêché ouvertement par les Parry et les Davenport.

C'est donc la lutte contre les ateliers ouverts que nous devons prêcher. On est avec nous, ou on est contre nous. Dans cette question comme dans toutes les autres il n'y a pas de milieu. Celui qui n'est pas notre ami, est forcément notre ennemi. Camarades, attention! faisons la guerre à l'atelier ouvert. Son introduction sera la mort de l'union ouvrière.

L'Exposition de Saint Louis.

Le Parlement vient de voter un crédit de 200,000 francs pour aider les associations ouvrière de production à exposer à votre grande exposition internationale et permettre aussi l'envoi de délégués ouvriers pour y étudier les progrès de l'industrie. On dit également que la ville de Paris se dispose à faire quelques sacrifices dans le même but.

La loi de 10 Heures.

C'est aujourd'hui, 1. Avril, qu'elle est définitivement en application la loi fixant la durée du travail dans les établissements mixtes, loi dont je vous ai longuement entretenus dans mes précédents correspondances. On craint quelque résistance des patrons dans certain régions; mais partout les ouvriers sont formellement résolus à engager la bataille. Je vous tiendrai au courant des incidents qui ne vont pas manquer de surgir.

PARIS, le 1. Avril, 1904.

La Journée de 10 Heures.

J'ai exposé dans de précédents numéros du CARPENTER, qu'elles étaient les dispositions légales qui régissaient la durée de la journée de travail en France; j'ai expliqué qu'à partir du 1. avril ces dispositions entreraient entièrement et définitivement en vigueur, et qu'un mouvement gréviste considérable était à prévoir pour empêcher les patrons de frustrer les ouvriers d'une partie des bénéfices qu'ils sont en droit d'en escompter. C'est ce qui n'a pas manqué de se produire. Mais ce sont presque exclusivement les ouvriers du textile qui sont entrés en lutte.

Dans son esprit le législateur avait bien entendu que la réduction de la journée de travail s'opérerait sans aucune diminution de salaire et le Congrès de la Fédération textile avait bien décidé l'année dernière de s'opposer à toute autre façon d'interpréter la loi, mais la grève victorieuse soutenue par les ouvriers d'Armentières et d'Huplines à la fin de l'année dernière incita la Fédération des tisseurs à engager l'action sur de nouvelles bases. Non seulement les ouvriers d'Armentières ont obtenu l'application de la loi avant son échéance, mais encore une augmentation de 8% sur les prix de main-d'œuvre qui assure en même temps une amélioration de leurs salaires. Seulement la convention établie par la commission mixte patronale et ouvrière stipule que si au 1. juin, 1904, les tisseurs ne sont pas parvenus à faire accepter cette augmentation dans toute la région, les patrons reprendront leur liberté d'action. C'est donc ce même traitement que les tisseurs de Lille, Roubaix, Vourcoing, Amiens, etc., réclament depuis le 1. avril ainsi que l'établissement d'un tarif de main-d'œuvre par les soins d'une commission mixte patronale et ouvrière. Sur le refus des patrons, la grève a été déclarée et, depuis, toute la région du Nord est occupée militairement. Le nombre des grévistes a un moment dépassé le chiffre de 50,000. Pour soutenir leurs collègues en lutte, les ouvriers d'Armentières ont décidé de verser le produit de leur augmentation de salaire dans la caisse des grévistes, soit 12,000 francs par semaine.

Depuis cette époque, la bataille se poursuit âprement avec des hauts et des bas. Les patrons sont fortement unis et marchent la main dans la main. De leur côté les ouvriers vont au combat avec entrain, malheureusement leur condition misérable les met en moins bonne posture que leurs adversaires pour une résistance prolongée, aussi ne semble-t-il pas qu'ils finissent par avoir gain de cause pour toutes leurs réclamations. Alors que les ouvriers demandent instantanément que les négociations soient poursuivies entre délégués patronaux et délégués des syndicats ouvriers, les industriels s'abstiennent à ne vouloir traiter qu'avec leurs propres ouvriers et fixer les conditions du travail par maison, sans commissions mixtes. Si les patrons triom-phaient sur ce point de la résistance des ouvriers, se serait pour ces derniers l'impossibilité d'établir un contrat collectif de travail et la fixation générale de prix de main-d'œuvre. Depuis le 7. avril les filateurs de coton sont rentrés dans les ateliers avec une augmentation de 3%. C'est un succès partiel. Les tisseurs de toile, auxquels le patrons, offrent une augmentation de 5% correspondant à la diminution de la durée de la journée, continuent la lutte.

Une Grève Originale.

Bien que leur organisation soit de création relativement récente, les travailleurs des ports, les dockers, les inscrits maritimes ont déjà réussi à obtenir des améliorations importantes de leurs conditions de travail: salaires plus élevés, réduction de la durée de la journée, respect de la personnalité ouvrière par les chefs de tout rang. Une de leurs dernières grèves; qui se déroula à Marseille, eut un certain retentissement. Ils réussirent, en effet, à cette époque, à suspendre tout le mouvement du port, et le gouvernement dut menacer d'envoyer des matelots de la marine de guerre pour former les équipages des navires marchands si les grévistes ne se montraient pas disposés à souscrire à une arbitrage. Cette décision des pouvoirs publics fut alors vivement approuvée par les armateurs.

Dernièrement, quelques officiers d'une compagnie marchande ayant molesté leurs équipages, ceux-ci quittèrent le bord et refusèrent ensuite de s'embarquer. Leur syndicat prononça l'interdit sur les bâtiments abandonnés et déclara qu'aucun marin ne reprendrait son service tant que les officiers incriminés resteraient chargés de les commander. Devant cette attitude résolue, les armateurs capitulèrent et changèrent les états major de leurs bateaux. Le conflit paraissait terminé, quand les fédérations des capitaines au long cours des officiers et des mécaniciens brevetés de la marine marchande relevèrent le gant à leur tour et se solidariserent avec leurs collègues renvoyés, en affirmant qu'aucun navire ne partirait tant qu'il ne serait pas réintégré dans leur emploi. Cette décision a reçu son application et au fur et à mesure de leur arrivée à Marseille, les navires sont désarmés et les équipages mis au repos. Voilà donc, de ce fait, les ouvriers du port en chômage par suite de l'arrêt complet des transactions commerciales par voie de mer et les relations interrompues avec la Corse, l'Algérie et la Tunisie. Le mouvement menaçant de s'étendre à d'autres villes maritimes, le gouvernement se préoccupe actuellement d'assurer le service postal à l'aide de navires de guerre et parle rien moins, puisque les matelots ne refusent pas de travailler, de mettre à la disposition des armateurs, les officiers des vaisseaux de l'Etat. En agissant ainsi il se conforme, d'ailleurs, à la ligne de conduite suivie par lui lors de la grève des marins. Mais il paraît que le cas n'est plus le même, car les armateurs repoussent nettement son concours, trop heureux de voir se prolonger un conflit qu'en sous-mains ils encouragent dans le dessin mal dissimulé d'y voir sombrer l'autorité du syndicat des inscrits maritimes. Les officiers en grève ont refusé d'accepter un arbitrage et les choses en sont là, mais les ouvriers sans travail pourraient bien se laisser rapidement d'une situation qui ne fait de victimes que dans leurs rangs et nul ne peut prévoir les conséquences qui pourraient résulter d'une action énergique de leur part. On conviendra que le cas n'est pas banal d'une association faisant grève pour imposer sa volonté aux patrons et d'une autre association se mettant ensuite en mouvement pour obtenir de ces mêmes patrons l'annulation des résultats obtenus par la première.

Une Convention Internationale de Travail.

La France et l'Italie viennent de signer une "Convention du Travail." Cet instrument diplomatique a une importance considérable pour le prolétariat des deux pays, moins parce qu'il instaure présentement que parce qu'il permet d'augurer pour l'avenir. De ce fait, une réglementation internationale du travail peut cesser aujourd'hui d'être considérée comme utopique et il est permis d'admettre comme possible et probable l'établissement prochain de certaines limites à la concurrence économique que se font les peuples entre eux, par suite de l'adoption de quelques règles restrictives à l'exploitation de la main-d'œuvre féminine et enfantine. En tout cas, il y a là un nouveau et très heureux précédent, car c'est en effet la première fois que deux gouvernements étrangers lient partie ensemble dans le but de réglementer d'un commun accord quelques-unes des conditions du travail dans leur sphère respective et se piquent d'émulation pour apporter à leur législation sociale toutes les améliorations qu'elle peut comporter.

Très peu d'ouvriers français franchissent les Alpes pour aller travailler en Italie; par contre, des centaines de travailleurs italiens viennent s'occuper en France. La nouvelle convention les mettra tous sur le même pied pour l'application des lois ouvrières et sociales, telle que celle qui régit les accidents du travail; ils sont de plus appelés à bénéficier éventuellement des lois soumises à l'étude du Parlement concernant les retraites ouvrières. L'Italie, de son côté, s'engage à instituer la réciprocité pour nos nationaux, à procéder à une limitation légale de la journée de travail basée sur les lois français et à donner son adhésion à toute conférence internationale convoquée pour étudier cette question à laquelle la France accepterait de participer. Le gouvernement suisse doit prochainement prendre cette initiative et convier tous les gouvernements à s'y représenter. Il n'y a pas lieu, je le répète, de s'illusionner sur les résultats immédiats de cette convention de travail, mais il n'en faut pas moins noter qu'elle est un premier pas vers une législation internationale du travail et, à ce titre seul, elle mérite d'être signalée ici.

Une Nouvelle Fédération.

Les cochers, les camionneurs, les employés du Métropolitain et de bateau-voyageurs, ceux des omnibus et tramways, en un mot tous les travailleurs occupés aux transports en commun, ont depuis longtemps constitués de très forts syndicats. Ils sont, aujourd'hui, en train de jeter les bases d'une vaste fédération des transports qui, si elle aboutit, formera du premier coup une des plus puissantes organisations ouvrières de France. Une commission a été nommée pour étudier la question et préparer un Congrès. S'il a lieu j'en enverrai le compte-rendu au CARPENTER.

GEORGES GUÉNARD.

PARIS, le 1. mai, 1904.

A Travers les Grèves.

Malgré de pressantes démarches et l'intervention du directeur du travail au ministère du commerce, la lutte est toujours très vive, à Lille, entre les ouvriers tisseurs et leurs patrons. Ces derniers persistent à refuser les augmentations demandées par les grévistes et, par dessus tout, la constitution d'une commission mixte chargée d'élaborer un tarif uniforme pour toute la localité. Le plus grave danger de cette résistance des patrons réside dans la situation qui va être faite aux tisseurs d'Armentières et d'Houplines, le 1. juin, date à laquelle les patrons qui leur ont donné satisfaction reprendront leur liberté d'action si les ouvriers n'ont pas réussi à faire accepter dans toute la région le tarif qu'ils ont imposé à la suite de leur grève victorieuse d'octobre dernier. Si par ailleurs l'éventualité venait à se produire, se serait vraisemblablement la reprise d'un mouvement général des travailleurs du textile dans tout le Nord de la France.

L'application de la loi de 10 heures motive encore quelques grèves dans certains centres moins importants, notamment à Amiens pour les teinturiers et à Fromelennes pour les métallurgistes. Mais il y a tout lieu de croire qu'une fois tous les renseignements centralisés, il sera permis de constater que le passage au dernier palier de la loi se sera fait sans trop d'embarras et qu'il en est résulté une sensible amélioration des conditions de travail des ouvriers intéressés.

La grève des officiers de marine marchande, qui de Marseille s'était étendue au Havre, à Dunterque, à Bordeaux, etc., et pesait lourdement sur les transactions de nos principaux ports de commerce, a pris fin par l'acceptation, par les inscrits maritimes, des conditions stipulées par les états-majors, c'est-à-dire la faculté laissée aux officiers de composer leurs équipages sans l'intervention ni le contrôle du syndicat des inscrits. C'est incontestablement atteint puisque le mouvement fomenté par eux avait surtout pour objet de réduire à néant l'organisation des ouvriers des ports laquelle sort de cette aventure plus forte et plus vigoureuse que jamais. Mais il se pourrait bien que les patrons n'aient gagné là que la première manche d'une partie malencontreusement engagée par eux et que les matelots ne tardent guère à prendre leur revanche. C'est égal, comme je vous l'écrivais le mois dernier, ce n'est pas une grève banale que celle de salariés, "continuant à toucher leurs appointements pendant leur grève," et agissant contre d'autres salariés pour les obliger à subir certaines exigences patronales et faire écrouler leur syndicat!

(A continuer.)

Le system syndicaliste est supérieure à tout autre system d'organisation et c'est le devoir de ceux qui le comprennent de l'expliquer à ceux qui ne le comprennent pas, et démontrer à eux qu'il est aussi le plus efficace.

"The Eight Hour Bill."

introduced more apropos. He also mentions about thirty other "pirate bands" that are known under various aliases, as protectors of American liberty. Mr. Davenport also stated that he thought he represented other interests. Perhaps he did. I do not doubt it. But it is evident to a casual observer that the firms he thought he represented were ashamed to let the general public know of their connections with him. I don't blame them.

To get down to business: Mr. Davenport states in part: "That an eight-hour work day means a ten hour wage," and then before he can get his second wind, adds, "the men want an opportunity of earning more than will be paid for eight hours of labor." He advances many arguments, but 99 per cent. of them were wholly irrelevant to the question at issue and should have been thrown out of the records. Mr. Davenport is a very bad "actor," and would hardly do as a first-class "end man" in a high-salaried minstrel show.

Other gentlemen, too numerous to mention, appeared before the committee and made statements but it is useless to repeat them—all were about on a par with the above. I might add that everything was discussed, from the price of the "raw material" that goes into the manufacture of shoe-strings to the price of a completed battleship, allowing for the silver service, library, etc., to be given by patriotic and enthusiastic citizens, and what effect the "Eight Hour Bill" would have on such staple (?) articles.

In reading the hearings before the committee, I expected every moment to learn that a "pink tea" had been given, but was agreeably disappointed. It was only natural to assume that, inasmuch as every other irrelevant thing or question was introduced.

Nearly every opponent of the bill was a unit in declaring that the enactment of the same would ruin our export trade.

A little over ten years ago the laboring men were working 10, 11, 12 and in many instances 13 hours per day. To-day the same men are working 8, 9 and in a very few of the industries 10 hours per day.

The statistical abstract of the United States, 1903, just issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor, wherein is tabulated the exports of the United States for the years 1893 and 1903, show the following:

1893, total exports$ 876,108,781
1903, total exports 1,484,681,995

Draw your own conclusions from the above, as to how our export trade has been affected during the last ten years by a reduction in the hours of toil.

Mr. James F. Grimes, of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, was a member of the Labor Legislative Committee of the American Federation of Labor, and that gentleman asked the General Officers of the U. B. to write to the Congressmen and Senators from their respective States, informing them that he was on the committee and that any courtesies extended to him would be appreciated. His request was complied with, and I might add that fully 95 per cent. of the Congressmen and Senators written to replied to the official that wrote, namely, General President Huber, General Secretary Duffy, and General Treasurer Neale, assuring them that it would be their pleasure to assist Mr. Grimes in any way they possibly could. I will not quote any names, but will give below a few extracts from the letters received, the originals of which are on file at the General Office.

EXTRACTS.

"I am sure that it will be my pleasure to assist Mr. Grimes in whatever way possible."

"You may rest assured that Mr. Grimes will have my assistance in any movement to better the condition of the wage-worker."

"I recognize the wage-worker as the backbone of this country, and anything that I can do to assist Mr. Grimes will be done freely and willingly."

The climax is reached in the one given below, and if the writer can show anything that he did for the cause of labor during the last session of Congress, I will appreciate the information:

"Allow me to say, without bombast, and with no desire to make political capital, that any man who aspires to the title should be proud to be called a friend of labor, and prouder still, to have labor his friend."

What do you think of that! Well, it still remains a fact that he did nothing for our cause.

The arguments advanced by the opponents of the bill were not logical; were not plausible; were not sensible, and the committee should have reported the bill favorably long before they decided to waive the responsibility by referring the matter to Secretary Cortelyou for investigation to ascertain what effect it would have on our export trade. Every one knows that the bill was practically killed by that course, and that the committee is responsible for it.

Each Congressman and Senator written to will receive a copy of this article, and perhaps, but I doubt it, they will take heed of the "writing on the wall." It may be possible that at some future date we will be able to show them the "error of their ways."

None can dispute what I have written, and if there is any verification needed, the files at the General Office are open for inspection.

The Scab Like the Turtle.

Zoologists tell us that the turtle is the only animal that never learns anything by experience. If you put a red-hot poker in front of a turtle he will walk straight up to it and burn his feet or nose. No matter how often he gets burned, the turtle never learns to avoid the red-hot poker. The brain of a turtle is smaller than the brain of a mouse, and much less active.

Now, a "scab" is simply a human turtle. He is a creature who never learns by experience. Although non-unionism has never raised wages or shortened hours, and although unionism has always done both of these, the turtle workman never gets wise. He continues to refuse to bear a part of the social burden, and fights for the right to bear his own heavy burden all alone. The turtle is not the most stupid animal in the world. —Ex.

Floor Beams Made of Concrete.

A new system of concrete flooring has recently been patented by M. Siegwart, an architect, of Lucerne, Switzerland. It consists of hollow tubes or beams of mortar which are laid on the supporting walls without planking. Says The Technical World, in a descriptive article on the subject:

"By this method, the work of the builder is greatly facilitated, as a number of floors can be laid in a short time by ordinary laborers, and several floors can be used at once for working upon, thus doing away with scaffolding.

"Another advantage claimed for the Siegwart system is that beams made in a factory are protected against unfavorable weather conditions, such as frost or rain, during the time the mortar is setting, and it is thus comparatively easy to secure uniformity. The beams made at Lucerne have a uniform breadth of 9.84 inches, and are manufactured in five sizes, . . . according to the length of span and load. The size of the iron rods in the beams is between 1.96 and 3.9 inches, and usually six such rods are used in each beam. Two of these rods are laid parallel with the under face of the beam, and the other four are bent upward in the form of a knot at the ends in order to strengthen their supporting power. The proportion of cement to coarse sand used in manufacture is as 1 to 4. The beams, being made hollow, have the same strength as tho they were solid, with a great reduction in weight. On account of being hollow, they are more easily heated. Their sides are corrugated so that the cement used in joining them can enter the spaces and form a solid mass.

"The manner of laying the beams together is exactly the same as in the case of wooden beams. They are made in different lengths, and, besides being used in floors, they can be employed in the construction of roofs, terraces, and staircase supports; also in walls where there is a side pressure, as in warehouses, coal bunkers, etc. It has been demonstrated that these beams can support a load four or five times as great as can the ordinary wooden beams.

"The process of manufacture is very simple as carried on at the Siegwart Beam Factory in Lucerne and in other European centers. The beams are made not singly, but in layers eight feet in breadth."

The advantages of this flooring are said to be its great supporting power, its safety from fire, and the greater ease and speed in building secured by its use. The beams insure freedom from excess of heat and cold, on account of their hollow form; the requisite thickness of floors is reduced; and, finally, they can be used as a heating floor, by sending warm air through them.—The Literary Digest.

The First Monument to Trades Unionism.

The first monument to trades unionism was erected recently at Melbourne, Australia. It is called the "Eight-Hour Monument," as it is in commemoration of the eight-hour system, which was inaugurated in Australia forty-eight years ago. The monument is a tall marble pillar, surmounted on an oblong block holding a globe and three large figures "8" are engraved on the block.

Dangers of White Lead.

German papers state that the French government is at present considering the question of the use of white lead and other lead mixtures for painting houses. A committee of the Chamber of Deputies has been appointed to investigate the matter, and Mr. Breton, one of the experts, has been authorized to publish the results of his investigation in pamphlet form. He condemns the addition of white lead to paints and all colors containing it, declaring them to be poisonous in a large degree, both for the workmen and for the inhabitants of a house painted with lead colors. He recommends the use of zinc white instead, which, for surfaces exposed to the sea air, is also much more practical. He expresses the opinion that the absolute disuse of white lead has become an imperative necessity.—Coast Seamen's Journal.

PREPARE NOW FOR LABOR DAY

ORDERs for Badges intended to be used on Labor Day should be placed sufficiently early to permit of the manufacture of the same. As this is an occasion for which thousands of organizations throughout the country are having special badges made. It is advisable to send orders in considerably ahead of time and thus prevent disappointments or delays.

The New Official Combination PARADE AND FUNERAL

Multiple Badge

Containing the beautiful lithographic reproduction in colors of the UNION LABEL in the bar and the emblem of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, also lithographed in colors, in the medallion.

THE MULTIPLE BADGE

shown herewith is a genuine departure from anything now used in the shape of a reversible design. We particularly commend this design in view of the fact that it is adapted for use in three different ways: a Meeting Room Badge, a Parade Badge, a Memorial or Funeral Badge. The larger engraving shows the parade side of the badge complete with metal part. The memorial or funeral side (though we do not show it by illustration) is the reverse of the parade side, and is made with black ribbon with wording embossed in silver. The small illustration represents the metal part detached from the complete badge, and shows how this part may be worn alone. When a badge is wanted for parade or gala purposes the complete design may be used, and when a small badge with dignified effect is wanted the metal part may be used alone by simply detaching it from the badge proper. Whichever part is used there is a complete badge, and we are satisfied that the combining of three distinct uses makes it superior to any reversible design on sale.

Any desired wording can be placed in the top bar. We can furnish officers' titles in the panel on officers' badges, without extra charge. We can also make any desired changes in the wording on the ribbon parts. The braid and fringe are furnished in gold, the metal parts in gilt. In making the badge reversible, the bar is detached at the top and the ribbon part reversed. A loop in the ribbon at the top of both sides makes it an easy matter to change the badge so it can be worn in any way desired.

BOWLING GREEN, KY.—In the anticipation of difficulties to arise between our union and the contractors on account of our trade demands, we would request all carpenters to stay away from this locality until further notice.

* * *

CHARLEROI, PA.—Business in our trade is fairly good at present, all our men are employed and all work is being done by union men. As we enjoy the eight-hour day you will please place Charleroi, Pa., on the list of eight-hour cities and towns.

* * *

ST. MARY'S, PA.—Business is at a standstill here, and the number of unemployed is growing daily. There is no opening here at this time and prospects for this season's trade are very gloomy. Traveling carpenters are earnestly advised to keep away.

* * *

FORT WAYNE, IND.—Work is dull in this locality and conditions in general afford no encouragement for traveling carpenters to come here; they are advised to give this place a wide berth; many of the resident carpenters are utterly failing to secure employment.

* * *

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO.—Carpenters contemplating coming to this place will find work very dull. Many of our home men are vainly hunting for a job. Traveling brothers will act wisely and confer a favor upon us by remaining away, pending a revival of trade.

* * *

STRUTHERS, O.—Although our L. U., 1518, has as yet not been heard of in our journal, we are very much alive. We had some difficulty with one of our contractors, Frank Shafer by name, he working his men nine hours per day at $2.50, while the union scale is $3.00 for eight hours' work. We have placed him on the unfair list. Work is exceedingly dull at present and carpenters will do well by shunning this place.

BOSTON, MASS.—There is no work in the market at this time, and material being very high it is assigned as one of the excuses of the stagnation of business in the building line. All carpenters are requested to keep away from this city, pending a revival of trade.

* * *

TUXEDO, N. Y.—The firm of Mead & Taft, stated as unfair in the April CARPENTER, having acceded to our demands and adopted the eight-hour rule, has been placed on the fair list and peaceful and amicable relations between the firm and our union have been established.

* * *

SULPHUR, I. T.—Most of our home men were compelled to leave this place on account of the extreme slackness of work. There is no show for any traveling carpenters, union or non-union men; both would do well to keep away as there is nothing doing here and no work likely to turn up soon.

* * *

ABERDEEN, S. D.—Business here is at a standstill and especially work in the building line is very slack. We have more men here than work; a number of our brothers are walking the streets, which fact should be a warning to traveling brothers; those coming here will meet with a similar fate.

* * *

AKRON, O.—Carpenters are requested to steer clear of this place, as our home men can take care of all the work on hand and some to spare. The contractors are making strenuous efforts to down unionism in this locality, an influx of men at this time would work an injury to our membership and our organization. Remain away.

* * *

FRANKFORT, IND.—Trade in this place is in a deplorable condition; all our men are out of employment and are confronted with great hardship unless business opens up somewhat shortly. At present there is no sign of work coming our way, and we would ask all carpenters to give Frankfort a wide berth until further notice.

* * *

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Our Millwrights' Local Union 1519 was organized about one year ago under the U. B., and is meeting with grand success. We are taking in a few members every month. We are working eight hours at the rate of 40 cents an hour. Work is coming in rather slow at present, but we expect a change for the better shortly.

* * *

SEATTLE, WASH.—We desire to give publicity to the action of W. E. Fuller and his expulsion from L. U. 131, of this city. W. E. Fuller was in arrears when recently taking a contract. He promised to pay up his dues and employ union men exclusively. He did not live up to his promise. He now employs non-union men only and was promptly expelled for his perfidious action.

* * *

LAURENS, S. C.—Most of our men are still walking the streets but we are in hopes of an early revival of trade and of being in better shape soon, if we can keep floating carpenters away from here. The Laurens Cotton Mill is going to build a fine house. This concern is opposed to union labor and proposes to hire scabs to work sixty-six hours per week or eleven hours per day.

* * *

PORTLAND, ORE.—It is desirable indeed that Eastern carpenters would understand that this coast is simply overrun with men in search of employment, with no work whatever in sight. The coming here of more idle men will only have a tendency of reducing wages and increasing the hours. We wish that all men in the building line and carpenters particularly will pay heed to our warning and stay away from this coast.

* * *

WEST MINERAL, KAN.—Our Local Union, 140, is getting along splendidly. We now have a membership of 36 and some applications to be acted on at next meeting. We have practically all carpenters in town on our roll and indications point to further increase in membership as soon as trade has assumed its normal condition. We are expecting a brisk season and West Mineral is a good place at this time for traveling brothers to stop.

* * *

GREENSBORO, N. C.—Notice is hereby given to all carpenters that we are in anticipation of a hard fight with our contractors, making it imperative for all craftsmen to stay away from this locality. We have been and are yet subjected to a condition of slavery, working ten hours per day, sixty hours per week for whatever the contractors feel disposed to give us. Being determined of at last throwing off the yoke of bondage and to secure the right to say what we will sell our labor for, carpenters can greatly assist us in our endeavor by keeping away and influence others to do likewise.

* * *

BEVERLY, MASS.—We would warn all carpenters against the R. L. Fosburg Co.'s advertisements for men, which are being circulated through the papers in all parts of this country. This firm has the contract on the United Machine Co.'s building, under course of erection, and work their men nine hours per day, while our trade rules call for eight hours. Beverly is a strictly eight-hour city with the exception of the work contracted by this unfair firm. Trade is unusually dull here for this season of the year.

* * *

MADISONVILLE, KY.—This is a good place for union men and all carpenters to stay away from. Trade is in such a deplorable condition that we have refrained from making any demand whatever upon our contractors. Indeed, we must be glad to secure work under the old scale, which is $2 per day of nine hours. We refuse to work with non-union men, but as we have quite a number of them here we find it a difficult task to get the contractors to observe our trade rules. While we are making every possible effort to maintain our organization intact, migrating carpenters would certainly give use a lift by keeping aloof from this vicinity until conditions have improved.

* * *

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—Two of the best, most successful and instructive meetings ever held in labor circles here, were held by L. U. 224 on April 18th and 25th. Bro. W. H. Burgess, the Southern General Organizer, was the honored guest at both occasions, and his addresses were very fitting and instructive and his remarks very forceful and to the point. It is the sentiment of every one of our members that no better man could be entrusted with organizing work than Bro. Burgess. He is possessed of a rare ability of pushing our movement and of making every one familiar with the laws, aims, ambitions and workings of organized labor.

CENTRAL CITY, KY.—Owing to the probability of a strike of mine workers at this place there is scarcely any work being done so far, and the outlook is for a dull season at the best.

* * *

CORBIN, KY.—There is scarcely enough work here for resident carpenters. Trade is very dull, and anyone coming here at this time will certainly be disappointed. Migrating brothers are advised to stay away from Corbin, Ky.

* * *

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—We must earnestly request all carpenters to remain away from this locality. Trade is dull, and as a consequence work very scarce and present indications point to a continuous depression of business all season.

* * *

MEYERSDALE, GA.—Trade in the building line is very slack here, and aside of this some new contractors have started up who are trying to break our nine hours per day rule. Carpenters are urgently called on to remain away until further notice.

* * *

LEAVENWORTH, KAN.—All members of the U. B. are earnestly requested to remain away from this locality. Work is very slack and no show for union men anyway, most of the work having been awarded to unfair contractors. Stay away, brothers, and give us a chance to bring them to time.

* * *

NEW ALBANY, IND.—Having promised in March CARPENTER to give further notice of conditions in this city, we would state at this time that our trouble with the contractors still exists, and our agreement as yet lacking their signatures. We urgently call on all traveling brothers to give use a lift by avoiding this place.

* * *

SPOKANE, WASH.—Members of the U. B. are coming here by the dozens on clearance cards every meeting, and although there is considerable of work here, yet there are more than enough carpenters to take care of it. In fact there are quite a few of them walking the streets at this time, and it would be well for carpenters to stay away from this place.

* * *

MONMOUTH, ILL.—We are having some trouble here this season. But few of the contractors have signed our agreement and there is a number of non-union men in this city to encourage the ones that are opposing the union. We are in the fight to win, however, and urgently request all carpenters to keep away from Monmouth. There are plenty of men here to do all the work there is. Our demand is for nine hours a day and 30 cents per hour.

* * *

STRAWN, TEX.—General Organizer, Bro. S. J. Kent, paid us a visit on April 21st, and through his very able and appreciative address succeeded in stirring up much interest and enthusiasm among our members. Bro. Kent has done a great deal of good here, as he has given us sound advice as to the better upholding of union principles and aroused our sympathy, not only for our own craft, but for all others. May we be blessed again with his presence, is the prayer of us all.

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.—Some time ago charges were preferred against Howard J. White for embezzlement of five dollars. He failed to appear for trial, was considered guilty by the committee and expelled from the union. Since that time he has offered to make good any deficit which the union may claim against him, and in consideration of this fact L. U. 236 wishes to exonerate him from the stigma of expulsion, and by unanimous vote have given consent to his readmission into the U. B. of C. and J. of A.

* * *

COLUMBUS, S. C.—All building tradesmen are requested to steer clear of this city, as we are having trouble on what little work has been started up this season. Most of the men in every branch of the building line are walking the streets. We have virtually been locked out all of the year, the master builders having put up a strong fight against all organized labor, which has resulted in the conditions here above stated. We hope all men in the building line will pay heed to our request and stay away.

* * *

CHANUTE, KAN.—Our little town is overrun with carpenters, and union men will act wisely by remaining away. Since April 1st our members work eight hours, receiving $2.50 per day, while the non-union men work nine and ten hours for less pay as a general thing. Still our union is holding its own; we have the best mechanics in our fold, who have no difficulty in securing employment, provided such is not lacking. At present trade is dull in this place and traveling brothers should stay away.

* * *

GALION, O.—We desire to call the attention of the members of our U. B. to an appeal to organized labor, issued by the Iron Molders' Union of Crestline, O., urging all workingmen and their friends to discriminate against the product of the Schill Bros. Co., manufacturing stoves, ranges and furnaces. The firm has locked out all their men because of refusal to sign a 20 cents' reduction in wages. All offers of the iron molders to arbitrate the matter in dispute have been rejected by the firm and we would ask all union men to leave their products severely alone.

* * *

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—Trade is rather dull at present and lots of members out of employment. The bosses taking advantage of the situation, are endeavoring to effect a reduction in our wage scale. We are glad to state that the spirit of resistance among our men against any attempt in this direction is so strong that doubtlessly every effort will be made to maintain, if not advance, the present standard. Unfortunately some of our best mechanics are on the outside, but we are at this moment trying to get them in line. As soon as this is accomplished we shall have things the way we want them. In the meantime we would ask all carpenters to stay away.

FRESNO, CAL.—Owing to the depressed condition of trade here and the dullness of business in general, most of the carpenters are idle. We have no trouble otherwise this moment, but we are in anticipation of difficulties to arise soon, as the Citizens' Alliance has begun to wage war on the cooks and waiters and are boasting of breaking up every union in Fresno. However, we are not in the least disturbed and are ready for the fight if it has to come. We would earnestly call upon all carpenters to keep away from this city for the next few months.

* * *

TORONTO, ONT.—While there is quite an amount of building going on in this city there is more than enough men to do the work. We are being flooded with immigrants from the old country to such an extent that it is becoming serious and a distinct menace to our own men. With the time required to adjust the losses caused by the recent fire and the passing of new Building By-Laws, it will take three months before there will be any work for carpenters in the burned down district. Carpenters contemplating coming here for work will only be disappointed.

* * *

ILION, N. Y.—We would warn all carpenters and bench hands not to come to our little city at present. Builders and contractors are trying to destroy unionism in this vicinity by hiring nonunion men, while union men are walking the streets. The following contractors have been placed on the unfair list: A. F. Dennis, Cunrod Klipple, E. M. Cole, F. A. Harter, Walter & R. Green, of Ilion; F. Husted, of Frankfort; House & Christman and Willard Smith, of Mohawk. We would request all brothers to assist us by paying no attention to advertising and communications from these contractors.

* * *

MINNEAPOLIS, MIN.—Serious trouble appears to be brewing between employers and employees in the building industry of this city, as a result of a strike ordered by the Building Trades Council, and still on, against a prominent general contractor and member of the Builders Exchange, because of his employing five non-union carpenters. The Builders Exchange has sent a letter to the twelve principal unions notifying them of the passage by that body of the following resolution: "That after May 25, 1904, so long as your union is recognized you will be required to work on any job where asked to, regardless of who the other workmen may be." This resolution unmistakably means that the Builders' Exchange is trying to enforce "the open shop." While all efforts will be used by the B. T. C. and the unions involved in the controversy to avert a strike, a clash will surely follow unless the employers recede from the position they have taken, and we would call on all carpenters to remain away from this city until the trouble is over.

The rich go to war, but the poor do the fighting.

Proposed amendments to our General Constitution should be forwarded to the General office without delay for publication in THE CARPENTER.

People are commonly so much occupied in pointing out faults in those ahead of them, as to forget that some are descanting on theirs in like manner.—Dillwyn.

Dreamland Park and Luna Park, Coney Is and, N. Y., Unfair.

The U. B. of Greater New York have placed a boycott on the amusement parks at Coney Island, known as the Dreamland Park and Luna Park. They were both put up by the rankest kind of scabs. The men were paid as high as $1.25 per day for ten hours, and they worked two shifts, night and day. These parks are now catering to the public and are extensively advertising excursions thereto. The work on these parks was scab for all trades. The parties at the head of these enterprises are ex-Senator Reynolds, the Republican politician; ex-Senator Patrick McCarren, and Congressman Timothy D. Sullivan, the latter two Democratic politicians. We trust that brothers visiting New York City will avoid the above mentioned scab parks.

Where Is John Bailey?

John Bailey, a carpenter and member of the U. B. of St. Louis, Mo., left that city on May 12, 1903, for Denver, Colo., promising his widowed aunt at the time that he would write to her, but she never heard of him and is very much worried at his silence. Members or readers knowing of the present whereabouts of John Bailey will kindly communicate with the General Office.

Annual Picnic and Games of L. U. 774, New York City.

Local Union 774, New York City, will hold their annual picnic and games on July 2nd in Brommer's Union Park, 133rd street and Willis avenue. Dancing, games of the usual order and bowling contest will be the features of afternoon and evening. The Greater New York District Council has arranged to have the grand prize drawing for the purpose of fitting up new headquarters, take place at this picnic.
